The Spider Woman.

SHORT STORY FOR THE DAY.

When Lydia Remyng walked up the aisle of the old church in Paris I said to myself that I had never seen a more beautiful woman—beautiful not only with the beauty of dark, long eyes and yellow hair, straight nose and oval, sensuous lips, but with the beauty of a faultless figure, tall, willowy and strong, the beauty of health which showed in the clear stream that pulsed redly under her white skin. She moved with an easy, sinuous grace that reminded me in some strange way of a tigress pacing her native jungle stealthily scenting for prey. I had met Mrs. Remyng that winter in the salons of acquaintance and had become a little interested in her. I am something of a student of types. The interest, however, was one sided. She remembered me now and then with a faint nod of recognition, but paid no further attention to me. I was used to this because I am sallow and sparse bearded, nearly 50 years old and one of my shoulders is higher than the other. I noticed that she seemed attracted by, and attracted, young, full-blooded men of the sort we call "beefy." They are not especially intellectual, but display tailoring well, and fill up gaps in social parties. No one whom I had asked seemed to know much about her except that she had been some years abroad, was under 30, had plenty of money and was the widow of an American manufacturer of iron.

Bascom Canning, in a knot of black-coated friends, stood at the altar waiting for her. He was a big, young fellow, poor, an art student and not capable. He was envied because of his success in marrying a rich woman. We thought it to be a good match for him. He was too lazy for other endeavor and would have starved over his pictures. He had pursued her fiercely and sharp tongued females in our set said she had met him more than half way. At any rate there was no doubt of their mutual fascination. He had been with her almost constantly in the days just before the wedding. A stream of light fell on him from a glass in the high roof and I thought he was pale. Generally his face was red. I chuckled and whispered to Dr. Raoul Armand, my very dear friend:

"The marriage of the millions scares him."

There was nothing in the ceremony to distinguish it from other ceremonies of the kind. The groom was the more nervous, but that is usual. He dropped the ring when trying to put it on her finger and she looked at him steadily. He grew paler. Then they came back down the aisle together and were driven away. I got a good look at her face as she passed. She did not look happy so much as satisfied. It was the kind of look that comes to a hungry man at table when the first steaming dishes are brought on. It was joy in her way, but the joy of expectancy.

Dr. Armand took my arm and we walked down the the street together. I ought to say here that he is a physician without practice. He has money and devotes his time to study and pursuit of all sorts of outlandish subjects. He has a book in press now called "[illegible]" that will educate and shock people. He said to me:—

"Canning is a strong young fellow, and I am sorry for him."

"He has a beautiful woman and wealth," I answered naturally enough. "Why the sorrow?"

A stationer's store was near. He walked into it, took up a sheet of paper, wrote on it, sealed it in an envelope and handed it to me.

"Read that six months hence," he said.

Then he called a cab and drove away. I was used to his eccentricities, put the envelope in my pocket and went about my business. Succeeding months I spent in London. Returning to Paris in late autumn I got my old quarters and unpacked my trunks. In shaking a coat the envelope fell out. I opened it and read:

"He will be dead before winter."

"Too much absinthe!" I said in reference to the doctor, and threw the paper in the grate. That evening at the Trois Freres restaurant I glanced through a copy of the Temps. Straightway and unconsciously my eye fell on the death notices and I saw:

"Died at Bigorre, on Tuesday, Nov. 18, Bascom Canning, in the twenty-ninth year of his age. The disease was inanition, complicated with failure of nerve force. The remains were interred at Bigorre."

I went to see Armand, the paper in my pocket. He gritted his teeth together savagely and muttered a mild French oath. Then he took to striding up and down the room. Then he stopped in front of me and said:

"The woman is in Paris. I saw her today out in the Bois. No charge can be preferred against her, yet she must be [illegible]. Canning was her seventh victim and she is not yet middle aged. Luckily in France we do things differently from you Americans and English. I have some influence of the chief of the secret service bureau."

"But how—how?" I stuttered. "Why—"

Armand laid a thin white hand on my arm and stooped over me, speaking rapidly and intensely:

"My friend, the woman is a human spider. It is not her fault and it is not the spider's fault but we kill spiders and she must be killed. She is the fifth recorded instance of this type. I have known of this, this—what shall I call it?—physical idiosyncrasy, peculiarity, abnormal function for three years and have forborne to proceed against her because I wished positive proof. She has married three men here in Paris. The man before the American millionaire was a Russian. Each of her slain has died from inanition and nerve trouble.

"Close association with her is fatal. Consciously or unconsciously—I am inclined to think consciously—she takes life and vigor from another as a spider sucks the blood of insects he entangles. The vital force of a man goes out to her steadily but constantly. The process of this strength-transference is slow but sure. While the victim wanes she increases in vitality. During her periods of widowhood she decreases in weight and mental force. If you saw her six months before she married Canning you must have noticed her gain power in the church. The devitalizing of the man had begun already. I cannot explain this. No one can explain it. It violates all known physical and mental laws. I know only that it exists.

"This kind of woman has lived occasionally since the beginning of our race. She has given rise to many legends. It is possible that in time science will arrive at ability to detect them in infancy and [illegible] before they reach a capacity for harm."

Lydia Remyng Canning was arrested that night. She did not seem alarmed or surprised. The arrest was secret. She was not told of any charge against her, she seemed unwilling to ask. Confined in a private sanitarium on a patient whose mind and health had failed, she was subjected to constant surveillance by Armand and a [illegible] of brother physicians. They noted her as carefully as they would have noted a wild animal of rare species dying in a cage. Rich foods had no power to sustain her, rich wines no power to stimulate. More than once the experiment of holding her hands was tried. On such occasions she always brightened; while the physician who volunteered felt himself [illegible] and weakened. From him to her was a strong, steady outflow of vitality. She never complained. Evidently she recognized the justice of her ending. She died within a year, faded to a mere shadow. Truly they do things differently in France.

THE NEGOTIATIONS ARE DELAYED

New York, Nov. 4.—The hitch in the negotiations for Miss Stone's release arises from two causes: First, the fierce antagonism between United States Diplomatic Agent Dickinson and Russian Minister Bakhmetoff; second, the missionary and diplomatic disinclination to accede to the brigands' terms, though moderated, says the Samakov correspondent of the Journal and Advertiser. The relations between M. Bakhmetoff and Mr. Dickinson are strained to the breaking point. The former, being friendly to Bulgaria, does not want his effort to finish the final transaction on Bulgarian soil. Mr. Sarth, a Macedonian student at the American Institute at Samakov, one of the agents sent to negotiate with the brigands, has returned from Meleng. He reports that the brigands consider Mr. Dickinson's money offer as too small. They say that they do not want to agree—to terms that would disgrace them with their brothers.

Discussing the amount of ransom, Missionary Baird, purser of the Samakov Institute, says:

"If the brigands get a quarter of what they still ask, bands will spring up like mushrooms, Samakov itself bloodhounds. Miss Stone would get will furnish many and Bulgaria will be ruined. The brigands began negotiations with us by asking twice Miss Stone's weight in gold. Even a fourth of this sum is preposterous, if the Bulgarians had either trackers or be spending her sixty first day with the brigands."

IS MISS STONE DEAD?

New York, Nov. 4.—[illegible] student, who was with the American missionary when she was captured by brigands in Turkey, together with Mrs. Tsilka, has written a letter, in which he expresses the opinion that Miss Stone is dead though there is not the slightest ground for believing that such is the case. According to this letter, the snow in the mountains into which Miss Stone and her companion were taken by their captors was three feet deep three weeks ago, at the time the letter was written. Even in the summer time the snow upon the highest summits of these mountains does not melt. The first snowfall usually comes at about the middle of September, and by the middle of October the mountain passes are absolutely closed to travel. It was the conviction among Miss Stone's friends in Samakov, Bulgaria, three weeks ago that she would not possibly have survived the rigors of her captivity until that date.

According to the letter of Ivan Baduloff, Consul-General Dickinson has retarded the release of Miss Stone seriously. It is said that Mr. Dickinson by his criticism of the Bulgarian Government has antagonized the Government. It is understood in Samakov that the brigands who were in immediate charge of the captive were under positive instructions to take her life at the first indication of the probability of a skirmish with the troops.

It is true that in the department of mechanical engineering our American technical schools lead the world. Europe is sending her boys to them in considerable numbers. But taking the field of technical education as a whole the United States has need of more schools. There are not a dozen polytechnics in the entire country with endowments exceeding $100,000. The largest of them are the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, with an endowment of $4,000,000; the Armour Institute, with one of $3,000,000; the Pratt Institute, the Cooper Union and the [illegible] School of Applied Science, with endowments averaging $2,000,000 apiece.

Pittsburg's institute, with its endowment of $10,000,000, will represent a larger investment of capital in technical education than the combined endowments of all the distinctly technical institutes now existing in the country. [illegible] a truly splendid contribution to the practical branch of technical education.

AIRSHIPS IN DEMAND

Paris, Nov. 5.—A competition of aeroplanes is already [illegible] under the patronage of the International Aeronautic Committee and the Aero Club, to take place at the Parc des Princes, Auteuil, on November 15.

The programme which is very varied, includes flying machines [illegible] air, to carry an aeronaut [illegible] fixed flying alone; also navigable parachutes.

Two challenge cups are offered by the Auto-Velo, one for aerial apparatus propelled by mechanism; the other, for the best scientific kite on a string.

If any proof were wanted of the activity prevailing in the aeronautic world, it would be found in the orders for machines for airships received by M. [illegible], constructor of M. Santos-Dumont. These include [illegible] power machine for M. [illegible], M. Lisboa, Ambassador at St. Petersburg, and M. [illegible], Brazilian Deputy; a twelve horse power machine for the Comte [illegible]; a five horse power for M. Hériot, and two twenty-four horse power machines for M. Philippi, of the Vienna [illegible] Club.

WILL GREAT BRITAIN [illegible]

London, Nov. 4.—The National Review of London, suggests an Anglo-Russian Alliance with this as a basis of agreement:

1. British control of Egypt guaranteed; Russia's "historic mission" in the Balkans assented to.

2. A trade outlet for Russia by railway to the Persian Gulf; Russian recognition of the British protectorate in Afghanistan.

3. Japan's "influence" in Corea, Russia's "in" Chinese Manchuria and Britain's in the Yangtse Valley conceded.

If the natives of these countries must in any case be "assimilated," this looks like a reasonable business proposition. There is really no reason why the Bear and the Lion should not amicably divide the prey instead of quarrelling over it. The suggestion is made under conditions that make it a semi-Ministerial "feeler" to ascertain in advance of action popular sentiment upon so weighty a matter.

The union of England and Russia would mean a lasting peace. It would settle the Eastern question for good, and remove cause for war.

The Paris Figaro does not regard the matter complacently, and announces that a treaty of this kind is not practicable.

The [illegible] treaty clearly indicates that the purpose of it is to throw a spray of very cold water into Berlin and, at the same time, to remind St. Petersburg that, after all, the British Lion is not so black as he has been painted, largely with a German pot and brush. The growing hostility of the Kaiser's Government to that of Great Britain is reviewed, the statement is made that Germany is already stronger on the sea than either Russia or France, and the rather remarkable question is offered, that, after all is said and done, Russia would rather see England mistress of the briny deep than Germany.

It is admitted that there is no insuperable difficulty to prevent England and Russia from arriving at a mutual understanding; that the present Czar's father was anxious for one and why should not the son be? On Russia's own terms, we have not a doubt that Nicholas would be only too glad to divide things with his uncle; but the terms might be rather high. However, John Bull has become used of late to paying dearly for his whistle and that might not stand in the way. The [illegible] article proposes a specific [illegible] which is highly worth consideration. It is not pitched in the jingo key, that we have been wont to hear from British voices when singing songs of defiance to the avid and untamed Muscovite. There is nothing in it like "While we're Britons true the Russians shan't have Constantinople!"

On the contrary, Russia may have a [illegible], in the view of the [illegible] writers, and let bygones be bygones. For example, they say that if Russia will abstain from any attempt to dislocate that status quo in Egypt, why should not she have her destined way in the Balkans? If Russia would be good and not bother British interests along the shores of the Persian Gulf, why not co-operate with her to develop railway connection between the Caspian and that Gulf, and why not give her a [illegible]? Again, if Russia would consent to give Japan a free hand in Korea, she might be permitted to fix her Manchurian and Mongolian position by direct negotiations with China.

It sounds like a pretty scheme of conciliation, and has the aroma of retirement from the [illegible] attitude which the Lion has maintained toward the Bear ever since the latter began to get his growth. If the London journal be inspired, as gossip has it, we shall hear more about it. The astute diplomatists of St. Petersburg are always open to business.

A PRINCELY GIFT TO PITTSBURG CITY

New York, Nov. 5.—The largest educational [illegible] of the year will be Andrew Carnegie's gift to Pittsburg of a great polytechnic institute, at a cost of $12,000,000, including an endowment of $10,000,000. This will far exceed the largest endowment of any American university or college, excepting only Girard.

Technical education is increasingly demanded by all the industrial nations. Until within a few years Germany and France, particularly the former country, have given more attention to technical instruction than the United States. Even England, though far behind Germany in this respect, has of late shown great [illegible] in this direction. London has established twelve great polytechnics, each giving instruction in special industries and trades, besides a Central School of [illegible]

A MARVELLOUS MEDICINE

"No Cure, No Pay," is the Newest Proposal of the Proprietors of Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—We make the following proposal to the readers of the Times: To any one who is a subject of rheumatism (no matter how long standing) or any blood disease, as enumerated below, and will give Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills a fair trial and do not find a perfect cure, we will refund the money paid for the pills. If no substantial improvement is observed, we will in addition, pay $10 (in cash) on satisfactory evidence being supplied us to this effect.

We have yet to know of a single case where these wonderful pills have not been almost entirely successful in effecting a cure. CANADA CHEMICAL CO.

Ex-Ald. Bailey, St. John's, writes: "I cannot speak too highly of Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills. They worked a miracle in my case, and cured me after many years of suffering. I do not think their equal is to be obtained."

Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills are a positive and certain cure for la grippe, rheumatism, asthma, paralysis, catarrh, eczema, coughs, backache, indigestion, all stomach and liver troubles, female complaints, even when the disease having been standing for many years, the most stubborn cases will yield. Price 50 cents per box. For sale by Ormond & Walsh. The Canada Chemical Company will forfeit $10 for any case that these pills do not help.

Dr. Clarke's Sure Cure for Catarrh, and Dr. Clarke's Sure Cure for Eczema same price. $10 will be paid for any case they will not permanently cure.

LOST ALL TRACE OF BYGONE DAYS

New York, Nov. 4.—Fifteen years in institutions for the feeble-minded have made a psychological marvel of Mary L. Lake, who has returned to the neighborhood of her old home on Staten Island, which she only remembers vaguely.

Treated as one of unsound mind for years, pronounced violently insane two months ago, she rambles about the grounds of the Richmond County Almshouse, still trembling with happiness over her release. Physicians have declared her sane, and added that she shows no trace of having ever been feeble-minded, and kind-hearted men and women have taken her case in hand.

Just what is her condition of mind would require the study of a scientist to discover. She reads eagerly, writes well, uses good English and talks rationally.

Most striking are Mary Lake's eyes. They are unusually large and vividly blue, and search unceasingly for new wonders. Her face is thin and pale. Her hair is flaxen at the temples, shading into light brown in the coils of the braid in which she wears it looped at her neck. Her figure is slight, and even in the coarse blue habit she wears she carries herself well.

But there is something uncanny in the young woman's face. The wide eyes and the peculiarly starved mind behind them seem to reflect her experiences in the New York Custodial Asylum, in Newark, of which she tells straightforwardly, and yet almost without emotion.

Here is a mind apparently healthy and pronounced sound by physicians. It is stored with the knowledge of the rudiments of education. Yet all of the world is strange to it. The commonest things of life are wonders. The names of the flowers, cities, even the towns of Staten Island where the girl's childhood was spent, are like the reading of a history of a strange land.

Behind her is the shadow of a crime which her father committed in New York, and for which he was sentenced for ten years in Sing Sing prison in 1888. It broke up a family and scattered five children so widely that only two of them know each other.

LIBERTY OF SPEECH

The liberty of speech is so complete in all parts of the British empire that a man can praise the enemies of his country, denounce the conduct of the British army in the field, express sentiments which in any other country, would entitle him to be tried for treason. This is a grand feature about our constitution. The freedom is absurd, of course, but the very abuse makes for the stability of the empire. The Irish Nationalists inveigh against England, and pray for the success of the Boers, and nothing happens. The anarchist burrows in the heart of London, or foams at the mouth in Hyde Park, and no man regards him. The religious orders from France which hold up England to scorn, invade the country which they hate, and nobody is disturbed. Mr. Bourassa pours contempt upon British statesmen, denounces the war in South Africa, insists that his countrymen should have neither part nor lot in the common display of the empire, and we smile indulgently. Mr. Bourassa has a perfect right to his opinions. He may disapprove of Imperialism; he may object to the Boer war; he may regard Mr. Chamberlain as responsible for the precipitation of that conflict. Perhaps Mr. Bourassa should not, as the Press puts it, be vulgar. Perhaps he should not be vituperative. Perhaps he should be dignified. Possibly one might expect [illegible], the sense of responsibility, and a disdain of the gallery in one who claims to be an educated man and a gentleman. Mr. Bourassa [illegible] notice. That is very clear. He stood alone in regard to the contingents when the whole country demanded that Canada take her part in the defence of the empire. He stood alone in the House of Commons. He has been the sole voice from Canada to England, which ought to give a strong impression as to the feeling of this country towards Great Britain. Mr. Bourassa is not a heavy weight. He will not hinder the growth of Imperialism. He will not alter the destiny of his countrymen. But he possesses this great privilege—a privilege denied to the subjects of other nations—he can say the thing he will, even though that should be in bad taste, should be untruthful, should be colored by prejudice, should tend to hurt the empire in its cherished plans and ideals.

TO CROSS THE CHANNEL

Paris, Nov. 5.—The question of submarine transit of the Channel is occupying the minds of inventors. M. Goubet, inventor of a submarine boat, has made a perfect model of a passenger boat, twenty-five metres long, to run by electricity on a steel wire cable at a uniform depth of fifteen metres.

Passengers can be carried in saloon compartments, with electric light and every convenience. The passage would be as easy as a railway, with no vibration. Perfect safety is insured by an iron weight, which in case of need can be dropped, and the boat will rise to the surface. The estimated speed is twenty knots. Capital is the only thing required says the inventor.

—The Scottish concert, which is to take place on Friday evening, Nov. 27, promises to be the event of the season.

—County Magistrate Edmison has a number of cases that he will ventilate at Havelock on Friday next.

RELIEF.

There is nothing like Asthmalene. It brings instant relief, even in the worst cases. It cures when all else fails.

The Rev. C. F. WELLS, of Villa Ridge, Ill., says: "Your trial bottle of Asthmalene received in good condition. I cannot tell you how thankful I feel for the good derived from it. I was a slave, chained with putrid sore throat and Asthma for ten years. I despaired of ever being cured. I saw your advertisement for the cure of this dreadful and tormenting disease, Asthma, and thought you had overspoken yourselves, but resolved to give it a trial. To my astonishment, the trial acted like a charm. Send me a full-size bottle."

NEW YORK, Jan. 3, 1901.

DRS. TAFT BROS.' MEDICINE CO.:

Gentlemen: Your Asthmalene is an excellent remedy for Asthma and Hay Fever, and its composition alleviates all troubles which combine with asthma. Its success is astonishing and wonderful.

After having it carefully analyzed, we can state that Asthmalene contains no opium, morphine, chloroform or ether. Very truly yours,
REV. DR. MORRIS WECHSLER.

AVON SPRINGS, N. Y., Feb. 1, 1901.

DR. TAFT BROS. MEDICINE CO.

Gentlemen: I write this testimonial from a sense of duty, having tested the wonderful effect of your Asthmalene, for the cure of Asthma. My wife has been afflicted with spasmodic asthma for the past 12 years. Having exhausted my own skill as well as many others, I chanced to see your sign upon your windows at 130th street, New York. I at once obtained a bottle of Asthmalene. My wife commenced taking it about the 1st of November. I very soon noticed a radical improvement. After using one bottle her asthma has disappeared and she is entirely free from all symptoms. I feel that I can consistently recommend the medicine to all who are afflicted with this distressing disease. Yours respectfully,
O. D. PHELPS, M. D.

DR. TAFT BROS. MEDICINE CO.

Gentlemen: I was troubled with Asthma for 22 years. I have tried numerous remedies but they have all failed. I ran across your advertisement and started with a trial bottle. I found relief at once. I have since purchased your full size bottle and I am ever grateful. I have a family of four children and for six years was unable to work. I am now in the best of health and am doing business every day. This testimony you can make such use of as you see fit.

The Spider Woman.

SHORT STORY FOR THE DAY.

As Lydia Romyng walked up the aisle of the old church in Paris I said to myself that I had never seen a more beautiful woman—beautiful not only with the beauty of dark, long eyes and yellow hair, straight nose and coral, sensuous lips, but with the beauty of a faultless figure, tall, willowy and strong, the beauty of health which showed in the clear stream that pulsed redly under her white skin. She moved with an easy, sinuous grace that reminded me in some strange way of a [illegible] roaming her native jungle stealthily hunting for prey. I had met Mrs. Romyng that winter in the salons of acquaintance and had become a little interested in her. I am something of a student of types. The interest, however, was one sided. She remembered me now and then with a faint nod of recognition, but paid no further attention to me. I was used to this because I am sallow and sparse bearded, nearly 50 years old and one of my shoulders is higher than the other. I noticed that she seemed attracted by, and attracted, young, full-blooded men of the sort we call "beefy." They are not especially intellectual, but display tailorings well, and fill up gaps in social parties. No one whom I had asked seemed to know much about her except that she had been some years abroad, was under 30, had plenty of money and was the widow of an American manufacturer of iron.

Ransom Canning, in a knot of black-coated friends, stood at the altar waiting for her. He was a big, young fellow, poor, an art student and not capable. He was envied because of his success in marrying a rich woman. We thought it to be a good match for him. He was too lazy for other endeavor and would have starved over his pictures. He had pursued her fiercely and sharp tongued females in our set said she had met him more than half way. At any rate there was no doubt of their mutual fascination. He had been with her almost constantly in the days just before the wedding. A stream of light fell on him from a glass in the high roof and I thought he was pale. Generally his face was red. I chuckled and whispered to Dr. Raoul Armand, my very dear friend: "The nearness of the millions scares him."

There was nothing in the ceremony to distinguish it from other ceremonies of the kind. The groom was the more nervous, but that is usual. He dropped the ring when trying to put it on her finger and she looked at him steadily. He grew paler. Then they came back down the aisle together and were driven away. I got a good look at her face as she passed. She did not look happy so much as satisfied. It was the kind of look that comes to a hungry man at table when the first steaming dishes are brought on. It was joy in her way, but the joy of expectancy.

Dr. Armand took my arm and we walked down the the street together. I ought to say here that he is a physician without practice. He has money and devotes his time to study and pursuit of all sorts of outlandish subjects. He has a book in press now called "[illegible] Conditions" that will astound and shock people. He said to me:—

"Canning is a strong young fellow, and I am sorry for him."

"He has a beautiful woman and wealth," I answered naturally enough. "Why the sorrow?"

A stationer's store was near. He walked into it, took up a sheet of paper, wrote on it, sealed it in an envelope and handed it to me.

"Read that six months hence," he said.

Then he called a cab and drove away. I was used to his eccentricities, put the envelope in my pocket and went about my business. Succeeding months I spent in London. Returning to Paris in late autumn I got my old quarters and unpacked my trunks. In shaking a coat the envelope fell out. I opened it an read:

"He will be dead before winter."

"Too much absinthe!" I said in remonstrance to the doctor, and threw the paper in the grate. That evening at the Trois Freres restaurant I glanced through a copy of the Temps. Straightway and unconsciously my eye fell on the death notices and I saw:

"Died at Bigorre, on Tuesday, Nov. 10, Ransom Canning, in the twenty-ninth year of his age. The disease was inanition, complicated with failure of nerve force. The remains were interred at Bigorre."

I went to see Armand, the paper in my pocket. He clinched his teeth together savagely and muttered a mild French oath. Then he took to striding up and down the room. Then he stopped in front of me and said:

"The woman is in Paris. I saw her today out in the Bois. No charge can be preferred against her, yet she must be insured. Canning was her seventh victim and she is not yet middle aged. Luckily in France we do things differently from you Americans and English. I have some influence of the chief of the secret service bureau."

"But how—how?" I stuttered. "Why—"

Armand laid a slim white hand on my arm and stooped over me, speaking rapidly and intensely:

"My friend, the woman is a human spider. It is not her fault and it is not the spider's fault but we kill spiders and she must be killed. She is the fifth recorded instance of this type. I have known of this, this—what shall I call it—physical idiosyncrasy, peculiarity, abnormal function for three years and have forborne to proceed against her because I wished positive proof. She has married three men here in Paris. The one before the American millionaire was a Russian. Each of her slain has died from inanition and nerve trouble.

"Close association with her is fatal. Consciously or unconsciously—I am inclined to think consciously—she takes life and vigor from another as a spider sucks the blood of insects her [illegible]. The vital force of a man goes out to her steadily but constantly. The process of this strength-transference is slow but sure. While the victim wastes she increases in vitality. During her periods of widowhood she increases in weight and mental force. If you saw her six months before she married Canning you must have noticed her gain power in the church. The devitalizing of the man had begun already. I cannot explain this. No one can explain it. It violates all known physical and mental laws. I know only that it exists.

"This kind of woman has lived continuously since the beginning of our race. She has given rise to many legends. It is possible that in time science will arrive at ability to detect them in infamy and [illegible] before they reach a capacity [illegible] harm."

Lydia Romyng Canning was arrested that night. She did not seem [illegible] or surprised. The arrest was [illegible] she was not told of any charge [illegible] her. She seemed unwilling to ask. Confined in a private sanitarium for patients whose minds [illegible] fected, she was subjected to constant surveillance by Armand and a [illegible] of brother physicians. They noted her as carefully as they would have noted a wild animal of rare species dying in a cage. Rich foods had no power to sustain her, rich wines no power to stimulate. More than once the experiment of holding her hands was tried. On such occasions she always brightened, while the physician who volunteered felt himself [illegible] and weakened. From him to her was a strong, steady outflow of vitality. She never complained. Evidently she recognized the justice of her ending. She died within a year, faded to a mere shadow. Truly they do things differently in France.

THE NEGOTIATIONS ARE DELAYED

New York, Nov. 4.—The hitch in the negotiations for Miss Stone's release arises from two causes: First, the fierce antagonism between United States Diplomatic Agent Dickinson and Russian Minister Bakhmetoff; second, the missionary and diplomatic disinclination to accede to the brigands' terms, though moderated, says the Samakov correspondent of the Journal and Advertiser. The relations between M. Bakhmetoff and Mr. Dickinson are strained to the breaking point. The former, being friendly to Bulgaria, does not want his influence to [illegible] the final transaction on Bulgarian soil. Mr. Berth, a Macedonian student at the American Institute at Samakov, one of the agents sent to negotiate with the brigands, has returned from Belong. He reports that the brigands consider Mr. Dickinson's money offer as too small. They say that they do not want to agree—to terms that would disgrace them with their brothers.

Discussing the amount of ransom, Missionary Baird, purser of the Samakov Institute, says:

"If the brigands get a quarter of what they still ask, bands will spring up like mushrooms, Samakov [illegible] bloodhounds. Miss Stone would not will furnish many and Bulgaria will be ruined. The brigands began negotiations with us by asking twice Miss Stone's weight in gold. Even a fourth of this sum is preposterous, if the Bulgarians had either trackers or be spending her sixty first day with the brigands."

IS MISS STONE [illegible]

New York, Nov. 4.—[illegible] student, who was with the American missionary when she was captured by brigands in Turkey, together with Mrs. Tsilka, has written a letter, in which he expresses the opinion that Miss Stone is dead though there is not the slightest ground for believing that such is the case. According to this letter, the snow in the mountains into which Miss Stone and her companion were taken by their captors was three feet deep three weeks ago, at the time the letter was written. Even in the summer time the snow upon the highest summits of these mountains does not melt. The first snowfall usually comes at about the middle of September, and by the middle of October the mountain passes are absolutely closed to travel. It was the conviction among Miss Stone's friends in Samakov, Bulgaria, three weeks ago that she would not possibly have survived the rigors of her captivity until that date.

According to the letter of Ivan Radulleff, Consul-General Dickinson has retarded the release of Miss Stone seriously. It is said that Mr. Dickinson by his criticism of the Bulgarian Government has antagonized the Government. It is understood in Samakov that the brigands who were in immediate charge of the captive were under positive instructions to take her life at the first indication of the probability of a skirmish with the troops.

It is true that in the department of [illegible] engineering our American technical schools lead the world. Europe is sending her boys to them in considerable numbers. But taking the field of technical education as a whole the United States has need of more schools. There are not a dozen polytechnics in the entire country with endowments exceeding $100,000. The largest of them are the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, with an endowment of $4,000,000; the Armour Institute, with one of $3,000,000; the Pratt Institute, the Cooper Union and the Case School of Applied Science, with endowments averaging $2,000,000 apiece.

Pittsburg's institute, with its endowment of $10,000,000, will represent a larger investment of capital in technical education than the combined endowments of all the distinctly technical institutes now existing in the country—[illegible] a truly splendid contribution to the [illegible] branch of twentieth century education.

AIRSHIPS IN DEMAND

Paris, Nov. 5.—A competition of aeroplanes is already [illegible] under the patronage of the International Aeronautic Committee and the Aero Club, to take place at the Parc des Princes, Auteuil, on November 12.

The programme, which is very varied, includes flying machines [illegible] air, to carry an aeronaut [illegible] flying alone; also navigable parachutes.

Two challenge cups are offered by the Auto-Velo, one for aerial [illegible] propelled by mechanism; the other, for the best scientific kite on a string.

If any proof were wanted of the activity prevailing in the airship world, it would be found in the orders for machines for airships received by M. Duchet, constructor of M. Santos-Dumont. These include sixteen horse power machines for M. Roze, [illegible] Bradsky, M. Liebon, Ambassador at St. Petersburg, and M. [illegible], a Brazilian Deputy; a twelve horse power machine for the Comte [illegible], a five horse power for M. [illegible] and two twenty-four horse power machines for M. Philippi, of the Vienna Automobile Club.

WILL GREAT BRITAIN AND RUSSIA AGREE

London, Nov. 4.—The National Review of London, suggests an Anglo-Russian Agreement with this as a basis of agreement:

1. British control of Egypt guaranteed; Russia's "historic mission" in the Balkans assented to.

2. A trade outlet for Russia by railway to the Persian Gulf; Russian recognition of the British protectorate in Afghanistan.

3. Japan's "influence" in Corea, Russia's in Chinese Manchuria and Britain's in the Yangtse Valley conceded.

If the natives of these countries must in any case be "assimilated," this looks like a reasonable business proposition. There is really no reason why the Bear and the Lion should not amicably divide the prey instead of quarreling over it. The suggestion is made under conditions that stamp it as a semi-Ministerial "feeler" to ascertain in advance of action popular sentiment upon so weighty a matter.

The union of England and Russia would mean a lasting peace. It would settle the Eastern question for good, and remove cause for war.

The Paris [illegible] regard the matter complacently, and announces, that a treaty of this kind is not practicable.

The [illegible] treaty clearly indicates that the purpose of it is to throw a spray of very cold water into Berlin and, at the same time, to remind St. Petersburg that, after all, the British Lion is not so black as he has been painted, largely with a German pot and brush. The growing hostility of the Kaiser's Government to that of Great Britain is reviewed, the statement is made that Germany is already stronger on the sea than either Russia or France, and the rather remarkable assertion is offered that, after all is said and done, Russia would rather see England mistress of the briny deep than Germany.

It is declared that there is no insuperable difficulty to prevent England and Russia from arriving at a mutual understanding; that the present Czar's father was anxious for one and why should not the son be? On Russia's own terms, we have not a doubt that Nicholas would be only too glad to divide things with his uncle; but the terms might be rather high. However, John Bull has become used of late to paying dearly for his whistle and that might not stand in the way. The alliance article proposes a modus vivendi which is highly worth consideration. It is not pitched in the tone that we have been used to hear from British voices when singing songs of defiance to the wild and untamed Muscovite. There is nothing in it like "While we're Britons true the Russians shall not have Constantinople!"

On the contrary, Russia may have a [illegible], in the view of the [illegible] writers, and let bygones be bygones. For example, they say that if Russia will abstain from any attempt to dislocate that status quo in Egypt, why should not she have her destined way and away in the Balkans? If Russia would be good and not bother British interests along the shores of the Persian Gulf, why not co-operate with her to develop railway communication between the Caspian and that Gulf, and why not give her a port? Again, if Russia would consent to give Japan a free hand in Korea, she might be permitted to [illegible] Manchurian and Mongolian [illegible] by direct negotiations with China.

It sounds like a pretty scheme of concession, and has the aroma of retirement from the ministerial attitude which the Lion has maintained toward the Bear ever since the latter began to get his growth. If the London journal be inspired, as gossip has it, we shall hear more about it. The [illegible] of St. Petersburg are always open to business.

A PRINCELY GIFT TO PITTSBURG CITY

New York, Nov. 5.—The largest educational [illegible] of the year will be Andrew Carnegie's gift to Pittsburg of a great polytechnic institute, at a cost of $12,000,000, besides an endowment of $10,000,000. This will far exceed the largest endowment of any American university or college [illegible] only Girard.

Technical education is increasingly demanded by all the industrial nations. Until within a few years Germany and France, particularly the former country, have given more attention to technical instruction than the United States. England [illegible] far behind Germany [illegible] of late shown great activity in this direction. London has established twelve great polytechnics, each giving instruction in special industries and trades, [illegible]

A MARVELLOUS MEDICINE

"No Cure, No Pay," is the Newest Proposal of the Proprietors of Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—We make the following proposal to the readers of the Times: To any one who is a subject of rheumatism (no matter how long standing) or any blood disease, as enumerated below, and will give Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills a fair trial and do not find a perfect cure, we will refund the money paid for the pills. If no substantial improvement is observed, we will in addition, pay $10 in cash on satisfactory evidence being supplied us to this effect.

We have yet to know of a single case where these wonderful pills have not been almost entirely successful in effecting a cure. CANADA CHEMICAL CO.

Ex-Ald. Bailey, St. John's, writes: I cannot speak too highly of Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills. They worked a miracle in my case, and cured me after many years of suffering. I do not think their equal is to be obtained.

Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills are a positive and certain cure for la grippe, rheumatism, asthma, paralysis, catarrh, eczema, coughs, backache, indigestion, all stomach and liver troubles, female complaints, even when the disease having been standing for many years, the most stubborn cases will yield. Price 50 cents per box. For sale by Ormond & Walsh. The Canada Chemical Company will forfeit $10 for any case that these pills do not help.

Dr. Clarke's Sure Cure for Catarrh, and Dr. Clarke's Sure Cure for Eczema same price. $10 will be paid for any case they will not permanently cure.

LOST ALL TRACE OF BYGONE DAYS

New York, Nov. 4.—Fifteen years in institutions for the feeble-minded have made a psychological marvel of Mary L. Lake, who has returned to the neighborhood of her old home on Staten Island, which she only remembers vaguely.

Treated as one of unsound mind for years, pronounced violently insane two months ago, she rambles about the grounds of the Richmond County Almshouse, still trembling with happiness over her release. Physicians have declared her sane, and added that she shows no traces of having ever been feeble-minded, and kind-hearted men and women have taken her case in hand.

Just what is her condition of mind would require the study of a scientist to discover. She reads eagerly, writes well, uses good English and talks rationally.

Most striking are Mary Lake's eyes. They are unusually large and vividly blue, and search unceasingly for new wonders. Her face is thin and pale. Her hair is flaxen at the temples, shading into light brown in the coils of the braid in which she wears it looped at her neck. Her figure is slight, and even in the coarse blue habit she wears she carries herself well.

But there is something uncanny in the young woman's face. The wide eyes and the peculiarly starved mind behind them seem to reflect her experiences in the New York Custodial Asylum, in Newark, of which she tells straightforwardly, and yet almost without emotion.

Here is a mind apparently healthy and pronounced sound by physicians. It is stored with the knowledge of the rudiments of education. Yet all of the world is strange to it. The commonest things of life are wonders. The names of the flowers, cities, even the towns of Staten Island, where the girl's childhood was spent, are like the reading of a history of a strange land.

Behind her is the shadow of a crime which her father committed in New York, and for which he was sentenced for ten years in Sing Sing prison in 1886. It broke up a family and scattered five children so widely that only two of them know each other.

LIBERTY OF SPEECH

The liberty of speech is so complete in all parts of the British empire that a man can praise the enemies of his country, denounce the conduct of the British army in the field, express sentiments which in any other country, would entitle him to be tried for treason. This is a grand feature about our constitution. The freedom is absurd, of course, but the very abuse speaks for the stability of the empire. The Irish Nationalists inveigh against England, and pray for the success of the Boers, and nothing happens. The anarchist burrows in the heart of London, or foams at the mouth in Hyde Park, and no man regards him. The religious orders from France which [illegible] England to [illegible], invade the country which they hate, and nobody is disturbed. Mr. Bourassa pours contempt upon British statesmen, denounces the war in South Africa, insists that his countrymen should have neither part nor lot in the common display of the empire, and [illegible] indulgently. Mr. Bourassa has a perfect right to his opinions. He may disapprove of imperialism; he may object to the Boer war; he may regard Mr. Chamberlain as responsible for the precipitation of that conflict. Perhaps Mr. Bourassa should not, as the Press puts it, be vulgar. Perhaps he should not be vituperative. Perhaps he should be dignified. Possibly we might expect [illegible], the sense of responsibility, and a [illegible] of the gallery in one who claims to be an educated man and a gentleman. Mr. Bourassa [illegible] notice. That is very clear. He stood alone in regard to the contingents when the whole country demanded that Canada take her part in the defence of the empire. He stood alone in the House of Commons. He has been the sole voice from Canada, to England, which ought to give a wrong impression as to the feeling of this country towards Great Britain. Mr. Bourassa is not a heavy weight. He will not hinder the growth of imperialism. He will not alter the destiny of his compatriots. But he possesses this great privilege—a privilege denied to the subjects of other nations—he can say the [illegible] he will, even though that should be in bad taste, should be untruthful, should be coloured by prejudice, should tend to hurt the empire he [illegible].

TO CROSS THE CHANNEL

Paris, Nov. 5.—The question of submarine transit of the Channel is occupying the minds of inventors. M. Goubet, inventor of a submarine boat, has made a perfect model of a passenger boat, twenty-five metres long, to run by electricity on a steel wire cable at a uniform depth of fifteen metres.

Passengers can be carried in saloon compartments, with electric light and every convenience. The passage would be as easy as a railway, with no vibration. Perfect safety is insured by an iron weight, which in case of need can be dropped, and the boat will rise to the surface. The estimated speed is twenty knots. Capital is the only thing required says the inventor.

—The Scottish concert, which is to take place on Friday evening, Nov. 27, promises to be the event of the season.

—County Magistrate Edmison has a number of cases that he will ventilate at Havelock on Friday next.

CHAINED FOR TEN YEARS
HAY FEVER
ASTHMA

There is nothing like Asthmalene. It brings instant relief, even in the worst cases. It cures when all else fails.

The Rev. C. F. WELLS, of Villa Ridge, Ill., says: "Your trial bottle of Asthmalene received in good condition I cannot tell you how thankful I feel for the good derived from it. I was a slave, chained with putrid sore throat and Asthma for ten years. I despaired of ever being cured. I saw your advertisement for the cure of this dreadful and tormenting disease, Asthma, and thought you had overspoken yourselves, but resolved to give it a trial. To my astonishment, the trial acted like a charm. Send me a full-size bottle."

REV. DR. MORRIS WECHSLER
Rabbi of the Cong. Bnai Israel.
NEW YORK, Jan. 3, 1901.

DRS. TAFT BROS.' MEDICINE CO.:

Gentlemen: Your Asthmalene is an excellent remedy for Asthma and Hay Fever, and its composition alleviates all troubles which combine with asthma. Its success is astonishing and wonderful

After having it carefully analyzed, we can state that Asthmalene contains no opium, morphine, chloroform or ether. Very truly yours,
REV. DR. MORRIS WECHSLER.

AVON SPRINGS, N. Y., Feb. 1, 1901.

DR. TAFT BROS. MEDICINE CO.

Gentlemen: I write this testimonial from a sense of duty, having tested the wonderful effect of your Asthmalene, for the cure of Asthma. My wife has been afflicted with spasmodic asthma for the past 12 years. Having exhausted my own skill as well as many others, I chanced to see your sign upon your windows at 130th street, New York. I at once obtained a bottle of Asthmalene. My wife commenced taking it about the 1st of November. I very soon noticed a radical improvement. After using one bottle her asthma has disappeared and she is entirely free from all symptoms. I feel that I can consistently recommend the medicine to all who are afflicted with this distressing disease. Yours respectfully,
O. D. PHELPS, M. D.

DR. TAFT BROS. MEDICINE CO.

Gentlemen: I was troubled with Asthma for 22 years. I have tried numerous remedies but they have all failed. I ran across your advertisement and started with a trial bottle. I found relief at once. I have since purchased your full size bottle and I am ever grateful. I have a family of four children and for six years was unable to work. I am now in the best of health and am doing business every day. This testimony you can make such use of as you see fit.

Cancer Growing Two Years

Not long ago, we had the pleasure receiving the following letter:

"When I began your treatment there was a hard lump in my breast, which had been growing for two years, and it was so bad at last that it brought the nipple in. I consulted two doctors, and they both pronounced it cancer, and advised me to have my breast cut off. Your remedy, however, was recommended to me by a friend, and I am very thankful to say that it not only saved my life, but did away with the necessity of having to undergo the painful operation, which I so much dreaded."

We do not publish the names of those who give us testimonials for the gratification of the curious, but any sufferer from cancer or tumor may have the name and address of the lady who wrote the above, by sending 2 stamps to Stott & Jury, Bowmanville, Ont.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

Local Happenings Picked Up Here and There by The Times.

NOTE.—The Times requests its readers to contribute items of news to its columns. Anything that is special or sent in writing to the office, of a nature suitable for publication, will be received and published.—Ed. Times.)

—Havelock wants a bank.

—Prof Sheets' classes are increasing in number.

—The prospect of re-opening the street railway is very good.

—Yesterday was Gunpowder Plot Day.

—Lindsay is about to erect a new fire hall.

—A very successful concert was given by the Guild of St. Luke's church on Monday night.

The Royal Chorus, consisting of 150 voices, will give their concert in the Market Hall on Thursday night. Secure your tickets before the rush.

—Udile Deorey, assisted by Mrs. A. G. Parker, gave a piano recital last night in the lecture room of St. Paul's Church.

—The Times received a letter dealing with municipal matters, which bears no signature, and therefore will not appear.

—There will be a practice of the Royal Chorus to-night at 8 o'clock sharp in the market hall. It will be open to the public.

—The committee in charge of the Royal Chorus wish to thank Messrs. Fair and Cressman for their donation of sufficient ribbon for 150 badges.

—Another lot of those English novels—best value on the market—ten cents each or three for 25 cents. Times Bookstore.

—The Port Hope Old Boys' Association had a balance of $300 to the good, of which $200 was given to the manager, $100 to the town, for tree planting, and $60 to the Port Hope Benevolent Association.

—The regular monthly meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A. will be held on Thursday afternoon at 3.30 o'clock. Final arrangements will then be made for the handkerchief sale and concert to be held on the 19th inst. All ladies interested are invited.

Saturday, 9th instant, is to be a record breaker at The Times Bookstore. Bargains in every line we carry in order to make room for new goods coming in. Double Trading stamps given on purchases over twenty-five cents.

Lindsay Post.—Mr. Dougall Robertson, of the Scotch Line, Verulam, recently sold eight hogs to Mr. J. Bell, drover of Dunsford, and realised $161.50 on the lot. The animals were monstrous, being only six months old.

—The St. Peter's Cathedral Ladies' Aid "At Home" held in the T. A. S. rooms Monday evening was one of the most successful ever held in the history of the society. The affair was attended by a large number, and a delightful evening was spent in games and social intercourse. Excellent refreshments were also provided during the evening.

—At G. E. Whiten's every year there is a great rush of business for Christmas which promises this year to be greater than ever, and with which it is difficult to cope. We therefore take this early opportunity of notifying our customers that it will greatly facilitate matters and ensure your orders being out on time and receiving careful attention if you will kindly give us your Christmas orders for photos as early as possible. The True Tragedy of Life is ill-health, disappointed ambitions, usefulness destroyed. Pathetic! nay, tragic. Poor blood, weak nerves, a tired brain. Is there hope? Yes! Because there is a cure.

Ferrozone Tablets make blood; not blue blood, but the fluid that strengthens the whole body. Ferrozone does this quickly by improving digestion, stimulating assimilation and by imparting health and tone to the whole system. Ormond & Walsh, druggists, will tell you a great deal more about Ferrozone. Ask him to tell you of the wonderful curative properties of Ferrozone Tablets.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Events Under This Head Transpiring in and Around Peterborough.)

NOTE.—The Times requests its readers to favor the paper with items of a personal and social nature either by phone or in writing.—Ed. Times.)

—Mr. W. H. Goodwin, Toronto, is a guest at the National Hotel.

—Mr. John Fraser, of Petrolia, was in town yesterday and gave The Times a call.

—Mr. F. W. Taylor, inspector of the Bank of Montreal was in town yesterday.

—Lindsay Post.—Miss Minnie Begley and Miss Fitzsimmons of Peterborough, paid Mr. John Begley a visit yesterday.

Lindsay Post.—Mr. Percy McLean of the George Matthews Co., Peterborough was in town to-day looking up business for the firm.

The Fitzgerald Party.

News from the Fitzgerald party, who are camped on Gull Lake, states that the party has captured four deer so far. George Dawson shot two, Jack Fitzgerald one, and Milne Hamilton laid low a fine large buck. They have forwarded the deer to town and they will be on exhibition at Mervin's butcher shop. The party is having a good time, and hope to come home with the full limit of game.

The Farmers' Market

Complaints have reached the Times office of articles bought on the market not being delivered, although often the payment is made in advance. We do not intimate that the farmers are dishonest but we do say that the custom of settling in advance is not a wise one for two reasons if for no others, viz: Farmers with every desire to be honest sometimes mix or confuse directions, and not being well acquainted with the town cannot find certain localities. And goods have to be delivered and the custom of paying on delivery means no injustice or inconvenience to the farmer, while it means protection every time for the purchaser. This is the only cure that we know of.

The Mountebank

A large and well-pleased audience witnessed the presentation of the thrilling four act drama "The Mountebank" by Edouard D'Oise and company in Bradburn's Opera House last night. The scene of the play is in France, the time of the restoration of the monarchy after the fall of Napoleon, a time which gives the dramatist ample scope for portraying situations of stress and peril. Mr. D'Oise as Belphegor the Mountebank, showed himself a very strong actor, equally master of the part whether in the grave or the gay scenes. Miss Eugenie Flagg as Madeline, his wife, graced the part with a presence befitting her aristocratic lineage, upon which the drama turns, and her acting was excellent. Mr. Montgomery as the aged and "sinful" Duke de Montbazon was a capital old man, and Mr. Deeks the villain of the play carried out his part with befitting sang froid. Miss May Thompson in the dual role of Neighbor Catherine and the Duke's sister showed herself equally at home in the hovel or the palace. The other parts were all well sustained. The costuming was picturesque and historically correct. The entertainment is one of the strongest that has been given here this season.

THE STREET RAILWAY

There is Every Probability of the Road being Re-Opened

As stated in our report of the Council proceedings yesterday, there is a strong probability of the Peterborough Electric Railway changing hands. An American syndicate is after the property, and we understand the deal is about closed.

Mr. T. E. Bradburn went up to Toronto yesterday with the object of closing the matter.

THE KING'S BIRTHDAY

A Big Kick Coming Over the Action of the Council

A letter appears in another column which deals with the matter of the King's birthday. It has the right ring about it, and should be read by everybody. That the first birthday of His Majesty should be passed over without any notice being taken of it, is neither patriotic or wise. We believe when the merchants decided to keep open on Saturday, that it was the duty of the Mayor to proclaim Monday a holiday, even without a petition. This would have been the safe and patriotic course.

THE NATIONAL HOTEL

Mr. John Conroy Buys an Interest With Mr Moon

Mr. John Conroy, formerly of Norwood, has purchased a partnership in the above splendid hotel, the firm being known hereafter as Moon & Conroy.

Both men are known to the travelling public, and their success is assured. Mr. Moon is very popular, and has, during his residence in Peterborough, learned the hearty good will of everybody. Mr. Conroy, his partner is also known as a progressive business man, and is highly esteemed.

The National Hotel is one of the finest constructed and best equipped in the Province, having all modern conveniences, while its sample rooms are the best in the Dominion. The Times wishes the new firm every success.

A Lake Captain's Experience.

Capt. McDonald, one of Kingston's most prominent mariners, writes:—"For years I have battled with the agonies of Bronchitis Asthma, oftentimes so bad that I could not sleep for nights at a time. I spent hundreds of dollars on doctors and quacks without getting relief, but one dollar's worth of Catarrhozone perfectly cured me." The above testimonial was given two years ago, and as the Captain lately stated he was still quite free from Bronchitis. It proves Catarrhozone a veritable specific. Catarrhozone two months' treatment, guaranteed to cure

An Independent Citizen

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—While travelling in Hastings County some four weeks ago, I saw the following notice. It was conspicuously displayed in front of a field of corn which was overrun with rank weeds: "Notice! None of Your Business If This Corn Ain't Heed."

How is that, Mr. Times?

TRAVELLER.

Peterborough Old Boys

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—The suggestion is made, I think, by Mayor Denne, that a store be engaged and a secretary employed to work up the Peterborough Old Boys' movement. The idea is a good one, only that the expense would be too great. I would suggest instead that the Council Chamber be used instead of a store. It is heated and lighted, and all ready. Then I would appoint Mr. J. W. Green, our efficient tax collector, secretary, and fire ahead. Mr. Green is an Old Boy himself, and knows where a circular will reach most of them. If he would accept the position, I am sure the rest would be easy.

I hope the suggestion will be acted upon.

AN OLD BOY.

POCKET LOYALTY

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—It is said that sometimes even Homer nods. If it were not for this who would believe that the Town Council would treat the King with less respect than they treat the retail merchants of the town. But it is so nevertheless. The King asked that his birthday should not be ignored but observed. We accede to this polite request by insulting His Majesty. The Retail Merchants Association, having decided that the merchants will not observe the day, and not having even suggested a substitute, the Council, with the exception of Ald. Edgcombe, quietly turns the King down, and proceed to cater to the merchants.

No matter how we may differ as Grit and Tory, or upon the policy of this administration or of that, no loyal man ought to permit such rank disrespect, and disloyalty to his King, and if there is not a row over this performance it will hand back my gift of prophecy. This pocket loyalty is disgusting.

LOYALTY.

A NOVEL ENTERTAINMENT

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I had a letter from a lady friend in Toronto, who described a very novel entertainment that might be of interest to your lady readers. She says:—

Hallowe'en was celebrated in a novel way by a number of young married people in this city. A progressive dinner was given, consisting of six courses. It was a sort of syndicate affair, inasmuch as it was participated in by six couples, each providing a course. It was also progressive, in that each course was served in a different house. Promptly at half-past 6 the 12 diners sat down to the first course, consisting of oysters on the half-shell. At a signal given by hostess No. 1 there was a skurry for wraps and away they went to the next house, where soup was served. The fish course awaited them just around the corner, and in the next block they sat down to the roast. At the next stop there was a salad, and at the end of the route dessert and coffee was served. Although a distance of less than three blocks had been traversed, the dinner consumed the better part of three hours. The experiment was pronounced an unqualified success.

Thanking you Mr. Editor, for your space, I am, &c.

A LADY READER.

THE KING'S BIRTHDAY

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I see by this morning Times' account of last nights Council meeting that an effort is being made for the benefit of a few shop keepers to postpone the celebration of the Kings birth day because the same falls on Saturday. Must the loyalty of thirteen thousand of his Majesty's liege subjects be stigmatised because of the cupidity of these few selfish individuals? Is such conduct on the part of a few self-seeking creatures to be the measure of our loyalty? Either keep the proper day or none. We may next expect to hear of an attempt to change the date of the equinoxes, should they fall on a Saturday. Such hypocritical loyalty should be frowned down by every loyal subject. In fact our Council has no authority to change a legal holiday, any more than they have to change the course of the planets.

Yours, &c,

CONSISTENCY.

A COMING MEETING

Three Powerful Speakers Will be Heard at St. Paul's on the 20th

A meeting was announced in the Presbyterian churches on Saturday last: A series of meetings in the interests of the Home Mission and the Augmentation Funds of the Presbyterian church have been arranged. These will be held at Montreal, Ottawa, Prescott, Brockville, Smith's Falls, Belleville, Kingston, and other places, including Peterborough.

The Peterborough meeting will be held in St. Paul's church on Wednesday evening, Nov. 20th. A delegation composed of Rev. Dr. Robertson, Superintendent of Home Missions; Rev. J. A. McDonald, Editor of the Westminster, and Mr. J. B. Penman, of Paris. These three gentlemen form an unusually strong delegation, and the addresses they will deliver are sure to be interesting and forceful.

These meetings have been arranged to awaken renewed interest in the funds mentioned, for which an increased amount is required this year.

A New Light

London, Nov. 5.—An apparatus for producing light from smoke is the invention of a Belgian engineer named [illegible]. It appears that the origin of the smoke is a matter of indifference. It is simply forced into a receiver, where it is saturated with hydrocarburet, and can then be burned, giving a brilliant illumination.

The Poisoned Spring.—As in nature so in man, pollute the spring and disease and waste are bound to follow—the stomach and nerves are the [illegible] poison in the spring. South American Nervine is a great purifier, cures Indigestion, Dyspepsia, and tones the nerves. The best evidence of its efficacy is the unsolicited testimony of thousands [illegible].

AFTER NATURAL GAS

A GAS EXPERT PAYS A VISIT TO PETERBOROUGH.

And is Favorably Impressed With the Geological Formation—Says That Gas Exists in Peterborough Beyond Doubt.

Yesterday there arrived in town Mr. John Fraser, of Petrolia, a natural gas and coal oil expert, who came here to prospect for gas. He had read the articles in the Times regarding the pockets of gas that were found at the lift lock excavation, and decided to visit the locality. Mr. Fraser's firm secured the contract for boring the Port Hope gas well, and this afforded him the desired opportunity. He came out on the morning train and spent the forenoon between Peterborough and the lift lock.

Mr. Fraser says that gas undoubtedly abounds here. He does not guarantee that it is to be had in paying quantities, although indications are that such is the case. Our geological formation is exactly the same as that of the great gas fields of the United States. He thinks that a test well should be sunk without delay. This would cost about a thousand dollars.

In Port Hope the gentlemen who took the matter up made a mistake in sinking their first well on the lake shore. This was a blunder as the gas got vent in the lake and escaped, which no doubt accounted for the small volume found. A second well is, however, being sunk, and better results are expected.

Mr. Fraser called on Mayor Denne, Ald. Best, Ald. Rush, Mr. J. H. McWilliams and on the Times. He will write the Mayor on his return to Port Hope, when the matter will no doubt come before the Council.

Fifty Three Indians Die

Sioux City, Iowa, Nov. 5.—Reports from the Winnebago Indian reservation in Nebraska are to the effect that fifty-three of the 1,000 Indians of the agency have died from the smallpox epidemic there raging. There is no adequate medical force to care for them and the disease threatens the destruction of the tribe. Every town within twenty miles has established regular guards, who keep away every Indian. The Indians are scattered over 1,100 acres, and many lie sick and die without medical attention.

Josh Billings: "I like a rooster for two things—one is the crow that is in him and the other is the spurs that are on him to back up his crow with."

The Times has become a popular paper, not only amongst the people of the town and Ashburnham, but also amongst the residents of the surrounding towns and villages.

Mr. G. B. Hilliard, of Lakefield, says the Times is regarded in Lakefield as the brightest paper that comes to that burg, and is read by very many in the village.

Wm. O'Brien, the genial clerk of Douro, who has long been a subscriber to the daily edition, says that the Times is the popular paper in that township, 75 per cent. of the people being readers. He hopes that it may long keep up its onward pace.

Mr. Wm. Gallen, Reeve of Burleigh and Anstruther, states that the whole back country reads the Times, and regard the paper as one of the very best. He says that it is always full of good things.

Mr. P. P. Young, Young's Point, says everybody reads the Times in that locality. It is admirably conducted.

Mr. James Stevenson, ex-M.P., says the Times is the brightest and best gotten paper published in Peterborough.

Commodore Calcutt says he "would sooner miss his breakfast than miss getting the Times. It is a fine appetizer only equalled by Calcutt's celebrated ale.

Mr. J. B. Thornton, Omemee, says the Times is very popular in that village and is widely read.

Rev. Mr. Bastedo thinks the Times deserves great credit for its progressive spirit. It is up-to-date, giving all the news up to four o'clock each morning.

Recently Mr. Sage and another of North Smith, brought us in a couple of clubs for the Weekly Times of 30 names. Here are 37 names from one section of Smith, that are constant readers of the Times.

Mr. Harry Garbutt, Reeve of Smith, says that the Times is the popular paper in that locality.

Mr. James [illegible], Springville, gives similar evidence, and says you can hardly go into a house in his locality that the Times is not present.

Mr. [illegible], the great horse buyer, of Montreal, told the Times the other day that he has better results from the advertisement in the Times than from any other paper. He says he finds the Times is read by almost everybody in the district. He knows this, for almost every horse he buys is the product of the Times advertisement.

Mr. T. [illegible], Cavan, member of the Counties' Council of Northumberland and Durham, says that the Times is very popular in Cavan.

Mr. James [illegible], bears similar testimony in regard to [illegible] Township.

Dr. Bingham, the popular city Medical Health Officer, missed his Times the other morning, and came to the office for a copy. He said he was not feeling well, and wondered what was the matter, until he remembered he had not had his Times.

The above are a few of the many evidences we have in our possession of the high regard in which this great family journal is held by the people. Merchants and other advertisers should remember that hundreds upon hundreds of families throughout the town and country cannot be reached by any other way except through the Times.

There's a Story in [illegible]

A story of poor blood, exhausted nerves, of a starved brain. Plenty of food, mind you, but perhaps poorly prepared and too poorly digested to maintain a vigorous body. Ferrozone quickly makes blood, gives strength to the nerves, cures the fagged feeling that prevents vigorous thought and action. Use Ferrozone, it makes blood, and good blood feeds the nerves. Strong and vigorous nerves are just another name for good health. If you seek health, and a relief from the tired morning feeling, use Ferrozone. Sold [illegible]

CAPE COLONY IS NOW QUIET

Lieut. Col. Gordon Progressing Very Favorably—A Narrow Escape of the Hertzogs

Cape Town, Nov. 6.—A small commando of Cape rebels raided Steenberg's Cove, St. Helena Bay, early last month and ransacked the entire village. They stole twelve horses, looted the postoffice and the local stores, orders and placed the Government officials in jail. Subsequently the rebels visited Hotejs's Bay, where they were engaged in looting when the gunboat Partridge arrived and dropped a few rounds of shrapnel among them. They retired into the interior.

GORDON CONVALESCENT.

Ottawa, Nov. 6.—A letter from Miss Richards, a Canadian nursing sister in South Africa, states that Lieut.-Col. Gordon, who has been ill in the military hospital at Wynberg for a long time, is now convalescent.

ESCAPE OF THE HERTZOGS.

Bloemfontein, Nov. 6.—Fourteen prisoners were captured by General Hamilton during operations in the southern portion of the Orange River Colony last month. Commandants Lategan and Nieuhout and the Hertzog brothers narrowly escaped capture during the skirmishing which occurred almost daily. Rain greatly hampered the British movements.

NOT TROUBLING BRITISH HORSES.

Pretoria, Nov. 6.—The outbreak of horse sickness which is playing so much havoc among the Boer animals has not yet appeared to any great extent among the British horses.

Ottawa, Nov. 6.—Commanding officers of corps which served in South Africa have endorsed the proposal to award the Imperial war medal to Dr. H. W. Barrie and T. F. Best, Y.M.C.A. representatives in South Africa. Nothing has been heard at the Department of Militia of the proposed grant of a medal to each of the Canadian correspondents who were in South Africa.

THE PHILIPPINE WAR GOES BRAVELY ON

Two Hard Battles Fought on One of the Principal Islands

THE REVOLT BREAKS OUT ANEW

Uncle Sam Has a War on His Hands That May Last for Months or Even Years.

Manila, Nov. 6.—The insurgents yesterday attacked San Jose, in the province of Batangas, Luzon, which was garrisoned by a detachment of the Twenty-first Infantry, under Lieut. Patrick A. Connelly. The Americans fought hard, but were unable to prevent the burning of the town.

Gen. Sumner reports a fight which took place at daybreak Wednesday at Taysan, also in the province of Batangas, between Companies D and I, of the First Cavalry, and a band of insurgents.

There was desultory firing the whole forenoon, when the insurgents were driven into the mountains. The cavalry destroyed the insurgents barracks, storehouses, 2,000 pounds of rice and many uniforms and blankets.

The people of the island of Samar have been notified to concentrate in the towns, otherwise they will be considered public enemies and outlaws and will be treated accordingly.

Intense feeling exists among the troops in Samar. If they can meet the enemy in the open there will be great retaliation. Many of the men have seen and others have heard of the barbarous treatment which the dead American soldiers were subjected to by the Filipinos recently.

Francisco de Jesus, Lukban's chief commissary, was recently captured and taken to Cebu. Papers which he had in his possession have resulted in the arrest of many of the best-known Presidents and other civil officials of the island of Leyte.

It develops that Biliran Island, north of the island of Leyte, has been a hotbed of the insurrection. Every civil official there has been aiding the insurgents of Samar in every way. They have handed heavy cargoes of rice and have received hemp in exchange.

Several thousand dollars also fell into the hands of the Americans when De Jesus was made prisoner. His capture is considered to be a great disaster to the revolutionary cause.

Boers in Three Main Bodies

Pretoria, Nov. 7.—There are now three main bodies which form the nucleus of the Boer forces. Gen. Botha's head centre is to the east, Delarey and Kemp are in the Magaliesberg, and Steyn and De Wet are at Bethlehem and Reitz. Active movements are now proceeding for the reduction of each of these commandos.

Since the collapse of Gen. Botha's Natal movement the normal progress of attrition has been resumed. This work was temporarily affected by the concentration of columns to the southeast. These columns are again hunting down the weakened district commandos throughout the country and evidently with increased success.

Could England Defend Canada?

Full particulars of the new Isthmian Canal treaty are not yet before us. But it seems certain that Great Britain has given way, and that full control of the canal is to be conceded to the United States. Great Britain has given away on this, as she did on the Venezuela question, as she has more or less in all questions between her or Canada and the United States. What else could we reasonably expect? Do we, any of us, believe that the British people could be induced to go to war for any object on this side of the Atlantic? Our braves used to talk about bombarding New York; but now the United States have become a great naval power. How could England undertake a defence of Canada? Could her fleet command Lake Superior, or her army repel invasion from the open frontier of the North-West? The British Government have never been regardless of Canadian interests or failed to do for them all that the best diplomacy could do. That has been the limit of its power. "I don't care where the Maine boundary is fixed," said Brougham, "so long as we have peace." Palmerston denounced the Ashburton treaty as a surrender, and tried to fire the national heart against it. He might as well have tried to fire the Thames with a lucifer match. There was not the faintest response to his denunciations.

It is not likely that anybody will be practically hurt by the consignment of the Nicaraguan Canal to American keeping, since it would be the clear interest of the United States to keep the canal open to commerce in time of peace and to guard its neutrality in time of war. In truth, the most serious danger in this connection is that which impends over the Americans themselves. It can hardly be doubted that the possession of the canal will be apt to draw their ambition southward. If they are led to incorporate Mexico, with millions of half-barbarous Indians, and the motley population of the other territories lying between them and the Isthmus, besides that of Cuba, which they are evidently going to annex, a radical change of the character of their own people must apparently ensue, and must be followed by a corresponding change in the substance, if not in the form, of their institutions. The American Commonwealth has been brought by the criminal weakness of the late President to a pass of extreme peril. President McKinley's successor is certainly a far stronger, and there is reason to hope, a more honest man, but his personal leaning unfortunately is towards what is called expansion, when in fact it is dislocation, not without an ultimate tendency to dissolution.

THE GUNPOWDER PLOT.

L. O. L. No. 321 [illegible]

For many years the members of L.O.L. No. 321 Downer's Corners, have celebrated the anniversary of the Gunpowder Plot by an entertainment and fowl supper. This year was no exception to the rule. On Tuesday evening about 300 persons were delightfully entertained at the lodge room. After the fowl supper a programme consisting of speeches by the chairman, Mr. McCarthy, Master of the Lodge, Rev. E. A. Langfeldt, [illegible] and Mr. Wm. [illegible], County Master. A recitation by Miss Murray, of Ashburnham, was also enjoyed. [illegible] Hooper, of town, presided with great efficiency at the organ during the evening. Among those present were Mr. John Burns, District Master, and Mr. T. Argument for Admiral Schley

Washington, Nov. 6.—The entire time of the Schley Court of Inquiry was devoted to argument in Admiral Schley's behalf. Immediately after the court convened at 11 o'clock this morning Captain Parker presented his address and he was followed without the loss of time by Hon. Isidor Rayner, Admiral Schley's chief counsel.

Mr. Rayner began his speech with a discussion of the second specification of the precept relating to the circumstances attending the movements of the flying squadron off Cienfuegos and then proceeded to consider very briefly the cruise from Cienfuegos to Santiago which is covered by the third specification. He passed from these specifications to the sixth and seventh, from that to the end of the list, before he returned to specification one, omitting that and the fourth and fifth specifications for the close of his argument. These latter specifications related to the Santiago campaign and to the charge of disobedience of orders, and were reserved for the latter part of the speech because of their importance.

London, Nov. 6.—Following the recent outcry against the treatment of children in South Africa concentration camps comes an advertisement, inserted by the Board of Education in the morning papers, for female teachers to go to the camps in order to teach the children the simple rudiments and singing. Why should children be taught singing? pro-Boers will ask, in view of reports of sickness and death among them. A correspondent of the Times, however, asserts that the mortality among Boer children is always shockingly high. He says Boers frequently have families of twenty, half of whom die young.

[illegible] for Warships

[illegible], Nov. 7.—Important [illegible] the great military [illegible] the United States Navy—[illegible] by the Engineering [illegible] have determined upon [illegible] Long. In accordance with the view set forth by Rear Admiral George W. Melville, engineer in chief, in his last annual report. The [illegible] of the engineering duties of junior officers will be directed and the service of such officers in [illegible] will be made compulsory instead of voluntary.

A post-graduate course of instruction in marine engineering and design will be established at the Naval Academy for those junior officers of the line who desire to familiarize themselves with marine engineering.

The protected cruisers Cincinnati and Raleigh will be used for the purpose of systematically training firemen in their duties.

Rear Admiral Melville stated in his report that, as a result of inadequate supervision in the engine rooms, there has been a perceptible decrease in the efficiency of the machinery and a progressive increase in the cost of repairs. During the last year the disablement of torpedo boats has been so frequent that the majority of the boats have been under repair a large part of the time. The Rear Admiral points out that an inefficient engineering force means an unnecessary expenditure of money for coal.

The Cincinnati and Raleigh have been selected for the training of firemen because they have ample power, are supplied with water tube boilers, and are fitted to accommodate a large engineering force. The Cincinnati will soon be ready for sea, and will be placed under the command of Commander T. C. McLean, who has had long experience in training enlisted men. The commander of the Raleigh has not been selected, but Commander Frederic Singer, who was the executive of the ship at Manila, is understood to be under consideration for the ship.

Ill-Treated the Wounded

London, Nov. 6.—Lord Kitchener reports that Cape Colony, to the eastward of the Western Railway, is cleared of Boers, with the exception of the Fouchee, Myburgh, Wessels commando of 400 men with which General French is dealing.

In giving further details of the recent engagement near Brakenlaagte, eastern Transvaal, between Col. Benson's column and the Boers, the report says:

"The Boers were unable to remove the guns they captured, until a British ambulance came out, when, under cover of the ambulance, the burghers carried them off. The Boer losses were undoubtedly heavy, but no correct estimate of them is obtainable. Commandant Opperman was killed and Chris Botha was wounded. The Boers are reported to have behaved badly to the British wounded."

Twelve Hurt in a Wreck

Bedford, Ind., Nov. 7.—A Monon work train broke in two near the depot here last night and came together again with a crash that seriously injured twelve men. Brakemen Agnew and Lantz were probably fatally hurt.

THE YUKON COUNTRY

A GREAT FUTURE FOR THE GOLD REGIONS OF THE NORTH

It is Greater Than Most People Suppose—So Says Mr. E. Bredenberg, Who Has Spent Four Years There

Montreal, Nov. 7.—Mr. E. Bredenberg, an English prospector who has resided in the Yukon district for the last four years was in the city to-day on his way back to the Old Country. Mr. Bredenberg has already spent a number of years as a prospector in South Africa, Australia and California, and is especially well able to speak of the prospects of a gold region. When seen by a representative of the Times, he said that, owing to the fact that he was acting for an English firm who were largely interested in a number of mines, he was not in a position to make public all he knew about the district. He would, however, say that his experience had been that the Yukon district was a far greater gold field than the Indian district. In the interests of his company he had gone into every district in which there had been any prospect of finding gold. In his opinion some parts of the country compared most favorably with the fields in the other countries he had visited.

"How do you account, then, for the large number that have seen unsuccessful?"

"They have not been more numerous than elsewhere. It was simply a case of wanting to secure riches without working for it. Those who had turned to and hustled for themselves and used their means, and got on well. It is my opinion that the Yukon still has a great future before it, much greater, in fact, than most people seem to think."

"But there has certainly been a transformation in the district since I went there four years ago. Dawson has already become a great city, and with the opening up of the Nome district, Nome city has been making remarkable progress."

Mr. Bredenberg will return to the Yukon in the spring.

Charge Against Nurses

Chicago, Nov. 7.—Two female nurses at the asylum for the insane at Dunning, Ills., will to-morrow be formally charged by Secretary Follett W. Ball, of the Civil Service Reform Association, with having caused the death of two patients in the asylum Kate Naddo and Kate Kurkowski.

The charge will be made that the women deliberately withheld food from the patients some times giving them nothing at all and for weeks nothing but bread and tea. It will also be charged that medicines provided for the patients were not administrated to them. The motive to be assigned in the charges is that the patients were especially obnoxious to the nurses, and that their course was prompted by a desire to so weaken the patients that they would become ill and be sent to a ward for the sick, thus relieving the nurses of the care of them. It will be charged that this course was carried too far, and that the patients' deaths resulted from it. The women died early in September, and the causes of death were given in the death certificates as inanition in one case and scurvy in the other. The case was brought to the attention of the Civil Service Reform Association by Miss Jane Addams, Miss Julia C. Lathrop and Dr. Alice Hamilton, of Hull House, who gained their first information from Dr. Clara Ferguson, for six years ass-

PLOT TO MURDER BODY OF TROOPS

Several Town Officials of Moncada Implicated in Plot

TO SET A HOUSE ON FIRE

And Massacre the Garrison when they Came from Their Quarters to Extinguish the Flames.

Manila, Nov. 6.—A plot to massacre the American garrison at Moncada, Province of Tarlac, Island of Luzon, has been revealed by the wife of one of the conspirators.

Several of the town officials are implicated in the murderous scheme. The woman who revealed the plot hid a detective beneath a house in which the leaders of the conspiracy were meeting. Arrests followed, and many incriminating papers were seized.

The plan was to set fire after dark to a house close to the barracks, and when the soldiers came out to assist in extinguishing the flames 150 conspirators armed with bolos were to rush on the guard, capture their arms and proceed to massacre the garrison.

PASSED TREASON LAWS.

Manila, Nov. 6.—The United States Philippine Commission to-day passed the treason laws with slight alterations. Several Filipinos spoke against them.

For Girl Waiters on Cars

Denver, Col., Nov. 7.—Pretty girls will be employed as waiters on the dining cars used by the Denver and Rio Grande railway. Such is the plan of T. L. Barnes, superintendent of eating-houses and dining car service on the Missouri Pacific, who will shortly take charge of the same branch of service on the Denver and Rio Grande. Mr. Barnes was here to-day in consultation with Manager Herbert of the Rio Grande.

"Girls are neater, cleaner and quicker than men in dining-room service," said Mr. Barnes. "I shall employ them first in Colorado to see how the public takes it and if it is satisfactory may introduce the plan on the Missouri Pacific."

A DRAMATIC SCENE IN ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH.

Father Crowley, an Excommunicated Priest Was Discovered in the Cathedral—Lights Put Out and High Mass Abandoned

Chicago, Nov. 6.—There was an interesting dramatic scene in His Holy Name cathedral on Sunday, when in the presence of 1,000 parishioners, Jeremiah Crowley, the excommunicated Roman Catholic priest was publicly humiliated by order of the authorities of the church.

Father Crowley had entered the church unobserved, passing up the center aisle and had taken a seat almost under the pulpit. Solemn high mass was being celebrated at the time. When the presence of Father Crowley became known Rev. Francis J. Barry, chancellor of the archdiocese of Chicago was hurriedly sent for. Upon entering the cathedral he went straight to the seat where the excommunicated clergyman was kneeling and ordered him to leave the church. Father Crowley refused to go, saying:

"Put me out, if you dare."

The strain was intense, and one woman in the congregation fainted. There was no resort to force, however. Chancellor Barry signalled to a man in the choir loft and the sound of the organ ceased and the singing of the choir was hushed. The priests on the altar stopped the solemn service at the end of the Gloria, and walked to the benches and laid aside their golden vestments. The altar boys marched out of the sanctuary through a side door and the priests clad in their cassocks followed. The next moment the hundreds of incandescent lights in the vaulted arches were extinguished and the candle lights on the altar were put out. The strain was broken when Chancellor Barry appeared in the pulpit and said:

"Owing to the presence in this sacred edifice of an excommunicated priest the solemn high mass has been suspended. We will proceed with a low mass."

No sermon was delivered, however, and the mass was at an end before the congregation was calm again. The parishioners lingered around the cathedral and watched the deposed priest as he hurried away. None spoke to him.

In a statement issued Sunday night Father Crowley insists that it had been his desire to avoid involving any any of his brother priests in contesting the order depriving him of the privilege of worshipping in Catholic churches and that accordingly he had attended the church of Archbishop Feehan's own parish which is the cathedral. He announced that he should continue to attend the services of the Roman Catholic church.

The Complainant Fainted

Toronto, Nov. 6.—John Bean, a youth of 16, was arraigned in the Criminal Assizes yesterday afternoon charged with assaulting, criminally, a girl named Jennie Cathcart in Whitchurch Township, on May 31st last. The prisoner pleaded not guilty, and was surprised that his lawyer, Mr. F. C. B. Knowles, of Newmarket was not in court to defend him. Mr. Knowles was telegraphed to, and replied that he had not been retained. Mr. Justice Ferguson, according to the custom usually followed in such contingencies, assigned a member of the bar, who happened to be in the court room, to defend the prisoner. After a few minutes' consultation with Bean, Mr. Hassard was ready to go on with the case.

After giving her evidence, the complainant—a sickly-looking girl of fourteen—fainted and was attended by one of the physicians who were present as witnesses for the Crown.

FOUND GUILTY.

In spite of a powerful plea on the prisoner's behalf, by Barrister A. R. Hassard, sixteen-year-old John Beane was to-day found guilty of a serious crime preferred by a girl of Whitchurch, two years his junior. The crime is a most serious one and the penalty of death is empowered by law, but seldom enforced. The boy will be sentenced in a few days.

During his address to the jury His Lordship remarked that he considered it his duty to thank Mr. A. R. Hassard, who had been assigned to defend the prisoner, in the absence of his own counsel, and who had accepted the assignment and fulfilled his duty with marked ability.

ANARCHIST UP FOR MURDER

New Jersey Weaver Arrested on Charge of Slaying Traitorous Comrade

New York, Nov. 7.—Antonio Livenro, a silk weaver, was arrested to-day charged with the murder of Frank Panizzone at Summit, N.J., on the night of March 17. Livenro is an avowed anarchist. It is asserted that he killed Panizzone, who was a friend of Bresci, the slayer of King Humbert, because Panizzone was believed to have given information to the authorities about Italian anarchists. Panizzone conducted a boardinghouse in Summit, N.J., and had for his patrons many silk weavers. Livenro was one. Employees of the silk mills met in the boarding-house to discuss matters relating to the anarchistic groups in Paterson and various parts of the United States.

More Loot from China

London, November, 7.—The steamship Krefeld, says the Berlin correspondent of The Times, has just brought to Germany 185 ancient bronze guns, which formerly stood on the walls of Pekin.

The inscriptions on the guns show that they were cast more than 200 years ago in Chinese arsenals, under the superintendence of the Jesuits. The Krefeld also brought a number of Chinese gun carriages, with ammunition and wagons.

The most ornamental of the guns will be placed in the Naval Museum at Berlin. The others will be melted for the sake of the bronze in them.

The guns mentioned in the foregoing were probably made in the early part of the 17th century. The Jesuits first entered China in 1580, and in spite of various edicts against them, succeeded in increasing their influence to a remarkable extent. Schaal, a German Jesuit, about the year 1650, became one of the foremost men in the Empire, and, some time afterward, the founder of the present dynasty, the Manchus, ordered him to reform the calendar.

Most of the famous astronomical instruments at Pekin, some of which have recently been taken to Germany were made at about the same period as the cannon referred to in the despatch.

Thinner Than a Rail

Spending every day, as much energy as you make, and if the balance goes a little farther, well, you get thinner. Not wise to go that way longer. Better use Ferrozone, you will digest more—a little gain the first week, but the gain keeps growing. Not quite so thin! Keep right on, only don't use Ferrozone too long, or you will get too fat. Then your blood will be rich, your heart strong, and you won't puff so much, you won't get tired quickly. Fat, blood, strength, you have them all with Ferrozone. Sold by Ormond & Walsh, price 50c.

CHILI WILL AID COLOMBIA

In Return for Support at the Pan-American Congress

London, Nov. 7.—It is reported that Colombia has signed a secret treaty with Chili, undertaking to support Chili at the Pan-American Congress in Mexico City says the Buenos Ayres correspondent of The Times. "Chili promising to supply Colombia with munitions of war against Venezuela. It is stated that Chili had previously offered warships to Ecuador."

AN APPEAL FOR THE FLY

By Our Junior Reporter.

Speak gently to the buzzing fly,
Nor swat him on your head,
His jig is nearly up, and he
Will be a long time dead.
Do not anchant, or slap or swat,
Or words sulphurous utter.

But help him to firm footing when
He tumbles in the butter.
Consider—were your life as brief
You'd do the same as he,
And buzz and bite until you came
To lay your down and dee.

Rheumatic Pains Cured by Nerviline

This is the testimony of Mr. Benjamin Dillon, of Leeds, Ont., who says: I feel it my duty to proclaim the marvellous value of Polson's Nerviline as an infallible cure for rheumatic pains; it cures them every time. Nothing I know of equals it as a household liniment, and mothers should feel it as necessary as bread itself. Nerviline has cured thousands of 20 years standing, and can cure you. Instant relief, absolute cure large bottle 25c.

Ancient Boats Discovered

Toronto, Nov. 7.—Wellington Thompson, police magistrate at Port Maitland, on Lake Erie, has written to Mr. Frank Yeigh of the Ontario Historical Association, a description of two boats he has discovered, which are veterans of the war of 1812. They are made of cedar and fastened together with wooden pins. In them were found weapons, such as old knives with deer horn handles, and ammunition in the nature of grape shot, which was used for cannon ball. BITTER HATE OF GERMANS TO BRITAIN

The Nation Does Not Feel the Friendship that once Existed

TO RAISE TROUBLE OVER RUSSIA

British Criticisms of the Kaiser's Message to Kruger Were an Insult and a Day of Reckoning is Coming.

London, Nov. 6.—The Berlin correspondent of the Times, after reviewing and commenting upon Great Britain's policy toward Germany, favors a direct agreement between Great Britain and Russia in regard to certain international matters. He asserts that Germany is about to make Persia a European question. The correspondent quotes a recently published lecture by Count Richard Moulinackart, who says that while Great Britain believes her recent treatment of the Emperor William has made him her friend, British criticisms of the Kaiser's message to Kruger were an insult to the whole German nation, and a day of reckoning is coming. The same authority declares Germany has been tricked a hundred times by Great Britain, but now she will not allow herself to be hampered in any way by Great Britain throughout the globe.

The Berlin branch of the German Students' Association has passed a resolution congratulating the University of Greifswald on its protest against the comparison by Joseph Chamberlain of the British and German methods of warfare. The resolution declares Chamberlain's words a libel on "our glorious army, which in battle won the Empire."

The Times correspondent points out that the Berliner Nachrichten, which is most hostile in its criticisms of British army methods, is owned by Krupp, who sells cannon to Great Britain.

FOMENTING DISCORD.

Rome, Nov. 6.—Perseveranza, quoted by the correspondent of the Times in the Italian capital, states that biased telegraphic agencies unfairly summarized for Continental publication the recent speech of Mr. Chamberlain at Edinburgh. The Times' correspondent intimates that the Italian Agenzia Stefani is much to blame for the spread of Anglophobia in Italy, and remarks that most of the London correspondents of Italian papers ably second it.

LI HUNG CHANG IS DYING AT PEKIN

His Death May Cause a Great Influence Over the World

CONFIDENTIAL AGENT OF RUSSIA

Announcement at Pekin That the Distinguished Oriental Statesman is at Death's Door.

Pekin, Nov. 6.—12.40 p.m.—Li Hung Chang, the veteran Chinese statesman and intriguer, is approaching his latter end. It was announced this morning that he is dying. The death of the aged Oriental diplomat may exercise a great influence upon the affairs of the world, seeing that several European nations are deeply interested in the settlement of the Manchurian question, in which Li Hung Chang played a great part and is in part alleged to have acted as the confidential agent of Russia.

THE GOLD LAKE PARTY

A [illegible] by Pigeon Post From the Snowdon Bay Hunters

Wednesday, 2.30 p.m.

Dear Times,—The boys are having a superb time, only we miss some of the old faces who are not with us this year, and the result is that our buttermilk is holding out splendidly. Chief Snowden carries the boys and never wanders away from camp for fear of losing them. Seven deer is the number to date. Tell Tom Beddy that Calamity Canal is still a yawning chasm of wet. We are keeping one of our best haunches of venison for the great family journal. Ad. Georgeroger has been unanimously elected chaplain. No more till next time.

Fifteen Thousand Claimants in Albany

Albany, Nov. 7.—The State Legislature in 1859 appointed a commission, consisting of the Adjutant-General and Inspector-General, to receive proof and determine the sums due for contingent expenses of the militia of this state incurred in the war with Great Britain in 1812. This commission accordingly received proofs and ascertained and determined the sums due for contingent expenses, to certain citizens of this State. The Committee on Ways and Means of the Assembly in 1865 made an exhaustive report on the subject to the Legislature, wherein it was shown that the certificates issued by the commission authorized in 1859 did not constitute a claim against the State; that the State undertook the payment of these certificates only upon receipt of means from the United States; that in fact these certificates were merely proceedings to put the claims of citizens of the State in a proper legal and certified condition. The Governor and Adjutant-General of the State are constantly receiving requests to look after and secure the payment of certificates. The agent appointed to look after claims of the State against the United States, has made repeated efforts for years to obtain the action of Congress in favor of these claims, but with no success, and of course neither the Governor nor the Adjutant-General can do anything until the Government furnishes the means.

The claimants number 15,000 and the amount involved, which it is expected the Federal Government [illegible] will refund, aggregates [illegible]

TURKEY AS A DEBTOR

In sending a fleet to threaten a Turkish port France is taking the traditional way to collect a debt from the Sultan. The United States was more fortunate. After prolonged delay the government at Constantinople handed over the promised indemnity without waiting for a military demonstration. The inside history of the transaction would prove interesting reading. The peaceful pressure brought to bear by the United States must have been powerful, for ordinarily a nation has to threaten force to bring Abdul Hamid to terms.

A characteristic instance of Turkish procedure under circumstances somewhat similar to those now existing, occurred in 1897. Herr Brazzafelli, agent at Mersina, Asia Minor, of the Austrian-Lloyd Steamship company, was expelled under the charge of plotting against the government. At the request of Austria he was allowed to return, but when he landed the local officers refused him protection from the mob. The Austrian consul interfered in his behalf and was repeatedly insulted. The Vienna government insisted that the two high officials of the district be dismissed, that the Austrian flag be saluted and that Turkey promise to correct grievances of the Austrian Railway company. The Sultan delayed giving satisfaction as usual and Austria sent its squadron to Mersina. Notice was served that the town would be bombarded if Turkey did not agree to the conditions named by noon the next day. After midnight the Austrian ambassador was notified that his demands would be met.

It is the custom of the Sultan to hold out until the last moment in all such cases. Then he usually attempts to secure a compromise. He has found his diplomacy successful. Turkey has secured the desired reputation of such an outrageously bad debtor that most powers are willing to scale down their demands 50 per cent. if by so doing they can get cash instead of a promissory note. It is not Turkey's policy to fight or to allow any of its cities to be destroyed. Its aim is simply to prolong its existence by persistent inaction.

Fifty Three Indians Die

Sioux City, Iowa, Nov. 6.—Reports from the Winnebago Indian reservation in Nebraska are to the effect that fifty-three of the 1,100 Indians of the agency have died from the smallpox epidemic there raging. There is no adequate medical force to care for them and the disease threatens the destruction of the tribe. Every town within twenty miles has established regular guards, who keep away every Indian. The Indians are scattered over 1,156 acres, and many lie sick die without medical attention.

Recently there have been several cases of prominent men suddenly falling in collapse just after eating a hearty meal. These men have all been under treatment for gastric "trouble," and yet the result shows that the treatment they had received had smothered the symptoms but had not retarded the progress of the disease.

There is a real danger in the use of palliatives when there is disease of the stomach and its allied organs of digestion and nutrition. The disease in such cases goes on, while the distressing symptoms alone are stopped. Presently, like a smothered fire, the disease breaks out in new places, involving heart, lungs, liver, kidneys, or some other organ.

The use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery results in a radical cure of diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It cures diseases of heart, lungs, liver, kidneys, etc., when the disease of these organs has its origin in the diseased condition of the stomach and digestive and nutritive system.

"I will tell you what myself and family think of your medicine," writes Mr. M. M. Wardwell, of Linwood, Leavenworth Co., Kansas. "It will do all you say, and more. I was taken sick nine years ago; I got so weak I couldn't lie down, nor hardly sit up; was that way two or three months. I picked up one of Dr. Pierce's Memorandum Books one day and saw your description of catarrh of the stomach. I thought it hit my case. We had a bottle of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery in the house that was got for my mother. You recommend it for catarrh of the stomach, so I went to taking it. The one bottle nearly cured me. I got two bottles next time and took one and one-half and was well. Your medicine cost me three dollars and the doctor cost me fourteen dollars."

The above testimonial was given two years ago, and as the Captain lately stated he was still quite free from Bronchitis. It proves Catarrhozone a veritable specific. EVERYBODY READS THE TIMES

A Few Pointers That Advertisers Would Do Well to Remember.

Josh Billings: "I lug a rooster for two things—one is the crow that is in him and the other is the spurs that air on him to bak up his craw with."

The Times has become a popular paper, not only amongst the people of the town and Ashburnham, but also amongst the residents of the surrounding towns and villages.

Mr. G. H. Hilliard, of Lakefield, says the Times is regarded as [illegible] the [illegible] paper that [illegible] in that burg, and is read by very many in the village.

Wm. O'Brien, the genial clerk of Douro, who has long been a subscriber to the daily edition, says that the Times is the popular paper in that township, 95 per cent. of the people being readers. He hopes that it may long keep up its onward pace.

Mr. Wm. Cullen, Reeve of Burleigh and Anstruther, states that the whole back country reads the Times, and regard the paper as one of the very best. He says that it is always full of good things.

Mr. P. P. Young, Young's Point, says everybody reads the Times in that locality. It is admirably conducted.

Mr. James Stevenson, ex-M.P., says the Times is the brightest and best newspaper published in Peterborough.

Commodore Calcutt says he would sooner miss his breakfast than miss getting the Times. It is a [illegible] only equalled by Calcutt's celebrated ale.

Mr. J. B. Thurston, Otonabee, says the Times is very popular in that village and is widely read.

Rev. Mr. [illegible] thinks the Times deserves great credit for its progressive spirit. It is up-to-date, giving all the news up to four o'clock each morning.

[illegible] Mr. [illegible] and another of North Smith, brought us in a couple of clubs for the Weekly Times of 30 names. Here are 30 names from one section of Smith, that are constant readers of the Times.

Mr. Harry Garbett, Reeve of Smith, says that the Times is the popular paper in that locality.

Mr. James Baptie, Springville, gives similar evidence, and says you can hardly go into a house in his locality that the Times is not present.

Mr. Pearson, the great horse buyer, of Montreal, told the Times the other day that he had better results from the advertisement in the Times than from any other paper. He says he finds the Times is read by almost everybody in the district. He knows this, for almost every horse he buys is the product of the Times advertisement.

Mr. T. Donaldson, Cavan, member of the Counties' Council of Northumberland and Durham, says that the Times is very popular in Cavan.

Mr. James Chambers, Manvers, bears similar testimony in regard to Manvers Township.

Dr. Bingham, the popular city Medical Health Officer, missed his Times the other morning, and came to the office for a copy. He said he was not feeling well, and wondered what was the matter, until he remembered he had not had his Times.

The above are a few of the many evidences we have in our possession of the high regard in which this great family journal is held by the people. Merchants and other advertisers should remember that hundreds upon hundreds of families throughout the town and country cannot be reached by any other way except through the Times.

Lindsay Post.—Mr. Donald Robertson, of the Scotch Line, Verulam, recently sold eight hogs to Mr. J. Bell, drover of Dunsford, and received $164.[illegible] for the lot. The animals were monsters, being only six months old.

The Old Gray Mare.

SHORT STORY FOR THE DAY.

Farmer John Carter had fed the pigs, shut the henhouse door and come around to the side veranda to smoke his evening pipe, with his wife Nancy, who sat in the big rocking chair. She had placed his pipe and tobacco within easy reach. Farmer John sat down with a grunt, rubbed at his stiff knee a minute, and then, instead of filling his pipe, he slowly turned to his wife and said:

"Nancy, I want to know what's wrong with our Milly?"

"What on earth do you mean?" exclaimed the wife, and ceased rocking so suddenly that she almost shot out of the chair.

"Don't try to fool me," he continued, as he slowly shook his head. "I ain't been askin' no questions before, but I seen for two or three weeks that things was wrong with Milly."

"She's been kind o' draggy since she got wet goin' to camp-meetin', but I guess it's nothin' to worry about. You don't think we ought to have a doctor do you?"

"I think, Nancy," he slowly replied after a half minute—"I think I'm goin' to find out what's the matter with Milly, and if you won't tell me I'll go over and have a few words with Sile Johnson. Mebbe he knows."

"How should he know?" asked Nancy, as she rocked furiously.

"Dunno, but I guess I'll walk over there to-night."

"Well, I guess you won't. John Carter, why can't you mind your own business?"

"Dunno, but I want to see Sile Johnson."

"You are always pokin' around and makin' an old hen-hussy of yourself, and I expect you'll get up and put on one of my dresses some mornin'. Now then, bein' you are so full of curiosity lemme tell you somethin'. Our Milly and Sile have had a tiff."

"Had a row, eh?" queried John, as he settled himself down to hear the particulars.

"No sir, they haven't," she snapped. "I said a tiff, and there's a heap o' difference between a tiff and a row."

"But they got mad at each other?"

"Yes they did, and I'm backin' Milly for all I'm worth. You know the day she went over to Eli Warner's to see Sarah. Well, there was a windmill man at Warner's that day, and because the two girls sung the 'Sweet Bye and Bye,' while he played on the organ, Silas called Milly a flirt."

"And she got mad?"

"Of course."

"And he got mad?"

"Of course."

"And he hasn't been here for two weeks, and Milly is goin' around lookin' as if she wanted to die? I must go over and see Sile and tell him she's all over bein' mad and wants to be friends agin."

"What, what! John Carter, are you a born fool!" almost shouted Nancy, as she rose from her chair. "Don't you dare stir one single step! You'd make a pretty mess of things if they was left to you, wouldn't you?"

"But something has got to be done," he protested with anxious voice. "Milly and Sile have been lovin' each other over two years, and we mustn't let 'em fall out over a little thing like that."

"There's [illegible] to be done [illegible] thing. It's for you to keep out of it. Milly has got a mother, and that mother sits right here, and what she don't know about lovers' quarrels you needn't try to learn her. Now you mind what I tell you. I'm expectin' Sile Johnson will come sneakin' around any day, but if he does don't you say one word about the quarrel. Just treat him as if you didn't know anything had happened. He begun the quarrel, and he's got to be the one to eat 'humble pie.'"

"But suppose he sticks out about it, and busts up the marriage?"

"I shan't suppose nothing of the sort. If he don't fall off the barn and break his neck he'll be back here and very humble within two weeks."

Mrs. Nancy Carter thought she knew young Silas Johnson pretty well, and that he didn't differ much from the generality of lovers, but she was mistaken. He was an obstinate young man, and though it caused him loss of sleep and appetite he refused to be the first to give in. One word from Milly would have brought him over to the Carter farm house on the jump, but backed by a feeling of injury and her mother she refused to speak of it. It thus came about that the "tiff" threatened to have disastrous consequences, and there was a possibility of two lives being wrecked. One evening when she was forced to realize this, Nancy quietly asked of her husband:

"John, did you see Silas anywhere around when you was passin' the farm the other day?"

"Yes," was the reply. "He was buildin' a fence just beyond the barn. Is it all off between Milly and him?"

"Can't say whether 'tis or not. Did you ever know our old gray mare to run away?"

"But if something did, John! If Milly was drivin' her to town and she ran away what would happen?"

"She'd probably stop for breath after going about five rods," laughed the husband.

"She wouldn't kick the wagon to pieces or kill Milly?"

"She might fetch up in a fence corner and bump her own head, but I guess that would be the worst of it. What's up, Nancy?"

"Nothin' for you to know. You just keep quiet, and lemme work this thing out by myself. Milly's goin' to town after a darnin'-needle and a spool of black thread after dinner tomorrer and she'll drive the old mare."

After dinner next day the horse was hitched to a light wagon and left standing under a shed in the barnyard until wanted. When Milly was ready for her trip the mother brought the outfit around, taking much more time than seemed necessary. Moreover, when the old mare, who had passed her 20th birthday, was brought up at the gate, she was what Milly called "wriggly." That is, she was nervous and restless, and evidently full of go. She had to be held by the bit while the girl got in and secured the lines.

"She acts real colty to-day," said the mother, as she patted the mare's nose, "but she'll steady down before you get to the schoolhouse. She has never run away in her life, but if she should do so now—"

"I'll [illegible] I won't go," interrupted Milly.

"You go right along. As I was sayin' if she should run away you hold her steady in the middle of the road and scream for help. Now let her g'lang."

The old grey mare moved off with a rush and for a quarter of a mile she maintained a pace to surprise her driver. Then she suddenly gave a squeal and broke into a run. Milly dropped the [illegible] and she also remembered her mother's injunction to scream. Silas Johnson was still working on the fence just beyond the barn. He was calling himself a fool and thinking he would give five years of his life to make up with Milly, when he heard screams and a clatter down the road. He grasped the situation at a glance.

It is none of [illegible] whether he jumped to do or die, whether he made a hero of himself or not, whether the "wriggly" old mare was glad of an excuse to stop her frantic efforts to continue her wild flight. It is sufficient that he stopped her, that the screaming Milly fell into his arms, that after a time he drove her back home and didn't return to his fence-building again that day.

The main point of interest shifts to that side veranda again. Nancy is sitting there alone, with a smile of triumph on her face when John comes up from the barn and holds up to view a dozen burrs and innocently says:

"Nancy this is mighty curious. I found all the burrs under the harness, and they must have [illegible] made the old mare run [illegible]."

"Very likely," she replied, without looking up.

"And somebody must have put 'em there."

"Yes."

"And—and—it was—?"

"Silas says he thinks they ought to be married next month," says Nancy, as she looks up and almost winks at the puzzled face above her.

A LARGE FLEET MENACES TURKEY

Paris, Nov. 6.—The Franco-Turkish dispute is far from being settled, as has been reported. The sending of the Mediterranean squadron under Admiral Caillard into Turkish waters has led the Italian Government to make a counterbalancing naval demonstration. The second division of the Italian Mediterranean squadron, which has left for Turkish waters, will join the first division, which has been cruising in the eastern Mediterranean for some time.

It appears also that the Greek warships, Psara, Hydra, Spetzai and [illegible] are now at Smyrna, where is also the Russian Mediterranean squadron. It is believed that the British squadron now at Piraeus, Greece, will be ordered to proceed to Smyrna.

READY TO JOIN CAILLARD.

It is expected that Admiral Caillard will be joined en route by the torpedo cruiser Condor which is stationed in Cretan waters, and may be met by the torpedo destroyer Vautour, which is stationed at Constantinople. It is also probable that the armored cruiser Admiral [illegible], which arrived at Port Said, Egypt, from the far east, is being held there in order to join Admiral Caillard if needed. It is further reported that three other warships are held in readiness at Toulon to reinforce him should their presence be necessary.

According to despatches from Toulon all the officers [illegible] of the garrison now on leave of absence have been ordered to join their respective commands immediately.

The cruisers Du Chayla and Cassard are ready to sail at a moment's notice and the battleships Bouvet and Jaureguiberry will be ready Tuesday.

This morning M. Delcasse, minister of foreign affairs, telegraphed M. Bapst, councillor of the French embassy in Constantinople, directing him to present to-day to Tewfik Pasha, Ottoman minister of foreign affairs, a note asking how the Turkish government proposes to pay the Lorando claim and demanding the execution of the sultan's irade dealing with that matter.

FRANCE DEMANDS HER RIGHTS.

The note will also request satisfaction regarding the rights of France which are defined in the various capitulations and treaties and which in some cases have not been respected and in others have been encroached upon by Turkey.

This declaration of what has been done bears out the statement cabled yesterday regarding the intentions of the French government.

Admiral Caillard is expected to reach his destination tomorrow. The foreign office has received no news from him since his division left the other divisions of the Mediterranean squadron en route for Turkish waters four days ago.

It is pointed out that the absence of news is not surprising, as the instruction to Admiral Caillard were to steer due south and to avoid passing in sight of Bonifacio, Corsica, or traversing the strait of Messina in order to prevent his movements being signaled. The vessels of the division carried only a normal supply of coal, but this would be much more than sufficient to enable them to steam 1,600 miles, the estimated distance they must cover before reaching their destination.

MINE HAS FABULOUS RICHES

Phoenix, Ariz., Nov. 6.—The American Mining [illegible] contains the following article about the great United Verde mine, the property of Senator W. A. Clark, which, if correct, would indicate that it is probably the richest mine and he is the richest man in the world:

"It has only lately come to light that the average value of the ore taken from the United Verde is [illegible] per ton in all values—gold, silver and copper. This mine, so far as has been developed, including explorations and diamond drilling below the present workings, shows an immense ore chimney, 400x600 feet across, that has been explored by shafts tunnels and drill holes to a depth of 1,400 feet.

"Just how far [illegible] to work this mine down before the heat limit is reached is hard to say but a reasonable estimate would be 3,000 feet. An estimate by one of the best mining engineers in this country shows that the mine to the depth of 1,000 feet contains [illegible] cubic feet of ore, and estimating [illegible] cubic feet to the ton there is practically [illegible] tons in sight.

"If we carry the figures a little further on the present known values of the United Verde we have the average value of the ore equaling [illegible]. The present owner of the property has refused [illegible] for the mine."

AFFAIRS IN AFRICA.

Pretoria, Nov. 6.—The [illegible] Gen. Botha's counter-proclamation to Lord Kitchener's recent proclamation declares [illegible]

"Whereas, no official of the Orange Free State or the Transvaal Republic, and no general, commandant, or burgher, intends to obey Lord Kitchener's proclamation or to trouble with it.

"And, whereas, Lord Kitchener's proclamation has strengthened the determination of all burghers to resist to the end; now.

"Therefore, I, Louis Botha, commandant-general of the Republican forces, with the consent of the Governments, officers, and burghers of both Republics, proclaim Lord Kitchener, his staff, and the officers and soldiers serving under his orders fighting us now to be outlaws in South Africa, and all officers and burghers in the two Republics and in Cape Colony are ordered to shoot every armed Englishman whom they meet."

Three hundred burgher police, under Captain Malcolm, in three weeks had four encounters with Boers and killed two in the neighborhood of Dewetsdorp. They brought in a 15-pounder gun belonging to U Battery, which the Boers captured at Vlakfontein. This gun was found hidden under the rocks between Dewetsdorp and Wepener. The police also brought in 12 horses and saddles. They captured 12 Boers, including ten wounded men. Their casualties were two men wounded.

[illegible] TO AFRICA.

London, Nov. 6.—It does not often happen that two princes are ordered to the front with their regiments at the same time, but this has just happened in the case of Prince Arthur of Connaught and Prince Alexander of Teck, who are both officers in the Seventh Hussars.

The Seventh Hussars are now considered quite as fashionable a regiment as the Tenth regiment, to which the late Duke of Clarence was attached. Prince Arthur is very popular at Aldershot, where there is great excitement among the ladies that he is going at so young an age to fight for his country.

[illegible] of flowers, it is quite well known, gold cigarette cases, even [illegible] poured in upon His Royal Highness day after day, mostly anonymously, to such an extent that for a time it was almost unbearable.

With his brother officers, among whom, [illegible] Colonel Lawley, who commands, are Major Poore, brother-in-law of the Duke of Hamilton; Major [illegible], brother of Lady [illegible] and Lady [illegible], and Major [illegible], brother of Lady Bradford. Prince Arthur is glad the Seventh has been ordered out. The men are proud to have the young Prince with them, judging from their enthusiastic cheering for His Royal Highness when the news was announced to them.

[illegible], Nov. 6.—The building of the great Trans-Siberian railway across Russia [illegible] was a gigantic task, but the engineers and builders had little to contend with there save the rigors of the climate at some seasons, the natural desolation of the country and the distance from a base of supplies.

But in the Uganda country the men who are running a thin line of steel rails into the [illegible] jungle, [illegible] of every kind—beasts, savage and insect. Some are big-game, the most of the attacking force, though they have caused scores of deaths among the coolies brought from India to do the construction work. [illegible] savages, who object to this intrusion on their lands, who understand little or nothing about the railroad and its uses, persistently attack the workmen from the depths of the jungle, destroy the track after the construction gangs have passed, and [illegible] not only miserable but dangerous for everyone connected with the big undertaking. Herds of elephants in playful mood now and then attack the [illegible] parts of the work, [illegible] days of patient labor to [illegible] and now and then a [illegible] lies down on the track and blocks further progress.

INSECT PESTS ABOUND.

But, as if all this were not enough, Uganda [illegible] the native heath of the tsetse fly, deadly enemy of beasts of burden, horse and ox alike, and also of the "jigger," the no less insatiable insect [illegible] of man. The activity of the [illegible] made it necessary to transport all the materials used in building the first 300 miles of the line on the backs of native "carriers," but the attacks of the "jiggers" upon these men [illegible] so fierce, especially on the soles of their feet, that hundreds of carriers were incapacitated, and many of them were forced to have one or more of their toes amputated. In this part of the country, too, mile after mile stretches away in which no water is to be found, and all that was used by the thousands of men employed in laying the line had to be carried [illegible] from the coast and doled out in rations. At different times fever caught in the construction camp and once [illegible] per cent. of the men were on the sick list. [illegible]

[illegible] until the pair of man-eaters were killed off. This task was taken in hand by two of the engineers who already had [illegible] for the fray, his favorite servant having [illegible] itself that the lions attack the men. One of the [illegible] stalked into a railroad coach standing on a sidetrack and [illegible] one of the officials who was asleep. He yelled and struggled desperately, but the lion dragged him into the woods and literally devoured him alive. This startling attack created consternation in the camp and plans were laid to net the man eater. But two nights afterward he returned and sprang upon the roof of the station in which a number of railroad hands were sleeping. He tore fiercely at the sheets of corrugated iron of which the roof was made and in the morning the roof was wet with the blood from the animal's paws. Finding his efforts there fruitless, [illegible] had crouched for the rest of the night outside the station door, where he occupied himself in gnawing into small pieces the station's whole stock of red and green flags. [illegible] ago that still another lion, not satisfied with hunting along the railroad, boarded one of the trains. The train in question had been held up at the station over night and soon after the train hands were sent down to get it ready to go on, yells of unmistakable terror were heard and several of the white men hastily snatched their guns and started to the rescue. They found the hands drawn up in a little trembling crowd staring at a majestic-looking lion, who squatted calmly on the rear platform of one of the cars and was growling ominously.

It did not take long for a few men with guns to lay him low, and when it was quite safe to approach him he was propped up on his peculiar resting place and his photograph was taken.

A few months ago five native workmen deserted from the railroad yard and started across country. They were chased by four or five lions and at once climbed into the lower branches of a small tree. The lions [illegible] just below them content to wait for a meal which they felt certain would come to them in time. For two days the workmen hung there without food or water and then began one by one to drop off the tree from weakness, to be promptly devoured by the lions. One of the men managed to hang until after the lions had appeased their hunger and grown tired of waiting and then he escaped and told the story.

NATIVES REFUSE TO WORK.

The native tribes in the country through which the railway runs gave trouble from the first, and it was necessary that every company of engineers and porters should be accompanied by a strong guard to beat off their attacks. It had been expected that the tribes along the route would be depended upon to furnish men who would be willing to work as porters for pay, but this proved to have been a delusion. The natives declined the proffered employment. Their food, chiefly in the shape of bananas, grew without them; they had women to do all that was necessary; why should they work? The engineers found that even in districts where famine prevailed they could get practically no help from the natives. They are odd folk, these natives of Uganda, no less in their ideas than in costume. This generally consists of a breech clout and a short cloak slinging down their backs, while from the slits of their ears depend all sorts of queer and ponderous things, including all sorts of queer and ponderous things, including empty cans and jam pots.

It was because the natives refused to help in building the Uganda road that the British government brought practically all the working force from India. These men, who number about 20,000 are capable of standing the sun's rays, and work cheerfully and hard sixteen hours a day for little more than a handful of rice. It would be difficult to describe the aspect of the work more graphically than does Sir Harry Johnston, commissioner for Uganda, [illegible] he says in one of his reports, "If the importance of one aspect of the railway's construction has been realized. It means the driving of a wedge of India two miles broad, right across east Africa, from Mombasa to the Victoria Nyanza. Fifteen thousand coolies, some hundreds of Indian clerks, draughtsmen, mechanics, surveyors and policemen are implanting the use of the Hindustani language, are carrying the Indian penal code, Indian postal system, Indian coinage, Indian civilization right across these deserts, forests and swamps, tenanted hitherto by naked savages and wild beasts."

When the British Government went about building the Uganda railway it was calculated that it would cost about $15,000,000, and parliament voted that amount, but an expert who has just inspected the work gives as his opinion that when finished it will have cost $25,000,000. The line will probably be finished some time in 1902; at present about 300 miles are open for business, the passengers being principally merchants and coolies, [illegible] porters and British soldiers and officials. The natives themselves have not yet taken to riding on the railroad.

Despite the great cost of the project, it will probably be a success and will be followed by other railroads penetrating the jungle, and the explorer of the future may pursue his investigations—at least part of the way—in a parlor car.

A MARVELLOUS MEDICINE

"No Cure, No Pay," is the Newest Proposal of the Proprietors of Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—We make the following proposal to the readers of the Times: To any one who is a subject of rheumatism (no matter how long standing) or any blood disease, as enumerated below, and will give Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills a fair trial and do not find a perfect cure, we will refund the money paid for the pills. If no substantial improvement is observed, we will in addition, pay $10 in cash on satisfactory evidence being supplied us to this effect.

We have yet to know of a single case where these wonderful pills have not been almost entirely successful in effecting a cure. CANADA CHEMICAL CO.

Ex-Ald. Bailey, St. John's, writes: I cannot speak too highly of Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills. They worked a miracle in my case, and cured me after many years of suffering. I do not think their equal is to be obtained.

Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills are a positive and certain cure for la grippe, rheumatism, asthma, paralysis, catarrh, eczema, sciatica, backache, indigestion, all stomach and liver troubles, female complaints, even when the disease having been standing for many years, the most stubborn cases will yield. Price 50 cents per box. For sale by Ormond & Walsh. The Canada Chemical Company will forfeit $10 for any case that these pills do not help.

Dr. Clarke's Sure Cure for Catarrh, and Dr. Clarke's Sure Cure for Eczema same price. $10 will be paid for any case they will not permanently cure.

VARICOCELE AND STRICTURE

We guarantee the Latest Method Treatment discovered by Dr. Goldberg to be a permanent and positive cure for Varicocele and Stricture without cutting, stretching or loss of time. In Varicocele it absorbs the bagging or wormy condition, equalizes circulation; it at once stops pain in the groin, also stops all drains, thereby giving the organs their proper nutrition, consequently vitalizes the parts and restores lost powers. In Stricture it absorbs the tissue, stops smarting sensation, nervousness, weakness, backache, etc., while in all prostatic troubles it is the treatment par excellence. So positive are we that our Latest Method Treatment will cure you that you can

PAY WHEN CURED

You need pay nothing until you are convinced that a thorough and complete cure has been established. It makes no difference who has failed to cure you, call and see us, as we will give you a thorough examination free of charge and may be the means of saving you years of suffering.

Each time you call you see Dr. Goldberg personally

He has 18 diplomas, certificates, etc., which testify to his standing and abilities. The number of years we have been established in Detroit and the cures we effected have ranked us the foremost specialists of the country. Asthma Cure Free!

Asthmalene Brings Instant Relief and Permanent Cure in All Cases,

Sent ABSOLUTELY FREE on receipt of postal. Write your name and address plainly.

CHAINED FOR TEN YEARS
HAY FEVER
ASTHMA
EVERY BOTTLE BRINGS RELIEF.

There is nothing like Asthmalene. It brings instant relief, even in the worst cases. It cures when all else fails.

The Rev. C. F. WELLS, of Villa Ridge, Ill., says: "Your trial bottle of Asthmalene received in good condition. I cannot tell you how thankful I feel for the good derived from it. I was a slave, chained with putrid sore throat and Asthma for ten years. I despaired of ever being cured. I saw your advertisement for the cure of this dreadful and tormenting disease, Asthma, and thought you had overspoken yourselves, but resolved to give it a trial. To my astonishment, the trial acted like a charm. Send me a full-size bottle."

REV. DR. MORRIS WECHSLER

New York, Jan. 3, 1901.

Drs. Taft Bros.' Medicine Co.:

Gentlemen: Your Asthmalene is an excellent remedy for Asthma and Hay Fever, and its composition alleviates all troubles which combine with Asthma. Its success is astonishing and wonderful.

After having it carefully analyzed, we can state that Asthmalene contains no opium, morphine, chloroform or ether. Very truly yours,
REV. DR. MORRIS WECHSLER.

Avon Springs, N. Y., Feb. 1, 1901.

Dr. Taft Bros. Medicine Co.

Gentlemen: I write this testimonial from a sense of duty, having tested the wonderful effect of your Asthmalene, for the cure of Asthma. My wife has been afflicted with spasmodic asthma for the past 12 years. Having exhausted my own skill as well as many others, I chanced to see your sign upon your windows at 130th street, New York. I at once obtained a bottle of Asthmalene. My wife commenced taking it about the 1st of November. I very soon noticed a radical improvement. After using one bottle her asthma has disappeared and she is entirely free from all symptoms. I feel that I can consistently recommend the medicine to all who are afflicted with this distressing disease. Yours respectfully,
O. D. PHELPS, M. D.

Dr. Taft Bros. Medicine Co.

Gentlemen: I was troubled with Asthma for 22 years. I have tried numerous remedies but they have all failed. I ran across your advertisement and started with a trial bottle. I found relief at once. I have since purchased your full-size bottle and I am ever grateful. I have a family of four children and for six years was unable to work. I am now in the best of health and am doing business every day. This testimony you can make such use of as you see fit.

Cancer Growing Two Years

Not long ago, we had the pleasure receiving the following letter:

"When I began your treatment there was a hard lump in my breast, which had been growing for two years, and it was so bad at last that it drew the nipple in. I consulted two doctors, and they both pronounced it cancer, and advised me to have my breast cut off. Your remedy, however, was recommended to me by a friend, and I am very thankful to say that it not only saved my life, but did away with the necessity of having to undergo the painful operation, which I so much dreaded."

We do not publish the names of those who give us testimonials for the gratification of the curious, but any sufferer from cancer or tumor, may have the name and address of the lady who wrote the above, by sending 2 stamps to Stott & Jury, Bowmanville, Ont.

Deer in Stony Lake.

Yesterday Mr. Fred Doughty returned from Jack's lake, where the Hatton-Strickland hunting party are camped. The party are having good luck, although the woods are full of hunters. While Mr. Doughty was paddling from Julian's landing to Burleigh, he spied a deer in the water, and shot it. It proved to be a very fine one. Mr. Doughty brought it home with him.

Council Did Not Meet.

There was no meeting of the Town Council last night, the business in connection with the sewer contracts not being ready to take up. It will probably meet this evening.

True as Gospel

If you toot your little tooter and lay aside your horn—there's not a soul in ten short days will know that you were born; the man who gathers pumpkins is the man who plows all day, and the man that keeps a-humping is the man who makes it pay; the man who advertises with a short and sudden jerk, is the man who blames the printer because it didn't work; the man who gets the business pulls a long and steady pull, and keeps the local papers for years and years quite full; he plans his advertisements in a clear and thoughtful way, and keeps forever at it, and thus he makes it pay. If you don't believe this, just take a few small dimes, and buy a little corner, in the progressive Morning Times.

—Messrs. R. Neill, W. G. Morrow and D. Walker, of town, and Mr. F. Bailey, of Toronto, left yesterday morning to join the hunting party now at Sandy Point Lodge, on Kotchecum Lake.

—Mr. Arthur Bell, son of Mr. F. E. Bell, of town, is now in San Francisco, having been transferred from the Skagway branch of the Bank of Commerce to the branch in the city of the Golden Gate.

—Mr. Frank Bell, the genial representative of the Port Hope Brewery, spent yesterday in town booking orders for the goods of this well known concern. Mr. Bell reports business exceptionally good, along the line.

The Musical Festival

The concert to be given by the Royal Chorus in the market hall this evening will be undoubtedly largely patronized. The object to which the proceeds are to be contributed—the Children's Aid Society and colors for the 57th—should certainly commend this musical festival to the public, to say nothing of the enjoyment that will be afforded by the programme. The chorus is to be assisted by Miss Hendren, soloist, the 57th band, the C.G.E. Glee Club and other popular local talent.

The Royal Chorus Concert

Following is the programme for the Royal Chorus festival in the Market Hall this evening, Nov. 7th:—

PART ONE.

1. "The Maple Leaf," Festival Chorus and 57th Regiment Band.
2. Song, "There's no Flag Like the Red, White and Blue," Harris, Master Mowat.
3. Song, "My Ship's the Girl for me," from Dolly Varden Opera, Mr. W. Stocker.
4. "Hail Bright Abode," Wagner, Festival Chorus and Two Pianos.
5. Solo, "Auld Robin Gray," Lady Anne Lindsay, Miss M. Hendren.
6. "Our Country and Our King," Torrington, Festival Chorus and 57th Regiment Band.
7. Song, "The Deathless Army," Mr. James Dawson.

PART TWO.

8. Selection, 57th Regiment Band.
9. Song, "Ship Builder's Song," De Koven, from comic opera Foxy Quiller, Mr. G. W. Mulligan.
10. Solo, Mrs. W. Daly.
11. Solo, "Massa in de Cold, Cold Ground," with imitation banjo accompaniment by the C. G. E. Glee Club, Mr. J. Dawson.
12. Solo, "A Russian Love Song," Landella, Across the Steppers, Miss M. Hendren.
13. Hallelujah Chorus, (Messiah) Handel, Festival Chorus and Two Pianos. The audience will please stand during the rendition of this number.
14. Song, "Deep in the Mine," Jude, H. Milne.
15. "God Save the King," The audience will please stand for three verses.

DEATHS

COVENEY—In Ashburnham, on Tuesday, Nov. 5, 1901, Catherine Coveney, daughter of Stephen Coveney, aged 19 years, 10 months.

The funeral will take place from the family residence, No. 24 Auburn street, Ashburnham, this afternoon, Nov. 7th, at 2.30 o'clock, and proceed to the Little Lake cemetery.

FOOD FOR GIRLS

Should be Fed Just Right When Growing

When parents are at a loss to know what kind of food to supply their boys and girls it will interest them to know of the experience of some mothers in the selection of food that actually does rebuild and nourish the young folks in their school duties.

A school girl in Springfield, Mass., writes, "I wonder if you care to hear from schoolgirls, and I wonder, too, if you have any idea how many girls there are who are troubled as I was before I used Grape-Nuts Food.

About a year ago I began to have severe headaches and could not sleep well. Was so nervous that I would cry at the least little thing, and finally began to have attacks of faintness. My parents were much alarmed and thought I would be obliged to give up studying. Our physician said my trouble was extreme nervousness and a disordered stomach.

I was tired all the time and rode home from school because I did not feel able to walk. Mother tried to tempt my appetite in every way. Breakfast I did not care for. Meat I could not endure, and the different cereals I did not like as a rule.

I attended the high school and we have an excellent lunch room in the building. As I kept getting worse Mamma said 'I am going to try this Grape-Nuts Food that I see advertised, but I am afraid you will not like it.' Well she got a package of it and it was so delicious in taste, with a little cream poured over it that I liked it at once, and since then Grape-Nuts has formed the principal part of my breakfast. I have also a banana or an orange with now and then an egg.

I wish you could see the difference in me. I cannot tell how much I have gained in weight for I did not know my weight when I was ill, but the difference is great. As for strength, I walk both ways to school and do not feel at all weary from it.

I can study much better and am entirely free from headaches; I am so well, in fact, that I am very happy. I fall asleep almost as soon as my head touches the pillow and rest thoroughly.

I am afraid my letter is lengthy, but my subject is Grape-Nuts, of which I cannot say too much." Clara L. Condon.

The mother adds to this letter: "I would like to add just a line expressing my gratitude also for the benefits which my daughter has derived from Grape-Nuts. Respectfully," Mrs. I. C. Condon.

THE MAYORALTY

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—It is said that the working men are going to bring out a candidate for Mayor and Mr. Andy McFarlane is to be the man. Mr. McFarlane is well known, and no doubt would be elected. He enjoys the confidence not only of the working men, but also the manufacturers and merchants, and would be a practical man to be at the head of our town affairs.

The working men seem to have good ideas about things when they settle down to business. Let the good work continue.

A WORKING MAN.

CLOSING OUR STREETS

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I was amused at reading your account of Monday night's Council proceedings, wherein it is stated that Mr. D. W. Dumble sent in a communication endorsing the closing of a portion of Downie street for private purposes, against the wishes of twenty-seven ratepayers who are interested particularly, as well as the town generally, in keeping it open. Such a bad precedent, no doubt, would afford Mr. Dumble just the excuse which he desires for the closing of Rubidge street between the grounds of his dwelling and that of the late Thomas Bradburn. This closing and narrowing of streets has gone too far. When in the future, it becomes necessary to extend our street railway, and the traffic becomes congested, we will then see the folly of our Council.

OBSERVER.

A RARE EVENT

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—Can it be that an attempt is being made to stir up a distinction between Old Boys and Old Girls by the Mayor? Away with the Old Boys—let us have the Old Girls! A meeting of Old Girls and Old Women will, we understand, take place in Mr. Bill Wrighton's store to-morrow afternoon, at three o'clock. This, in connection with the Y.M.C.A., the Y.W.C.A., the P.P.H., the C.A.A., the Y.P.C.E., the Y.P.S., the N.O.G., the P.P.A., etc., ought to be a good thing. The Children's Spanking Association meets also. There will be an exhibition of hose—that is fire-hose—and a grand calithumpian entertainment of drunks and bums, besides a skating competition on the market square, and a walking match to the nearest saloon. If there is anything to be made out of this let us hear about it. This will come off unless the Retail Merchants Association positively forbids it, when it will be held in the drill shed. There will also be a public debate on "Charity Begins at Home," and whether it ought to stay there—by the members of the P.P.H. and others. The band will be in attendance both day and night. The costumes will be old clothes. Old Girls, Old Boys and old clothes! Hurrah for Casey! Could the Provincial Wheelman's Meet be procured do we think?

AN OLD BOY.

THE KING'S BIRTHDAY

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I notice that a lot of super-loyal are "kicking" because the merchants object to any more holidays. They want to know what right the merchants have to object, and what right the merchants have to ask the Council to put the holiday over till Monday. Let these big loyalists get into business and they will soon see why the merchants object to holidays at this time of the year, especially on Saturdays—for every merchant pays, in proportion to the amount of ground he occupies, five or six times as much taxes as other individuals do.

Again, these ultra-loyalists object to the postponement of the holiday from Saturday until Monday; but we never heard these kicks when the celebration of the 24th of May was put off from Saturday to Monday! These gentlemen are wonderfully loyal "all at once." Then, Then, through all the long reign of our late Queen, her birthday was never celebrated as a general holiday in Great Britain, nor will the birthday of our King be celebrated as a general public holiday in Great Britain next Saturday! Must we be more loyal than they are at home? Yours,

A MERCHANT.

A NAME FOR THE FARM

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—Replying to the letter which appeared in the Times a few days ago, I would say that it may be doubted whether a man is likely to be a better farmer for having a name for his farm. If he is not diligent in business it will take more than that to make him so. Still, the idea is rather a pretty one, and not altogether new even among farmers. In the older settlements of this country one may find many places which are known for miles around as "the Old Sugar Mill Farm," or "The Three Oaks Place," or some such name. More often along Lake Ontario's front, they are known by the names of those who originally owned them, or who have lived longest and a farm may be known as "the Harvey Place" for a generation after it has passed into the hands of Brown, Jones and Robinson in succession. In some parts of the United States the custom of giving names to estates of some pretension has always been more or less common. Sometimes the name was suggested by a striking natural feature of the plantation, sometimes it was merely the family name, but most often it was a name chosen by the founder of the house and intended to commemorate his taste or liking.

The suggestion was probably inspired by the English custom of referring to farmers by place names. In that country the man is quite likely to merge his own identity in that of his dwelling, and to be referred to as often under the name of the tenant of such and such a farm as under his own proper appellation. But in this case the name of the place is usually older than that of the tenant. There are farms in England which have belonged to the same estate, and held by the same family, for hundreds of years, and their designations were bestowed at the very beginning of things. In some cases the name has entirely lost its original significance, being taken from some ancient dialect, and nobody knows exactly what it meant in the first place. It is quite appropriate, therefore, that the tenant, who is of yesterday, should take his title from the farm, rather than that the farm should change its name for him.

In Canada, however, there is no such reason for the naming of country places, and while a large mansion, intended to be the permanent home of a family for generations to come, may appropriately receive a name of its own, it would probably seem to the ordinary farmer rather an affectation to go through any such formality in the case of his own place. It would, in fact, be simply an imitation, without any reason, of a custom which in England had a good and sufficient reason, and such make-believe picturesqueness is not to be desired.

PORT HOPE'S GAS WELL.

The Paying Vein Has Not Yet Been Struck But Outlook Hopeful

Port Hope Guide.—"Those of the Guide readers who do not know will be interested to learn what is transpiring in the gas boring. The well on Cavan-st., the shooting of which we described, developed a pressure of 18 lbs. the volume of gas is so small that it appears to be of no practical value, though this pressure is said to indicate that there must be a considerable volume of gas, the only question is to strike the paying vein. The plant has been removed up the creek. The boring is expected to begin tonight.

Wedding Bells

Lindsay Post: On Tuesday, Oct. 29th, a very pretty wedding took place at early mass in St. Mary's church, when Miss Nellie Butler, of this town, was united in holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. John Collins, of Ennismore. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Father O'Sullivan. The bride looked charming attired in a beautiful costume of grey lady's cloth and a blue silk blouse. She was attended by her cousin, Miss Margaret Owens, of Peterborough, while Mr. Michael Collins, of Toronto, supported the groom. After the ceremony the happy couple repaired to the home of the bride where the customary congratulations were extended, after which the party partook of a sumptuous wedding breakfast. They left on the 10.35 train for Peterborough, where they will spend their honeymoon, the guests of Mrs. R. Gordon, sister of the groom and other friends. The Post extends congratulations.

How One Million is Spent

Not less than one million of dollars is spent annually by people seeking an absolute cure for Catarrh, Bronchitis and Consumption. Numerous are the remedies, but the one standing pre-eminently above all others is Catarrhozone. It cures these diseases because it is sure to reach them. Catarrhozone is inhaled into the lungs, throat and nasal passages, and bathes every part of the diseased membrane with its germ-killing healing vapour. You simply breathe Catarrhozone and it cures. Price 25c. and $1 at druggists, or Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

PUBLIC WASTE DEPARTMENT

The Brock Street Pavement Matter not Yet Settled

The Brock street pavement matter has not yet been settled. As many of our readers already know to their sorrow, the Town Engineer, with that faculty for blundering and doing everything the wrong way, which seems to be his chief forte, the pavement at the corner of George and Brock streets was laid so low that an action for damages was threatened by Mr. R. A. Morrow and Mr. T. B. Bradburn, the owners of the property affected. The matter was referred to arbitration, and it was arranged that the pavement was to be re-laid. This was done at a cost of many hundreds of dollars.

It was supposed that the trouble would end there, but not so. At the last meeting of the Council Mr. Morrow demanded $300 in cash, besides the cost of arbitration. It is altogether likely that Mr. Bradburn will also demand damages.

It is understood that these damages are in consequence of loss incurred while the sidewalk was being re-built, which put the tenants to inconvenience and loss. Surely the long-suffering ratepayer has stood quite enough, and a new Council will change matters.

A MARVELLOUS MEDICINE

"No Cure, No Pay," is the Newest Proposal of the Proprietors of Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—We make the following proposal to the readers of the Times: If any one who is a subject of rheumatism (no matter how long standing) or any blood disease as enumerated below, and will give Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills a fair trial and do not find a perfect cure, we will refund the money paid for the pills. If no substantial improvement is observed, we will in addition, pay $100 would an satisfactory evidence be supplied to us to this effect. We have yet to know of a single case where these wonderful pills have not been almost entirely successful in affecting a cure. CANADA CHEMICAL CO.

Ex-Ald. Bailey, St. John's, writes: "I cannot speak too highly of Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills. They worked a miracle in my case, and cured me after many years of suffering. I do not think their equal is to be obtained.

Dr Clarke's Little Red Pills are a positive and certain cure for la grippe, rheumatism, asthma, paralysis, catarrh, eczema, coughs, backache, indigestion, all stomach and liver troubles, female complaints, even when the disease having been standing for many years, the most stubborn cases will yield. Price 50 cents per box. For sale by Ormond & Walsh. The Canada Chemical Company will forfeit $10 for any case that these pills do not help.

Dr. Clarke's Sure Cure for Catarrh, and Dr. Clarke's Sure Cure for Eczema same price. $10 will be paid for any case they will not permanently cure.

THE SOUTH AFRICAN WAR IS THE BOERS' ONLY OCCUPATION NOW

Kruger is Still Himself—Characteristic Boer Views in an Interview.

Would Abide by Arbitration Only if Award Were Favorable to Them

London, Nov. 7.—A Unionist journal strongly urges the war office to accept at once the offer of a Canadian regiment of rough riders for service in South Africa. The same journal points out that the Canadian troops were among the best under the command of Lord Roberts in the earlier part of the war.

It is stated that the Government intends to accept Canada's offer.

THE NEWS AT OTTAWA.

Ottawa, Nov. 7.—The despatch from London to the effect that a Canadian cavalry contingent would be acceptable to the home authorities arrived too late last night to obtain official confirmation.

It is well known that the officials of the department of militia and mounted police have been quietly getting ready to send, if necessary, 500 rough riders in one month and another 500 a month later.

THEIR SOURCE OF STRENGTH.

London, Nov. 7.—During a recent interview with a representative of the Daily News, a former member of Kruger's cabinet said that "the Boer inspiration to continue fighting came not from the wordy harangues of pro-Boers in England, but from love of country, home, nationality and freedom, and the hate of those who would crush out our national life—these are the well-springs of our spirit of uncompromising resistance.

"The British have stripped us of every thing except our Mausers and our patriotism," he continued, "and our sole business now is war."

"The British hope to destroy us by a process of attrition; they will find it a slow, costly and futile process. The further the attrition proceeds the more difficult it becomes, for the destructive forces of war take the weaker elements and leave the stronger, that are well able to manage the problems of food and ammunition, and can occupy the attention of the British army indefinitely. We do not strike the enemy often, but we strike it hard enough when we strike at all fully to vindicate our military locus standi."

THE REFUGEE CAMPS.

London, Nov. 7.—Mr. Brodrick says that certain recommendations made by the ladies who went out to investigate the refugee camps will be adopted. While everything possible is being done for the refugees, he states, no government can secure the inhabitants of a country from privitation when a small number of desperate men are sparing no means to render it uninhabitable.

CHARACTERISTIC BOER VIEWS.

London, Nov. 7.—A member of a Johannesburg financial house has just had a remarkable chat with Mr. Kruger about South African prospects. The ex-President's talk was all arbitration, which he declared to be the only satisfactory way of ending the war. Asked what h ewould do if arbitration went against the Boers, he replied that such a thing was impossible, it could not happen, but, assuming for a moment that it might, he added: "We should take up arms if arbitration went against us. We should never submit to the results of the arbitration if the results were unfavorable to us."

London, Nov. 7—Lord Kitchener cabling supplementary details of the recent fight near Brakenlaagte, Eastern Transvaal, says: "The Boer loss was 44 killed, including Gen. Opperman, and 100 wounded. The Boers got nothing beyond the guns. The Boer attack was easily repulsed until the arrival of Louis Botha with 600 men."

Four Thousand Cavalry for South Africa

London, Nov. 8—The meetings of the British Cabinet recently have been chiefly devoted to South Africa and to drawing up plans for more strenuous efforts to end the campaign. One of the immediate results will be the despatch of four thousand cavalry from England to South Africa.

Lord Roberts "Booed" And Buller Cheered.

London Nov. 8—At Nottingham to-day, where Lord Roberts, the commander-in-chief, distributed a thousand war medals, he was repeatedly "booed" and cheers were raised for Gen. Buller. The recipients of the medals, at the luncheon subsequently given in their honor, repeatedly broke into cheer for General Buller.

THE ABYSSINIANS MUTILATE SLAIN

Eleven Victims Entitle a Soldier to a Silver Band

THE INFLUENCE OF THE FRENCH

Frenchmen Extremely Active—Politically, However, Abyssinia is Chiefly Concerned with England

London, Nov. 6.—Captain Cobbold, an English officer, who was sent out to Abyssinia some time ago, says the Abyssinian army has no system of intelligence, and possesses no maps. He adds: "I cannot but speak highly of the Abyssinian troops. I never met with soldiers who can do so much work with so little nourishment. Discipline is maintained almost entirely by the personal attachment of the men to their leaders. The practice of mutilating the slain in battle still exists, especially among the Galla soldiery, to whom it is mainly confined. A soldier who can produce proofs of eleven victims is entitled to wear a silver band round his sword."

In referring to the country, the Captain says: "It is impossible to speak with certainty of the future or of what may be done when the country is thoroughly exploited. At the present it is known that the province of Berri Shangul, which is conterminous with the Egyptian Soudan, is highly auriferous. Menelik obtains much of his wealth from this source. Prospecting is already going on in this area, and various concessions have been obtained from the Emperor, of which British companies seem to have a fair share. This country can be readily developed from the side of the Soudan, as the Blue Nile is navigable to within a short distance of the gold-field, and gold, which now has to be carried on muleback 300 miles to Adas Abeba, and a further 500 miles to the Red Sea coast, will be able to find its way in steamers down the Nile in a few days. It is to the development of commerce with the western province of Abyssinia that Great Britain should turn her attention, owing to the facilities afforded by the fine waters of the Sobat and Blue Nile. It is not only for its mineral wealth that I advocate the extension of commerce in this part of Abyssinia, as hundreds of miles of country in Lekka and Kaffa are covered with the finest coffee, within easy reach of the Sobat."

In conclusion, Captain Cobbold said: "At present French influence in Abyssinia is extremely active. Politically it is with England that Abyssinia is chiefly concerned, owing to the fact that except for Erythrea, and the small French colony of Jibutil, Menelik's dominions are surrounded by British territory. Our presence with the army seemed to excite an unnecessary amount of comment and curiosity on the part of the French. Thanks to the efforts of Colonel Harrington, British prestige stands high in Abyssinia, and the Emperor appears most anxious to increase the friendly feeling existing.

CITY OF PANAMA IN REBEL HANDS

Isthmian Town in Complete Control of the Liberal Party

THE GOVERNOR A PRISONER

Jubilation at Liberal Headquarters in New York Over the News—Foreign Interests to be Protected.

New York, Nov. 8.— The Herald prints the following: From a source of information on the situation in Colombia which thus far has furnished no news not subsequently verified by wire, has been received the copy of a cablegram saying that the city of Panama has fallen and is in complete control of the Liberal party.

It is believed by the New York representative of the Liberals that Gen. Alban, the governor of the Panama department, is a prisoner, unless he has escaped by sea.

At the headquarters of the Liberal party in this city all were jubilant at the news of the fall of Panama. Dr. Restrepo, who is the head of the Junta here, said:

"All foreign interests will be protected. The Isthmus will be kept open and the Panama Railroad guarded from guerilla attack if necessary. Everywhere where its Government is established the rights of foreigners will be secure."

SEPARATE SCHOOL BOARD

Accounts Were Passed and the Question of Sewerage at the Convent Reported Upon

The regular meeting of the Separate School Board was held Wednesday evening, there being present Messrs. Murty (chairman), Gosselin, Clancy, McGrath, Hickey and Kylie.

The Ven. Archdeacon Casey, Superintendent of Public Schools, was also in attendance.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

The following accounts were presented for payment, and duly referred to the Finance Committee:—

The Board then adjourned.

BYE-ELECTIONS ARE NEAR AT HAND

It is Said That They Will be Held Very Soon

THERE ARE THIRTEEN VACANCIES

Opposition Will Not Put up a Strong Fight—How the Vacancies Occurred

Quebec, Nov. 8.—The Soleil gives it to be understood that the elections to fill vacancies at present existing in the Dominion Parliament, will be held almost immediately, and that they would have taken place earlier, but for the Royal visit. Of the thirteen vacancies in the House of Commons, five are in the representation of Ontario five in that of Quebec, and one each in that of Manitoba, New Brunswick, and Nova Scotia. Five of these seats were held by Conservatives and eight by Liberals. The vacancies were caused by the appointments of Judge Desmarais, M.P. for St. James division, Montreal, to the Bench, of Mr. Joseph Godbout, M.P. for Beauce, to the Senate, of Mr. A. M. Dechene, M.P. for L'Islet to the Senate, of Sir Louis Davies, M.P. for West Queens, P.E.I., to the Supreme Court Bench, of Mr. T. Fortin, M.P. for Laval, to the Bench; and of Mr. B. M. Britton, M.P. for Kingston, to the Bench; and by the deaths of Hon. Clarke Wallace, M.P. for West York, Ont., and of Mr. J. W. Bell, M.P. for Addington, the voiding of the elections of Mr. A. Gibson, jr., M.P., for York, N.B., of Mr. O. J. Thornton, M.P. for West Durham, and of Mr. R.L. Richardson, M.P. for Lisgar. The seat for West Hastings has been vacated by the resignation of Mr. Harry Corby, and Mr. Prefontaine, M.P. has yet to vacate the seat for Terrebonne or for Maisonneuve, both of which he at present represents.

There a re also three vacancies in the Senate for the Government to fill, and as the late occupants of them were all Conservatives, the naming of their successors promises to about equalize the standing of the two political parties in the Senate. The existing vacancies were caused by the deaths of Senators Almon, of Halifax, Villeneuve, of Montreal; and Allan of Toronto.

The Poultry Association

A meeting of the Peterborough Poultry Association was held in the council chamber last night. Mr. Leary, the president occupied the chair. Th subject of the meeting was to decide on the size and style of coop to be used at the coming winter show, and for the distribution of membership tickets. After settling the matter of coops the meeting adjourned. There will be a meeting of the board of directors next week.

THE KING'S BIRTHDAY

Why a Holiday Should be Observed in Peterborough

A good deal of feeling has been worked up over the action of the merchants in refusing to close their stores on the King's birthday. So far as The Times is concerned, we think a public holiday should be observed. There is a good deal of nonsense talked about there being too many holidays in Canada. There are 365 days in the year and a certain amount of business to be done. That business will be done whether it takes 304 or 305 days.

It is argued by some of our correspondents that if a few merchants keep open shop on a public holiday, while a majority of merchants close their shops, the few who keep open are likely to get the trade that all would get if all kept open.

If the same argument were applied we would all be in jail lest a few crooks should be allowed to roam at large. Because a few merchants allow their avarice to get the better of them, we do not see why all the rest of the population of Canada should suffer. We do not believe that any merchants who advertise in The Times would do a thing like that, nor do we believe the decent men who kept the holiday and gave their employes a rest would lose anything in the long run. Possibly on the first occasion the extra holiday might not be generally observed, but when it had come to stay it would be as generally observed by the merchants as any other class. The few avaricious ones who desired to keep open would soon be shamed out of it, because fairminded public opinion would discountenance the practice of keeping open to steal trade from the decent men who closed their places of business. And the public does very little shopping on a holiday anyway.

A KINGSTON WEDDING

Marriage of Mr. Wm. Jackson to Miss Jean Potter

At Centre street, Kingston, the residence of the bride's father, Mr. Jas. S. Potter, Sailors' Missionary, Mr. William Jackson, printer, was married to Miss Jean Potter. Master Frank Newman, Kingston, and Miss Mary Potter, of Peterborough, did the honors to the groom and bride.

The bride was the recipient of numerous presents. The newly married couple left last night for Toronto a nd points west and will spend a few days at the Manse, Peterborough.

SUED FOR $50,000; GOT $800

Verdict Against James Graham, of the Commercial Hotel, Omemee

David Minns, harnessmaker of Omemee, and his wife Margaret, sued the village of Omemee and James Graham, a hotelkeeper in the village and a brother of Mr. George Graham, of the Oriental Hotel, Peterborough, for $6,000 damages for an accident, which happened to Mrs. Minns on the night of the 14th Sept. 1900, when she stubbed her toe against a loose plank in front of the Commerical hotel, owned by Mr. Graham and fell into the outside cellar hole, suffering severe injuries.

The action was tried at Lindsay by Chancellor Boyd, who, yesterday at Osgoode hall gave judgement against the defendant Graham for the wife plaintiff of $550 and for the husband plaintiff $250, with costs of the action, owing to the negligence of the driver and hostler in leaving open the cellar door. As to the village, the action is dismissed with costs.

Determined to Make a Stand

Paris, Nov. 7.— A despatch from Constantinople via Vienna, states that Turkey will not give satisfaction concerning all the claims made by France. The Sultan does not desire the return of M. Constans, the former French Ambassador in Constantinople, and will decline to guarantee the payment of the Lorando claim within a fixed period.

Another telegram from Constantinople says: "The Porte has sent a note to N. Bapst, Counsellor of the French Legation, enclosing monthly drafts on the customs in payment of the Lorando and Tubini claims, and embodying certain decisions of the Turkish Government regarding the quays difficulty."

There is good authority for the statement that N. Bapst, Counsellor of the French Embassy at Constantinople, has demanded that Frenchmen be placed on an equality with Englishmen before the Ottoman courts.

ROYAL CHORUS FESTIVAL

VERY SUCCESSFUL ENTERTAINMENT LAST NIGHT

A chorus of one hundred and fifty trained voices is a very large one and it is not often that the opportunity is afforded the public of hearing such an aggregation. The big Market Hall was pretty well filled last night, when the Peterborough portion of the singers who recently appeared before the Duke and Duchess of York in Toronto gave their concert. The singers occupied raised seats at the north end of the hall, the ladies all robed in white, making a vision pleasing to the eye. There were four numbers by the festival chorus, "The Maple Leaf," "Our Country and Our King," the "Hallelujah" chorus and "God Save the King," of which three verses were sung with the audience standing. A pretty effect was produced by the singers each waving a small flag as the concluding lines were sung. Choral music appeals to the uncultured ear no less than to the musical, and it is needless to say that the rich volume of sound thrilled and delighted everyone. The soloists added very much to the success of the entertainment. Master Mowat's strong boyish voice filled the spacious room and he was given a hearty recall. Messrs. W. Stenier, James Dawson, H. Milne and G. W. Mulligan each possess an unusually powerful voice, well fitted for doing justice to their virile selections. Mr. Mulligan, as the conductor of the chorus and the prime mover in its organization, was given an ovation when he came forward to sing the "Ship Builders' Song," in which a striking effect was produced by means of a hammer and anvil with electric attachment to make dazzling sparks fly. The quaint imitation of the banjo by the C. G. E. Glee Club in accompaniment to Mr. Dawson's song was another taking feature. The solo by Mrs. W. Lefy was very pretty. Miss M. Hendren who had two numbers, sang beautifully and was each time enthusiastically recalled. The ever popular band of the 57th added its share to the entertainment. The accompanists were Mrs. Mowat, Miss Hurley, and Mr. J. Crane.

Just before the concluding number Mr. George K. Martin stepped forward and said that he had to announce a duet that was not on the programme and one of the participants was not aware that he had to take part in it. He then handed to Mr. Mulligan an envelope, which he explained contained a sum of money donated by the choristers as a token of their appreciation of his efforts. To Mr. Mulligan was due all the credit for initiating and carrying out the undertaking. Every church choir in the town was represented by its best voices in the royal chorus, and Mr. Martin hoped that this would not be their last appearance together.

Mr. Mulligan, who was taken wholly by surprise, said that he felt himself in the position of the man who set out to quote a poet and forgot which poet it was and what he had said. He could say, however, that he valued the presentation far less as a sum of money than as a token of the confidence and respect of one hundred and fifty of the best singers in Peterborough.

The money, Mr. Martin explained, was a voluntary contribution of the singers. The proceeds of the entertainment are all to be divided between between the Children's Aid Society and the band.

Staff-Sergeant W. F. Green, Color-Sergeants W. Batten and M. Murphy, and Bugle-Sergeant Cookson acted as ushers with soldierly gallantry.

More News of Miss Stone.

Sofia, Bulgaria, Nov. 7.— The messenger s ent by S. M. Bakhmeteff, the Russian diplomatic agent, to the brigands, has returned bearing a letter from Miss Stone to a former pupil at Sofia. M. Bakhmeteff, having thus established communication, has turned the letter and details over to Mr. Dickinson, the American Counsul-General, saying the latter has the ransom, and upon him rests the responsibility. The messenger was absent nine days. The letter consists of half a page, saying Miss Stone and Mme. Tsilka are well.

WE SHOULD DESPATCH ANOTHER CONTINGENT

Strong Feeling Throughout the County in Favor of it

MORE MOUNTED INFANTRY

Strong Appeal by Lieutenant Morrison, of the Second Contingent

He Thinks That Two Battalions of 500 Each, Made up of Cow Boys, Besides Mounted Artillery and Two Sections of Pom Poms should be Sent

Ottawa, Nov. 8.—A strong feeling is being developed throughout the country that Canada should at once forward another contingent to South Africa. This sentiment is not confined to one section of the country, but is general. The Government will do well to act in time in order not to appear at the disadvantages of having been forced to move. Lieut. Morrison, who has had experience in South Africa, states in the Citizen that a third contingent is necessary. All over Canada, there is at present a simmer of dissatisfaction apparent in regard to the position in which this country finds itself, as contracted with the other big colonies in reference to the South African war. This feeling of dissatisfaction is finding vent in tentative discussion in the press not unlike that which preceded the despatch of the first contingent of Canadian troops to the seat of war. Nor is it confined to opposition newspapers, or merely partisan criticism of the government. It is rather the expression of the large proportion of the people of Canada of a conviction that after all Canada is not going to show up well in comparison with the sister colonies when the finished story of the war is written. Canada sent a relatively small body of troops to the war. They fought well and came home when their term of enlistment expired. But months have rolled on, the fighting continues, the Australians, New Zealanders, Tasmanians and Afrikanders are still in the field, but the Canadians are comfortably at home resting on their laurels. That is the feeling and there is no use disguising it. And the feeling is the stronger because it is felt that Canadian mounted troops are just the sort of men that the empire are most in need of.

There is nothing to be gained by casting about to discover who is to blame for the fact. We are told that an offer of more troops was filed with the British war office many months ago by the Dominion government and has never been withdrawn. But the length and persistence of the war have caused the conditions to change since that time.

If Canada should offer another contingent it would be more satisfactory to the troops that go if the government volunteered a definite force for a definite object. A well-equipped, well-horsed regiment of dragoons (alias mounted infantry) largely composed of men who have seen service or mounted police and cowboys from the Northwest would be a very useful reinforcement for the British army. A regiment consisting of two battalions each 500 strong accompanied by two sections of horse artillery (not field artillery) and, if they can be secured, two sections of pom-poms, would constitute a complete mobile unit which would do inestimable service in hunting Boer commandoes. It is not quantity but quality Great Britain wants in troops out there. What is wanted are specialists in the work, men who can meet the Boers on equal terms. Ten or eleven hundred troops may sound a small number for Canada to volunteer, but let them be picked men—men who have had experience out there or whose experience on the plains of the Northwest fits them for immediate and effective service. Give double pay, if necessary, to get the right men. Better send 1,100 of the sort of men who are urgently needed than 11,000 men who need to be made over. Send the force under a capable leader, a most important consideration, as a specially qualified unit for a definite purpose—the hunting down of commandoes. Let the war office know that purpose, furnish a force qualified for the work, and Canadians may be satisfied that the work will be done. But let there be some understanding that the force will work as a unit—the Canadian guns and the Canadian cavalry always together. This latter is of importance because a dozen returned men will enlist under such an arrangement and with a re-constituted unit where one would do so under the chance of being split up and mixed with British troops. The long range London criticisms about guns impeding mobile columns is largely rot. Field guns may do so because field guns need, or should have, infantry for support, but Canadian cavalry and Canadian horse artillery can work together any and everywhere and need no infantry. We have the horse artillery guns here taking the same ammunition as the British Royal Horse, so there would be no difficulty about that. A thousand Canadian cavalry, each of the two battalions having with it a section (two guns) of Canadian horse artillery and a section of pom-poms, ought to and could go anywhere and take care of itself in South Africa, whether it was needed to operate alone chasing commandoes, or forming the advance or rear guards of larger forces. If kept together and used as a unit such a force will achieve results satisfactory to the government and the Canadian people.

The force could easily be recruited. One section o fhorse artillery complete, and mainly composed of experienced men who have drilled and fought as horse artillery, can be furnished by Ottawa in very short order.

HOW PHYSICIANS FOUGHT FOR McKINLEY'S LIFE

Official Report of the Long and Desperate Struggle to Save the President

ULL RECORD OF THE PATIENT'S LAST DAYS

Every Action of Doctors and President Noted From Moment to Moment, and Formal Announcement Made That Mr. McKinley was Shot "in the Line of Duty."

Washington, D. C., Nov. 8.—"In the line of duty, while receiving the people, was shot by Leon F. Czolgosz," is the official statement filed with the Surgeon General of the Navy by Dr. Presley M. Rixey, medical inspector, U. S. N., as the introduction to his report of the wounding, illness and death of the late President McKinley.

The cause of death is thus stated: "Gangrene of both walls of stomach and pancreas, following gunshot wound."

Dr. Rixey's report is remarkable for its exhibition in the closest possible detail of the exact state of the patient during his mortal illness. It is in the shape of a ship's log almost, showing at intervals of a very few minutes—sometimes a single minute, rarely more than an hour—the patient's progress toward the end.

CAUSE OF DEATH.

After giving a full report of the autopsy and quoting the anatomical diagnosis made by Dr. H. R. Gaylord, Dr. Rixey says:

"The cause of death of the President has been made plain by the autopsy. It was due primarily to a gunshot wound by a .32 calibre bullet fired at close range, devitalizing the tissues immediately surrounding the tract, so that gangrene of those parts injured, involving the stomach, pancreas, kidney and other tissues, followed. The toxic products from these devitalized tissues were absorbed, and with the degenerated condition of the muscular tissue of the heart caused death, the final symptoms being those of exhaustion."

RECORD OF THE SEVENTH DAY.

This was the record of the seventh day, September 12, when the patient became worse:

FOUR HORSES KILLED

Were Struck by the Toronto Bound Trunk Express

Yesterday when the Toronto Grand Trunk midnight express was approaching the summit, a short distance below Millbrook, four horses, which had by some means got on the track, were killed. The animals were fearfully mangled. They were so firmly wedged under the engine that the train was delayed 35 minutes.

Engineer Kinnear was on the engine, while conductor Boundy had charge of the train. There is no blame attachable to the train hands. The horses belonged to a farmer residing in the neighborhood.

LOCAL NEWS-LETTERS

FRAZERVILLE.

We have heard of [illegible] and agates but rubies are not generally money, nor do we expect to see any "Mounts" about them. However, sometimes it is the unexpected that happens.

—Last Saturday night the Misses Pue and Woods came home, the former accompanied by Miss M. Henderson, of Peterborough. Miss Woods, we understand, returned to town Monday morning. Her two friends waited until Tuesday afternoon, and were thus able to enjoy fair weather for their trip.

—The threshers were at Mr. Pue's on Monday, but owing to the snow storm they were not able to do much during the forenoon. They finished in time for an early dinner on Tuesday, and shortly after twelve o'clock, noon, pulled out to the tune of "Seventeen More."

—Sometime ago Mr. Richardson was appointed caretaker of the G.T.R. station. He has succeeded in making satisfactory terms with the Company and is now "making his mark in the village," not surpassed by our first named blacksmith. For some little time the sign of the land agent has been on the "Hotel de Monaghan." Now Mr. Richardson's new waiting room, in process of construction, presents a more pleasing sign. We are hoping now that the evening trains will soon "get a hurry on" and catch up to time.

—A week ago, the Rev. T. Steel, Methodist minister of this place, had helped to make glad the hearts of former parishioners. He occupied the pulpit with his usual efficiency last Sabbath.

—While every one is more or less pleased that we have enjoyed such a pleasant autumn, few, if any, are sorry to see a little cloudy weather. Some have watched the shadows lengthen and have sighed for rain. Such were little loth to see the snow on Monday, and to believe that it was a promise that we are now to have broken weather.

—Honor Roll for Cairo School for the month of October:

Second Class—1, Sophie Moncrief.

Sr. Pt. Second—1, Bernice Johnson; 2, Rosie Johnson; 3, Cora Scobell; 4, Vera Madill.

Jr. Pt. Second—1, Cecil Goodfellow; 2, Maggie Whitfield.

Jr. Pt. First—1, Melville Whitfield; 2, Andrew Lockey; 3, Walter Moncrief.

BRIDGENORTH.

—Did the "Duck" see the iceberg?

—The fowl supper was a corker.

—Would it be possible that the whale which was seen in Montreal was on its way up to No. 6 dam?

—Invitations are out for a wedding, in which a young man in Smith will figure.

—Mr. Fred Jopling has a fine new team of grey horses, of which he is justly proud.

—A number of our local sports have gone north in search of deer. We wish them success.

—Bridgenorth seems to have settled down for the winter. Things are very quiet.

—The summer girl from the Park is no longer seen about the streets.

—The timbers of the old bridge are piled up on Mr. Jopling's lawn, and those who bought the old planking are hauling it away. Part of the old bridge will be towed up to Gannon's Narrow's, and used instead of the ferry.

—Hallowe'en passed off very quietly here. The boys were out as usual, but confined themselves to innocent sport. A few gates were removed. Mr. H. C. Heard discovered one of his buggies on top of the shed. This is carrying the joke too far.

—The Methodists are touching up the old parsonage with a coat of paint, also an addition to the stable, as Mr. Nickle has a Jersey cow this season, and requires more room.

—George Bell is working day and night putting a cement foundation under his engine. He has been troubled of late with the old one, which was shaky. His intentions now are to bolt it to the earth so it will be permanent.

LAKEHURST.

—Rev. MacKnight, of Peterborough, preached in the Presbyterian church here last Sunday. The Rev. Mr. Atkinson is expected next Sunday.

—Mrs. Wallace has gone down to Selwyn for a couple of weeks to visit friends.

—The cheese factory has closed for this season. Mr. and Mrs. Sharpe will now go in for "Syrian peace, immortal leisure."

—Rev. Mr. Delve preached a very helpful sermon last Sunday evening on "Prayer." Mrs. Delve, who has been laid up for the past three weeks with a severe cold, is able to be about again.

—Chase's saw-mill, at Gannon's Narrows was burned down a few days ago. The loss to Mr. Chase, as well as others, was considerable.

—Mrs. Robt. Shaw is still improving.

—Next Sunday is the regular quarterly meeting in the Methodist Church here. The Quarterly Board meets in Buckhorn the following Monday at 1 o'clock.

How One Million is Spent

Not less than one million of dollars is spent annually by people seeking an absolute cure for Catarrh, Bronchitis and Consumption. Numerous are the remedies, but the one standing pre-eminently above all others is Catarrhozone. It cures these diseases because it is sure to reach them. Catarrhozone is inhaled into the lungs, throat and nasal passages, and bathes every part of the diseased membrane with its germ-killing healing vapour. You simply breathe Catarrhozone and it cures. Price 25c. and $1 at druggists, or Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

IT IS EASY WORK

when you are well, to rub and scrub, but when the back aches and the head throbs, a woman's work is hourly torment.

No woman can be strong and healthy of body who is the victim of those womanly diseases which are often responsible for feminine sufferings.

Women who have used Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for the cure of diseases of the womanly organs, say that work doesn't tire them any more. "Favorite Prescription" regulates the periods, dries enfeebling drains, heals inflammation and ulceration, and cures female weakness. It makes weak women strong and sick women well.

There is no alcohol in "Favorite Prescription," neither opium, cocaine or any other narcotic.

"I had poor health for nine years (ever since the birth of my child)," writes Mrs. Armstead Watkins, of Acme, Kanawha Co., W. Va. "Had female weakness, was very irregular and would suffer untold misery. Our family doctor did not do me any good and I concluded to write to you. When I wrote I had no idea that I would ever get well, but when your letter reached me I began to have hope. I commenced taking Dr. Pierce's medicines as directed and began to improve in strength. I was soon able to do the work for my family of six. I think there never were such medicines in the world. I took eight bottles, three of 'Favorite Prescription' and five of 'Golden Medical Discovery' and two vials of 'Pellets.'"

Dr. Pierce's Pellets cure constipation.

EVERYBODY READS THE TIMES

A Few Pointers That Advertisers Would Do Well to Remember.

Josh Billings: "I luv a rooster for two things—one is the crow that is in him and the other is the spurs that air on him to bak up his craw with."

The Times has become a popular paper, not only amongst the people of the town and Ashburnham, but also amongst the residents of the surrounding towns and villages.

Mr. W. H. Hilliard, of Lakefield, says the Times is regarded in Lakefield as the brightest paper that comes to that burg, and is read by very many in the village.

Wm. O'Brien, the genial clerk of Douro, who has long been a subscriber to the daily edition, says that the Times is the popular paper in that township, 75 per cent. of the people being readers. He hopes that it may long keep up its outward pace.

Mr. Wm. Gallen, Reeve of Burleigh and Anstruther, states that the whole back country reads the Times, and regard the paper as one of the very best. He says that it is always full of good things.

Mr. P. P. Young, Young's Point, says everybody reads the Times in that locality. It is admirably conducted.

Mr. James Stevenson, ex-M.P., says the Times is the brightest and best newspaper published in Peterborough.

Commodore Calcutt says he would sooner miss his breakfast than miss getting the Times. It is a famous appetizer only equalled by Calcutt's celebrated ale.

Mr. J. H. Thornton, Omemee, says the Times is very popular in that village and is widely read.

Hon. Mr. Bastedo thinks the Times deserves great credit for its progressive spirit. It is up-to-date, giving all the news up to four o'clock each morning.

Recently Mr. Sage and another of North Smith, brought us in a couple of clubs for the Weekly Times of 10 names. Here are 20 names from one section of Smith, that are constant readers of the Times.

Mr. Harry Garbett, Reeve of Smith, says that the Times is the popular paper in that locality.

Mr. James Hagtie, Springville, gives similar evidence, and says you can hardly go into a house in his locality that the Times is not present.

Mr. Pearson, the great horse buyer, of Montreal, told the Times the other day that he has better results from the advertisement in the Times than from any other paper. He says he finds the Times is read by almost everybody in the district. He knows this, for almost every horse he buys is the product of the Times advertisement.

Mr. T. Donaldson, Cavan, member of the Counties' Council of Northumberland and Durham, says that the Times is very popular in Cavan.

Mr. James Chambers, Manvers, bears similar testimony in regard to Manvers Township.

Dr. Bingham, the popular city Medical Health Officer, missed his Times the other morning, and came to the office for a copy. He said he was not feeling well, and wondered what was the matter, until he remembered he had not had his Times.

The above are a few of the many evidences we have in our possession of the high regard in which this great family journal is held by the people. Merchants and other advertisers should remember that hundreds upon hundreds of families throughout the town and country cannot be reached by any other way except through the Times.

Lindsay Post.—Mr. Dougall Robertson, of the Scotch Line, Verulam, recently sold eight hogs to Mr. J. Bell, drover of Dunsford, and realized $301.80 on the lot. The animals were monsters, being only six months old.

The Minister's Wooing.

SHORT STORY FOR THE DAY.

The most careless observer among the villagers might have noticed something unusual in the Rev. Mr. Wigglesworth's manner that night. The Widow McLean was the first to see it, she dropped her eyes in blushing confusion and did not lift them until the end of the service when she led the choir in a triumphant song.

Mr. Wigglesworth was a bachelor and a scholar, a little seamy along the back, a little frayed out at the wrists, a timid, self-conscious gentle, forgetful man, with dreamy, patient eyes forever turned inward on a brain toiling with abstractions.

Miss Eliza Ellington noticed it, and as the sermon progressed the members of the flock turned in their seats and stared at each other. Some mysterious change had taken place in him. He stood erect, his figure was animated, he looked years younger, in his usually pale cheeks the color came and went and his eyes were alight with enthusiasm.

As the congregation passed out from the church on all sides there was unstinted praise of the sermon.

The minister hurried home to his modest room, flung himself into a chair by an open window and gazed on the beauty of a moon flooded southern night. The perfume of the jessamine was in his nostrils, the exquisite song of the mocking bird pouring forth its melody from a near tree was in his brain.

"She loves me," he muttered, and again, "she loves me."

He knew women so slightly. Seen through a veil of mystery they were such formidable creatures and yet, the priest in him giving place to the man, he had often longed to lift that veil. He had felt a sudden heartache for ties he had never known—sweet, warm human ties.

That night as he had gone up the steps of the church, the Widow McLean, who was as comely and young and pretty as any girl among his flock, had stepped on her dress and fallen downward. The minister had lifted her to her feet, her soft fingers had closed over his hand. "You are so good," she had murmured and with a quick spontaneous burst of passion and a modesty that was enchanting, she lifted his hand, pressed her warm, red lips to it, and glided into the church.

An hour passed, the minister had not moved from his chair; another hour he sprang up. "If she ever does it again I will marry her," he declared enthusiastically. And in the morning when the breeze fluttering at the window blinds awoke him, "If she ever does it again," he muttered, half awake as he sprang to his feet, "I will marry her anyway," he vowed.

He could hardly wait, so eager a lover had he become by afternoon, for the return of the small colored boy who carried his message of love. Like most timid men he had trusted his fate to a written message.

The afternoon was hot. Eliza Ellington, who had spent the morning in the household work that was always so much harder on Monday, had taken some sewing to the cool shadowed depths of the grape arbor at the back of her simple home. Her sewing lay beside her untouched. Her figure drooped, her eyes were downcast, her delicate brows arched with [illegible]. She could not escape the knowledge that thoughts of the minister had become a source of disquietude.

All unaware the little love god had nestled in her heart. Poor starved heart, that refused to be old at 30, that cried out for the rights that belonged to its womanhood.

Into the quiet nook and upon the solitude of her thoughts a little negro boy with outstretched hand that held a note obtruded himself.

She read the note, turned it over, there was no address, and read again words that sank into her brain.

She looked at the small boy wonderingly, piteously. "Is there not some mistake?" she asked timidly. Joy was slow to enter where sorrow had so recently dwelt.

When the minister read the note that the colored boy brought him unconsciously he repeated the words he used the night before, "She loves me."

But a great dismay had fallen on the man, for the yes he so ardently waited for had been written in a neat precise hand by another, by Eliza Ellington.

The messenger, with a child's heedlessness, had loitered on the way, his mind diverted by a dozen things. When he picked up the note for the last time it had been laid down carefully while he took part in a fight, he carried it without further delay to the rose covered cottage.

The glory of sunset was upon the earth and sky as the minister turned in at the cottage whose portico was covered with great clusters of crimson roses. He had agonized over the note, for he was a tender little man; he had prayed over it and led by the spirit he had come to tell Eliza Ellington, who was one of his best church workers and a faithful, conscientious woman, that the letter she had received belonged to another. He would be very tender with her, he assured himself.

He sat in the parlor tremblingly, awaiting her approach, and when she fluttered in gowned in a simple white dress, with a great cluster of the crimson roses at her breast, he noticed that she trembled too. The roses were aquiver, the color came and went, in her face, her eyes were shy as a dove's.

The minister went forward and took her hand. He didn't speak, he couldn't break her dream of happiness at one blow. He held her hand, looking down at her with troubled eyes, when she suddenly met his gaze, and in her eyes he thought he saw a faint reproach. Was it thus that men wooed the women they loved? Sorely perplexed the minister bent and kissed her on the brow.

They sat down on the wide, old-fashioned sofa. She noting his silence and seeming coldness, pitied him and told herself that his unaccustomedness to women made him shy, and that by sweet womanly means, she, when she became his wife, would woo him from such ways; and he, looking at her and thinking that he must break her heart, pitied her. Ah, sweet, sweet pity, so near akin to love.

Woman-like, and to cover his embarrassment, she began to talk in a nervous hurried way. Of her geraniums that had not done so well, of the violets that had finished blooming, of the beautiful bountiful roses in their wealth of flower. She told him timidly that she had wanted to send him some of them from the day the first violet had lifted its head. "If I had known," he said huskily.

A rose unfolds its crimson heart to the sun—she moved nearer the minister.

A flush of shame mounted the Rev. Mr. Wigglesworth's brow. He mopped his face with his handkerchief, the thought crossed his brain that the Widow McLean didn't know a blessed thing about his sensations during the last twenty-four hours.

The girl talked on with a shy consciousness. The minister had never thought her pretty before and now her earnest, almost somber eyes looked at him gravely as if questioning this thing that held them apart.

A sudden vision of a cottage with crimson roses clustering on the verandas came to him and down a trellised walk above which crimson roses grew, Eliza, and not the widow, moved with eyes alight with happiness.

"Miss Ellington," he asked unhesitatingly. She gave him a look of sweet reproach. "Eliza, was there ever another?"

"Never," she said.

"And you have loved me?" questioningly.

"From the first," she said simply. The widow McLean had been married twice. The last scruple had vanished from the Rev. Mr. Wigglesworth's mind and he drew her into his arms and held her silently. A man has wisdom straight from the gods who is silent at such times.

Some hours later when he went home by way of the stars he didn't even glance at the young widow's house, he didn't even remember that she lived there.

She, although she did not remain the Widow McLean when tender thoughts of her former pastor, came to her, felt always a flush of shame when she remembered that night on the church steps. And to the day of her death she believed that by her unseemly conduct on that night she had lost the minister.

Eliza, secure in a good man's love, and unconscious of any debt to the widow, dwelt at peace.

More Loot from China

London, November, 7.—The steamship Krefeld, says the Berlin correspondent of The Times, has just brought to Germany 185 ancient, bronze guns, which formerly stood on the walls of Pekin.

The inscriptions on the guns show that they were cast more than 200 years ago in Chinese arsenals, under the superintendence of the Jesuits. The Krefeld also brought a number of Chinese gun carriages, with ammunition and wagons.

The most ornamental of the guns will be placed in the Naval Museum at Berlin. The others will be melted for the sake of the bronze in them.

The guns mentioned in the foregoing were probably made in the early part of the 17th century. The Jesuits first entered China in 1583, and in spite of various edicts against them, succeeded in increasing their influence to a remarkable extent. Schaal, a German Jesuit, about the year 1630, became one of the foremost men in the Empire, and some time afterward, the founder of the present dynasty, the Manchus, ordered him to reform the calendar.

Most of the famous astronomical instruments at Pekin, some of which have recently been taken to Germany were made at about the same period as the cannon referred to in the despatch.

Buffalo, Nov. 6.—Bids for the wrecking of the Pan-American Exposition were opened yesterday afternoon by Acting Director-General Carlton and the lowest bidders proved to be Hitner's Sons of Philadelphia. They propose to remove all of the buildings and restore the grounds to their original condition and pay the Exposition Company $33,364.50, the wreckers to have all the building material. The specifications provide that all of the machinery is to be removed and stored by the company for the wreckers and that the grounds are to be put back in their original condition by July 1, 1902.

The other bidders were the Chicago Wrecking Company and Thomas Brown of Buffalo. The unsuccessful bidders are said to have offered considerable less than did the Philadelphia firm.

Work will be commenced at once and continued throughout the winter and spring. The last of the contract will be the removal of the pavements. A large yard on a railroad side track will be leased and there the wreckage will be stored until the contractors desire its shipment to various parts of the country.

MUSIC FOR THE YOUNGER BOERS

London, Nov. 6.—Following the recent outcry against the treatment of children in South Africa concentration camps comes, an advertisement, inserted by the Board of Education in the morning papers, for female teachers to go to the camps in order to teach the children the simple rudiments and singing. Why should children be taught singing? pro-Boers will ask, in view of reports of sickness and death among them. A correspondent of the Times, however, asserts that the mortality among Boer children is always shockingly high. He says Boers frequently have families of twenty, half of whom die young.

LI HUNG CHANG IS DYING AT PEKIN

Pekin, Nov. 6.—12.40 p.m.—Li Hung Chang, the veteran Chinese statesman and intriguer, is approaching his latter end. It was announced this morning that he is dying. The death of the aged Oriental diplomat may exercise a great influence upon the affairs of the world, seeing that several European nations are deeply interested in the settlement of the Manchurian question, in which Li Hung Chang played a great part and is in part alleged to have acted as the confidential agent of Russia.

BITTER HATE OF GERMANS TO BRITAIN

London, Nov. 6.—The Berlin correspondent of the Times, after reviewing and commenting upon Great Britain's policy toward Germany, favors a direct agreement between Great Britain and Russia in regard to certain international matters. He asserts that Germany is about to make Persia a European question. The correspondent quotes a recently published lecture by Count Richard Moulineckart, who says that while Great Britain believes her recent treatment of the Emperor William has made him her friend. British criticisms of the Kaiser's message to Kruger were an insult to the whole German nation, and a day of reckoning is coming. The same authority declares Germany has been tricked a hundred times by Great Britain, but now she will not allow herself to be hampered in any way by Great Britain throughout the globe.

The Berlin branch of the German Students' Association has passed a resolution congratulating the University of Greifswald on its protest against the comparison by Joseph Chamberlain of the British and German methods of warfare. The resolution declares Chamberlain's words a libel on "our glorious army, which in battle won us Empire."

The Times correspondent points out that the Berliner Nachrichten, which is most hostile in its criticisms of British army methods, is owned by Krupp, who sells cannon to Great Britain.

FOMENTING DISCORD.

Rome, Nov. 5.—Perseveranza, quoted by the correspondent of the Times in the Italian capital, states that biased telegraphic agencies unfairly summarized for Continental publication the recent speech of Mr. Chamberlain at Edinburgh. The Times' correspondent intimates that the Italian Agenzia Stefani is much to blame for the spread of Anglophobia in Italy, and remarks that most of the London correspondents of Italian papers ably second it.

Could England Defend Canada?

Full particulars of the new Isthmain Canal treaty are not yet before us. But it seems certain that Great Britain has given way, and that full control of the canal is to be conceded to the United States. Great Britain has given away on this, as she did on the Venezuela question, as she has more or less in all questions between her or Canada and the United States. What else could we reasonably expect? Do we, any of us, believe that the British people could be induced to go to war for any object on this side of the Atlantic? Our braves used to talk about bombarding New York; but now the United States have become a great naval power. How could England undertake a defence of Canada? Could her fleet command Lake Superior, or her army repel invasion from the open frontier of the North-West? The British Government have never been regardless of Canadian interests or failed to do for them all that the best diplomacy could do. That has been the limit of its power. "I don't care where the Maine boundary is fixed," said Brougham, "so long as we have peace." Palmerston denounced the Ashburton treaty as a surrender, and tried to fire the national heart against it. He might as well have tried to fire the Thames with a lucifer match. There was not the faintest response to his denunciations.

It is not likely that anybody will be practically hurt by the consignment of the Nicaraguan Canal to American keeping, since it would be the clear interest of the United States to keep the canal open to commerce in time of peace and to guard its neutrality in time of war. In truth, the most serious danger in this connection is that which impends over the Americans themselves. It can hardly be doubted that the possession of the canal will be apt to draw their ambition southward. If they are led to incorporate Mexico, with millions of half-barbarous Indians, and the motley population of the other territories lying between them and the isthmus, besides that of Cuba, which they are evidently going to annex, a radical change of the character of their own people must apparently ensue, and must be followed by a corresponding change in the substance, if not in the form, of their institutions. The American Commonwealth has been brought by the criminal weakness of the late President to a pass of extreme peril. President McKinley's successor is certainly a far stronger, and there is reason to hope, a more honest man; but his personal leaning unfortunately is towards what is called expansion, when in fact it is dislocation, not without an ultimate tendency to dissolution.

Charge Against Nurses

Chicago, Nov. 7.—Two female nurses at the asylum for the insane at Dunning, Ills., will to-morrow be formally charged by Secretary Follett W. Ball, of the Civil Service Reform Association, with having caused the death of two patients in the asylum Kate Neddo and Kate Kurkowski.

The charge will be made that the nurses deliberately withheld food from the patients some times giving them nothing at all and for weeks nothing but bread and tea. It will also be charged that medicines provided for the patients were not administrated to them. The motive to be assigned in the charges is that the patients were especially obnoxious to the nurses, and that their course was prompted by a desire to so weaken the patients that they would become ill and be sent to a ward for the sick, thus relieving the nurses of the care of them. It will be charged that this course was carried too far, and that the patients' deaths resulted from it. The women died early in September, and the cause of death were given in the death certificates as inanition in one case and scurvy in the other. The case was brought to the attention of the Civil Service Reform Association by Miss Jane Addams, Miss Julia C. Lathrop and Dr. Alice Hamilton, of Hull House, who gained their first information from Dr. Clara Ferguson for six years we-

THE YUKON COUNTRY

Montreal, Nov. 7.—Mr. E. Bredenberg, an English prospector who has resided in the Yukon district for the last four years was in the city to-day on his way back to the Old Country. Mr. Bredenberg has already spent a number of years as a prospector in South Africa, Australia and California, and is especially well able to speak of the prospects of a gold region. When seen by a representative of the Times, he said that, owing to the fact that he was acting for an English firm who were largely interested in a number of mines, he was not in a position to make public all he knew about the district. He would, however, say that his experience had been that the Yukon district was a far greater gold field than the Indian district. In the interests of his company he had gone into every district in which there had been any prospect of finding gold. In his opinion some parts of the country compared most favorably with the fields in the other countries he had visited.

"How do you account, then, for the large number that have been unsuccessful?"

"They have not been more numerous than elsewhere. It was simply a case of wanting to secure riches without working for it. Those who had turned to, and hustled for themselves and used their brains, and got on well. It is my opinion that the Yukon still has a great future before it, much greater, in fact, than most people seem to think."

"But there has certainly been a transformation in the district since I went there four years ago. Dawson has already become a great city, and with the opening up of the Nome district, Nome city has been making remarkable progress."

Mr. Bredenberg will return to the Yukon in the spring.

THE PHILIPPINE WAR GOES BRAVELY ON

Manila, Nov. 8.—The insurgents yesterday attacked San Jose, in the province of Batangas, Luzon, which was garrisoned by a detachment of the Twenty-first Infantry, under Lieut. Patrick A. Connolly. The Americans fought hard, but were unable to prevent the burning of the town.

Gen. Sumner reports a fight which took place at daybreak Wednesday at Taysan, also in the province of Batangas, between Companies D and I, of the First Cavalry, and a band of insurgents.

There was desultory firing the whole forenoon, when the insurgents were driven into the mountains. The cavalry destroyed the insurgents barracks, storehouse, 3,000 pounds of rice and many uniforms and blankets.

The people of the island of Samar have been notified to concentrate in the towns, otherwise they will be considered public enemies and outlaws and will be treated accordingly.

Intense feeling exists among the troops in Samar. If they can meet the enemy in the open there will be great retaliation. Many of the men have seen and others have heard of the barbarous treatment which the dead American soldiers were subjected to by the Filipinos recently.

Francisco de Jesus, Lukban's chief commissary, was recently captured and taken to Cebu. Papers which he had in his possession have resulted in the arrest of many of the best-known Presidents and other civil officials of the island of Leyte.

It develops that Biliran island, north of the island of Leyte, has been shotted of the insurrection. Every civil official there has been aiding the insurgents of Samar in every way. They have landed heavy cargoes of rice and have received hemp in exchange.

Several thousand dollars also fell into the hands of the Americans when De Jesus was made prisoner. His capture is considered to be a great disaster to the revolutionary cause.

THE JOLLY TARS DISPERSED REBELS

Cape Town, Nov. 6.—A small commando of Cape rebels raided Steenberg's Cove, St. Helena Bay, early last month and ransacked the entire village. They stole twelve horses, looted the postoffice and the local stores, orders and placed the Government officials in jail. Subsequently the rebels visited Hetaje's Bay, where they were engaged in looting when the gunboat Partridge arrived and dropped a few rounds of shrapnel among them. They retired into the interior.

GORDON CONVALESCENT.

Ottawa, Nov. 6.—A letter from Miss Richards, a Canadian nursing sister in South Africa, states that Lieut.-Col. Gordon, who has been ill in the military hospital at Wynberg for a long time, is now convalescent.

ESCAPE OF THE HERTZOGS.

Bloemfontein, Nov. 6. — Fourteen prisoners were captured by General Hamilton during operations in the southern portion of the Orange River Colony last month. Commandants Lategan and Nouhout and the Hertzog brothers narrowly escaped capture during the skirmishing which occurred almost daily. Rain greatly hampered the British movements.

NOT TROUBLING BRITISH HORSES.

Pretoria, Nov. 6.— The outbreak of horse sickness which is playing so much havoc among the Boer animals has not yet appeared to any great extent among the British horses.

Ottawa, Nov. 6.—Commanding officers of corps which served in South Africa have endorsed the proposal to award the Imperial war medal to Dr. H. W. Barrie and T. F. Best, Y.M.C.A. representatives in South Africa. Nothing has been heard at the Department of Militia of the proposed grant of a medal to each of the Canadian correspondents who were in South Africa.

While Mr. Doughty was paddling from [illegible] [illegible] to Burleigh, he spied a bear in the water, and shot it. It proved to be a very fine one. Mr. Doughty brought it home with him.

Perfect Manhood

Is rightly yours; but if you are not the man you should be, if you are losing your energy, your Vital force, memory, annoyed by Varicocele, shrunken parts, and feeling if you don't care what happens, you are suffering from Lost Vitality; it creeps upon men unawares; do not deceive yourself or remain in ignorance while you are being dragged down by this disease; no matter what the cause may be, whether early abuse, excess, or overwork and business cares, the results are the same; premature loss of strength and memory, emissions, impotency, Varicocele and shrunken parts. OUR LATEST METHOD TREATMENT WILL CURE YOU. We guarantee it as a positive cure for these conditions; it is the outcome of years of experience; it equalizes the circulation, stops all drains, thereby vitalizes the parts, restoring them to their natural condition and makes the man of you as nature has intended. Do not be misled by so-called Specialists and Institutes. Read the following facts:

1. We do not accept an incurable case for treatment.
2. Each time you call you see Dr. Goldberg personally. He has 18 Diplomas, etc. which should be sufficient guarantee to his abilities. All other chronic, private and Blood Poison Specialists either have some doctor in charge of their office or have an assistant to doctor you.
3. We are doing business on our own reputation, not of our predecessor.
4. Our records show more actual cures than all the other Specialists combined.
5. You need pay nothing until you are convinced that you are thoroughly cured.

OUR LATEST METHOD TREATMENT GUARANTEED TO CURE

Varicocele and Stricture without cutting, Stretching, or loss of time; also Blood Poison, Chronic, Nervous, Impotency, Kidney, Liver, Bladder, Stomach, Female and Rectal Troubles. CONSULTATION FREE. Call or write for blank for home treatment. BOOK FREE. Hours 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. Sundays, 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Asthma Cure Free!

Asthmalene Brings Instant Relief and Permanent Cure in All Cases,

Sent ABSOLUTELY FREE on receipt of postal. Write your name and address plainly.

CHAINED FOR TEN YEARS
HAY FEVER
ASTHMA
EVERY [illegible] BRINGS RELIEF.

There is nothing like Asthmalene. It brings instant relief, even in the worst cases. It cures when all else fails.

The Rev. C. F. WELLS, of Villa Ridge, Ill., says: "Your trial bottle of Asthmalene received in good condition. I cannot tell you how thankful I feel for the good derived from it. I was a slave, chained with putrid sore throat and Asthma for ten years. I despaired of ever being cured. I saw your advertisement for the cure of this dreadful and tormenting disease, Asthma, and thought you had overspoken yourselves, but resolved to give it a trial. To my astonishment, the trial acted like a charm. Send me a full-size bottle."

REV. DR. MORRIS WECHSLER
Rabbi of the Cong. Bnai Israel.
New York, Jan. 3, 1901.

Drs. Taft Bros.' Medicine Co.:

Gentlemen: Your Asthmalene is an excellent remedy for Asthma and Hay Fever, and its composition alleviates all troubles which combine with asthma. Its success is astonishing and wonderful.

After having it carefully analyzed, we can state that Asthmalene contains no opium, morphine, chloroform or ether. Very truly yours,

REV. DR. MORRIS WECHSLER.

Avon Springs, N. Y., Feb. 1, 1901.

Dr. Taft Bros. Medicine Co.

Gentlemen: I write this testimonial from a sense of duty, having tested the wonderful effect of your Asthmalene, for the cure of Asthma. My wife has been afflicted with spasmodic asthma for the past 12 years. Having exhausted my own skill as well as many others, I chanced to see your sign upon your windows at 130th street, New York. I at once obtained a bottle of Asthmalene. My wife commenced taking it about the 1st of November. I very soon noticed a radical improvement. After using one bottle her asthma has disappeared and she is entirely free from all symptoms. I feel that I can consistently recommend the medicine to all who are afflicted with this distressing disease. Yours respectfully,

O. D. PHELPS, M. D.

Dr. Taft Bros. Medicine Co.

Gentlemen: I was troubled with Asthma for 22 years. I have tried numerous remedies but they have all failed. I ran across your advertisement and started with a trial bottle. I found relief at once. I have since purchased your full-size bottle and I am ever grateful. I have a family of four children and for six years was unable to work. I am now in the best of health and am doing business every day. This testimony you can make such use of as you see fit.

Home address, 235 Rivington street.

Cancer Growing

Two Years.

Not long ago, we had the pleasure receiving the following letter:

"When I began your treatment there was a hard lump in my breast, which had been growing for two years, and it got so bad at last that it drew the nipple in. I consulted two doctors, and they both pronounced it cancer, and advised me to have my breast cut off. Your remedy, however, was recommended to me by a friend, and I am very thankful to say that it not only saved my life, but did away with the necessity of having to undergo the painful operation, which I so much dreaded."

We do not publish the names of those who give us testimonials for the gratification of the curious, but any sufferer from cancer or tumor, may have the name and address of the lady who wrote the above, by sending 2 stamps to Stott & Jury, Bowmanville, Ont.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

Local Happenings Picked Up Here and There by The Times.

NOTE.—The Times requests its readers to contribute items of news to its columns. Anything that is phoned or sent in writing to the office, of a nature suitable for publication, will be received and published.—Ed. Times.]

—To-morrow is the King's birthday.

—Mr. Max Giroux, Peterborough's young hypnotist, will give an entertainment in Lakefield this evening.

—Mr. J. M. Brooks, who is deer hunting in the neighborhood of Sandrige, has had good luck. A letter received yesterday by Mrs. Brooks, states that he killed a deer, and his party secured seven.

—The Royal Chorus is being photographed at Whiten's. The photo will be a valuable souvenir to remember when the Royal chorus sang before the future King and Queen of England.

—Lindsay Post,—A union for journeymen tailors was organized last night, with a membership of twenty. Mr. Hugh Robinson, of Hamilton, the organizer, left to-day for Peterboro, where he will undertake to organize a union there.

Lindsay Post,—Mr. P. B. McIlhargey local drover, shipped a load of hogs to the Matthews Co. Peterborough, to-day. He secured the animals chiefly from farmers in Mariposa, paying $5.40 per hundred live weight.

A Good Advertisement

The trouble over No. 5 dam may not be a bad thing for the town afterall, as it has advertised the fact that Peterborough possess an unlimited supply of cheap power. Dr. Carmichael told The Times yesterday that Mr. Stratton deserves the thanks of the citizens on this account. All of which goes to prove the truth of the old saying: "It's an ill wind that blows nobody good."

Private Instructions

Prof. Sheets is prepared to give instructions in physical culture, deportment and dancing, at private residences. For particulars apply to Prof. Sheets, at Foresters' Hall, Simcoe St.

Off to the Central

Smith, the lad, who some weeks ago was sentenced to two years in the Central Prison, Toronto, for stealing copper wire from the Canadian General Electric Co., and Jas. Elves, who a few days ago received his sentence of two years in the Central for stealing a watch and other articles from Mrs. Ensign of town, were taken to prison yesterday. They were brought down to the station by Jailer Nesbitt, and handed over to the Provincial authorities.

The Royal Concert Last Night

The success of last evening's concert will prompt the question of how to keep this magnificent chorus together. Mr. Mulligan's efforts should by ably seconded by our influential and monied citizens in the gathering togetherof funds to form a philharmgether of funds to form a philharmonic society. The comments were made audibly at the concert, and the tone of the two beautiful Stanley pianos came in for a large share of the admiration of an appreciative audience. It is with pardonable pride that the cultured and music-loving people of Peterborough speak of having this industry in their midst.

A Hunting Episode

Lindsay Post,—A Kinmount hunting party comprising the following members—Messrs. A. H. Brandon, G.T.R. agent at that village, M. A. Hopkins, P. Chemel, R. J. Graham, D. Mills, W. Joy and Wm. McCormack,—started out in search of mountain mutton on Saturday last, and before they had got many miles away they had a rather exciting experience. When in the vicinity of the railway crossing near the Irondale Junction they almost tripped over a bunch of nine deer. Mr. Joy springted after a large buck, but when he got within a few yards of the animals, with gun at half-cock he became so nervous that he could not pull the trigger. The buck then turned and charged jumped over his pursuer's head, and knocked off his hat. My Joy was so badly scared that he was unable to say in what direction the animal disappeared; one of his thoughts, when he saw the deer coming toward him, was that it was old Nick with an arm chair on his head, and a handkerchief hanging out of his hip pocket. The other members of the party fired ninety-nine shots at the rest of the bunch without effect.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Events Under This Head Transpiring in and Around Peterborough.

NOTE.—The Times requests its readers to furnish the paper with items of a personal and social nature either by phone or in writing.—Ed. Times.]

—Mrs. Peter Campbell leaves on a visit to New York to-night.

—Mr. Chas Stanley left for Toronto yesterday to attend his sister's wedding, which took place last night.

—Mrs. O O. Sheets and little daughter, Bernice, of Collingwood, are spending a few weeks with Prof. Sheets, who has classes here.

—Mr. Alex. Marks, representing Marks Bros' No. 1 comedy company which opens a two weeks' engagement here on Nov. 11, was in town yesterday.

—Yesterday Messrs. W. R. Hartshorne and A. H. Stratton left to join the Gold Lake Hunt Club. They took with them a number of Mr. Dickson Jewett's carrier pigeons.

—Mr. Thomas G. Anderson is in Cobourg. As a representative of St. Andrew's Guild he attended a banquet given by the Brotherhood of St Andrew to the men of the Presbyterian church on Wednesday evening in that town.

—Mr. Chas. Wallace, of the Canadian Savings Company, of which Mr. H. Newton is the capable local representative, is in town on business connected with this popular and progressive Company.

—Lt. Percy Price and Sergt.-Major Terrill, of the 3rd Prince of Wales Dragoons, left yesterday for the "Soo," near which they will locate the Government grants of land which are theirs as South African veterans. Mr. Chill Turner expects to do likewise in a few days.

—Port Hope Guide,—Rev. C B Kenrick, formerly Rector of St. Mark's church here, called on the Guide last night. He has resigned his charge in St. John's. Mr. Kenrick is not taken up with New Brunswickians. He says it is like being in a foreign country; they are too slow for him. He purposes making his future home in Toronto.

Heavily Fined

Yesterday at the Police Court Fred McCormack, town was fined $10 and $17.20 costs, for assaulting Wm. Leeper at the Nicholls oval in August last.

FRANK WISE APPOINTED

He is Now Caretaker of the Little Lake Cemetery

At a meeting of the Directors of the Little Lake Cemetery Company, held yesterday afternoon, the resignation of Mr. W. H. Foord, as caretaker, to take effect at the end of the year, was accepted, and of the applications received that of Mr. Frank Wise, of Picton, formerly of Peterborough, was unanimously accepted.

The Board feel confident that in Mr. Wise they have made an excellent choice. During his residence here he showed himself a capable florist and landscape gardener, and his employment in Picton having also been in that business, he brings with him an experience and recommendation that assures his success in the office of a most efficient predecessor.

You Feel all Used up

You're discouraged and disgusted, not enough energy to think, less to go to work upon. The reason? You are run down, your blood is poor, your nerves are like India Rubber not like steel as they ought to be. Use Ferrozone and the tired feeling will go, for it makes plenty of rich, red blood that feeds the brain and nerves. The desire to labor comes back and you enjoy it. You don't get tired, because you have used Ferrozone. Neglect not a day longer. Ferrozone will cure you. Sold by Ormond & Walsh, Price 50c.

A BRUTAL DRIVER

A Horse of Mr. Leary's Driven Almost to Death Wednesday Night

On Wednesday night a man pulled up in front of Mr. J. W. Doughty's place of business on Water Street, and enquired the way to the Oriental Hotel. The horse which the fellow drove was "steaming hot," and had the appearance of having been badly abused. Mr. Doughty recognized it as belonging to Mr. Leary's livery, and promptly notified that gentleman. A messenger was sent to the hotel, and the horse brought to the stable. The fellow, who appeared to be a commercial man, had disappeared inside. For two hours or more the horse had to be walked up and down the stable to cool off. The blankets which covered the poor animal were soaking wet with perspiration, and had to be changed every few minutes.

Mr. Leary endeavoured to ascertain the name of the driver, who had hired the horse to go to Lakefield, but Mr. Graham refused to give him any information. An example should have been made of the fellow.

KNIGHTS OF THE MACCABEES

Hold Their Annual at Home and Basket Social—A Very Pleasant Time

The Knights of the Maccabees held their annual at home and basket social Wednesday evening in their new hall on Water-st. Mr. R. F. McGregor occupied the chair, and a very pleasing programme was carried out, as follows.

Chairman's address... Mr. R. F. McGregor.
Solo... ... ...Mr. James Browne.
Recitation... ... ...Miss Maud Titterson.
Limelight views ... ...Mr. F. M. Cobb.
Solo... ....Mr. James Browne.
Recitation... ....Miss Murray.
Recitation ... ...Master Ross Titterson.
Duet... ... ...Mrs. McCallum and Miss Brooks.
Limelight views ... ...Mr. F. M. Cobb.

After the programme the baskets were sold and a pleasant half hour spent in partaking of the refreshments.

Tendency of Catarrh is to Spread

Just a slight matter at first, and because slight, neglected; but the seed sown brings forth a dangerous harvest. Consumption, which is the harvest of death. Better spend a few moments each day inhaling Catarrhozone, an aromatic antiseptic that relieves at once, clears the nasal passages, and restores lost sense of taste and smell. The immediate effect of Catarrhozone is magical, so prompt and efficient. Cure is certain and permanent if you use Catarrhozone. Price $1. WANT THE CANAL OPEN

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—As everybody in the back country reads The Times, I would like to ask through your paper, if there is any chance of having the canal opened this fall between Lakefield and Warsaw-road, Peterborough? There is quite a lot of wood that would find its way to Peterborough this fall if the waterway was open. I, myself have 200 cords, besides several scows of stone which I would like to bring down.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, I am

WM. TRENNUM,
Township Harvey.

Reply.—The Times called at the Superintending Engineer's office, and was informed that the canal would not be opened this year. It appears that there is some dredging to be done at Lakefield, which will take several weeks to finish. While this is going on the canal cannot be used.—Ed. Times.

ABOUT SOCIALISM

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I would like to know through the columns of your excellent journal what Socialism means. Is it synonomous with Anarchism? I am told that there is a great difference; please explain what it is, and oblige

A. READER.

Reply.—Socialism, as understood by all Socialists of to-day, means the public ownership of all of the means of production and distribution. We have many Socialistic institutions in the country, such as the courts, schools, parks, streets, and highways, the army and navy, and also the postal system with its free delivery of the mail even in rural districts. Many cities and even villages have their own light and waterworks, etc.—Ed. Times.

ANOTHER VIEW OF THE MATTER

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—The letter-writer in your paper of yesterday, "A Merchant," fancies that because the merchants pay taxes on what they have paid for (mighty little sometimes) therefore the whole town ought to fall down and worship them. I would say first of all that the money spent in policing, lighting, roading, etc., these small shopmen, who call themselves merchants, is what we outsiders have got to pay. Then who asks the merchants to double their number every year? A few shops would do us, yet these people think that the "merchants" are a necessity to the town. Why, Hall & Son could do all the linen-draping for Peterborough! Yet when these shopmen compete with each other to their loss, they begin to demand fewer holidays for the people, etc. If "Merchant" had any head he would see that the fault here is in competition—not in the people. Don't squeeze the people, friend, or you'll get into a snarl. I heard a lecturer say in London that tradesmen were the middlemen who lived by collecting tolls on the people. Knock off some of your competition, and you may let us ask for a holiday for King Edward, whether it is Saturday or any other day. I suppose if there were fifty more "merchants" in town you would move to stop all holidays. Eh!

Yours etc.,
FOR THE CLERKS.

THE KING'S BIRTHDAY

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—Because his Majesty's loyal subjects wish to keep his birthday in a becoming manner "A Merchant" in a letter in to-day's Times, calls us, among other names "super-loyal" and "lip-loyalists." How does he reconcile the two terms? He says he "objects to holidays at this time of the year." It is a pity he should not have been consulted as to when the King should have been born. When he wishes to relegate the King's birth to another day why does he not name the 17th of March or the 12th of July or some other festive occasion and thereby lessen the number of holidays, and get rid of it coming "at this time of the year" instead of making two holidays of it at the same time of the year, which his plan would necessitate for with all his assumption he does not assert that the King's birthday being a statutory holiday can be changed by any authority other than by an Act of the Dominion Parliament, when all the public offices will be closed, notwithstanding the "lip-loyalty" of a handful of men, and the ultra vires action of our Common Council. Does he want the banks, post-office, registry office and other offices closed on both days? Does he not recognize the fact that others as well as merchants have to make a living and pay taxes. When Christmas and New Years fall on Saturday, the trade is done on Friday instead, and we never heard any grumbling. Nor does it effect the volume of trade when all are closed alike. If this handful of men made the same abuse of the Queen's Birthday, it does not improve their position. All others thought it wrong, and two wrongs don't make a right. He may be an authority as to what they do or may do in England, but we have enough to do to attend to our own conduct. Nor are the merchants as a whole in favor of the postponement, and for proof see Ald. Edgcumb's action in the Council. It is only a few who prize filthy lucre more than loyalty.

CONSISTENCY.

Peterborough, Nov. 7, 1901.

A COINCIDENCE

Mr. Wm. Bunton Visits Montreal and the Whale Surrenders.

For some days a huge whale has been disporting in Montreal harbor, much to the terror of a number of the citizens. Every effort was made to capture the monster, without success. Finally, a number of strangers took a hand in the sport and succeeded in landing his whaleship. The Times has it on good authority that Mr. Bunton, who was in the city, engineered the job, as he did many another, and having the subject of whaling on his mind, went to work. When in England some months ago, Billy met the Prince of Whales, and learned a thing or two. Besides he had read in the good book, the thrilling incident about Jonah, and therefore was familiar with the habits of these marine creatures. Billy says the whale is a corker. He will use his influence to have it presented to the Lime Juice Club.

A MARVELLOUS MEDICINE

"No Cure, No Pay," is the Newest Progress of the Proprietors of Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—We make the following proposal to the readers of the Times: To any one who is a subject of rheumatism (no matter how long standing) or any blood disease, as enumerated below, and will give Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills a fair trial and do not find a perfect cure, we will refund the money paid for the pills. If no substantial improvement is observed, we will in addition, pay $10 in cash on satisfactory evidence being supplied as to this effect.

We have yet to know of a single case where these wonderful pills have not been almost entirely successful in affecting a cure. CANADA CHEMICAL CO.

Ex-Ald. Bailey, St. John's, writes: "I cannot speak too highly of Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills. They worked a miracle in my case, and cured me after many years of suffering. I do not think their equal is to be obtained.

Dr Clarke's Little Red Pills are a positive and certain cure for la grippe, rheumatism, asthma, paralysis, catarrh, eczema, coughs, backache, indigestion, all stomach and liver troubles, female complaints, even when the diseases having been standing for many years, the most stubborn cases will yield. Price 50 cents per box. For sale by Ormond & Walsh. The Canada Chemical Company will forfeit $10 for any case that these pills do not help.

Dr. Clarke's Sure Cure for Catarrh, and Dr. Clarke's Sure Cure for Eczema same price. $10 will be paid for any case they will not permanently cure.

"My Kidneys are all Wrong! How shall I insure best results in the shortest time?" It stands to reason that a liquid specific of the unquestionable merit of South American Kidney Cure will go more directly and quickly to the seat of the trouble than the "pill form" treatment, and when it strikes the spot there's healing in an instant.—76

Contingent Question Considered at Ottawa—Rumors Fully Confirmed at Ottawa

First Offer Received for Third Contingent—Major Boulanger Heads the List

Wants Canada to Stay in the War Col. Denison Says We Should See It Through

London, Nov. 8.—Inquiry at the War Office to-day regarding Canada's offer of mounted infantry made last May elicited a reply that the Imperial Government had taken no steps as yet to avail themselves of the offer, which is still regarded as open. The War Office would have to receive the sanction of the Cabinet before the offer.

THE CONTINGENT QUESTION.

Ottawa, Nov. 8. — Semi-official denials to the contrary notwithstanding, the statement wired that the Government had been considering the question of another contingent for South Africa is fully confirmed to-day in reliable quarters. It was definitely decided not to approach the War Office officially with a renewed offer, as a communication of that nature was still before them, but to await an intimation from Downing street before proceeding further.

FIRST OFFER RECEIVED.

Ottawa, Nov. 9.—The first application of a Canadian officer to serve on another Canadian contingent for South Africa, should it be decided to send one, is from a personal friend of Col. Pienault, the Deputy Minister himself, namely, Major Boulanger, of the First Battery, Quebec.

TO STAY WITH THE WAR.

Toronto, Nov. 9.—"The bones of Canadian soldiers lie buried on the veldt. Why should not Canada help to finish the war, and win the cause for which they died?"

The speaker was Lieut.-Col. George T. Denison. And as he uttered the words his frame stiffened to a military erectness, his eyes flashed. He stood in the spacious hall of Heydon Villa, where from the walls gaze down the ever-rampant heroes of Waterloo and the chief actors in many other epoch-making events in Britain's martial history.

"Should Canada send another contingent to South Africa? Why, of course she should. She should have done so long ago." He blazed forth with patriotism and conviction.

"You ask if Canada should send more men to South Africa?" he repeated, with a tone and inflection indicating that he did not understand how the question could be asked in any seriousness. "Does anyone say we should not? In all conscience, does anyone say we should not?"

The interviewer was scarcely prepared for such an outburst. He hesitated.

"Who says we should not?" demanded the master of Heyden Villa, turning the tables and interviewing the interview.

"Have you not heard it said that Canada needs her young men at home, that she cannot afford to throw them away on distant battle fields?" parried the interview.

"Trash and nonsense!" the Imperialist exclaimed. "I cannot believe that any one really thinks that. We had men fighting in South Africa. They came home. Whom have we sent to take their places? No one! Was the war over when they left the scene of action? Is it over yet? Was it not mean to leave others to fight the issue to the finish after starting with such pretentious promises of aid?"

"How can Canada continue to stand aloof at the present time? With soldiers once in the field, the war became her war, and she should have stayed with it till the end.

"Dozens of her sons lie in unmarked graves out on the veldt. What is she doing to win the cause for which they died?

"Can any Canadian seriously argue that we are justified in bringing our two or three thousand troops home from their comrades' graves to sit down and wait till others vanquish the foe?

THE WAR WAS JUST.

Col. Denison acquiesced, but immediately broke out impatiently: "But the right or wrong of the original question of sending troops does enter into the situation. There was indeed no question of right or wrong. There was only one thing to do. The Empire was threatened. I say if the British had been defeated in South Africa the final result would have been the dismemberment of the Empire. Canada, as part of the Empire, sent troops to help fight the battles of the Empire, and help avert the great danger. And why has she withdrawn from the contest?"

A THOUGHTFUL STATION MAN.

Conductor Fred Haskill, who runs the through lightning express without change of cars, between Peterborough and Lakefield, tells the following story: Some years ago I was running on the main line, and at a certain flag station no regular agent was employed, as there is not business enough to pay. One of the business men is a sort of agent. One day he was ill and sent a neighbor to the track. We didn't stop there except on signal. We were going forty miles an hour, when the flag was waved and we stopped. No one was in sight, except the old man with the flag.

"Where are your passengers?" I asked.

"I haven't got any,' he replied.

"What did you flag us for?"

A Former Resident

Mr. W. P. McLean, the young man who was accidentally killed at the Gasoline Engine works, Toronto Junction, on Wednesday, was formerly a resident here, his father, Mr. W. McLean, 81 Huxley street, Toronto, having been a patternmaker in the employ of the Wm. Hamilton Co. The family removed from Peterborough about 15 years ago. An inquest is being held to investigate the circumstances surrounding the young man's death. Interment will take place here.

EXTENDING THEIR PREMISES

The Peterborough Canoe Company has taken out the first building permit ever issued in Peterborough, and have begun the construction of a 24x40 ft. addition to their factory on Water street. Their new addition will be three storeys in height, and will be a substantial brick structure.

The town bylaw regulating the construction of buildings requires that a permit be issued by the town engineer, for all structures to be erected within the fire limits. The object is to prevent the erection of undesirable buildings.

Escaped Convicts

Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 8.— Twenty-six convicts escaped from guards at Leavenworth yesterday. In the mutiny one of the convicts was killed and four guards were wounded.

BURGHERS TAKEN ONLY AS PRISONERS OF WAR

Boers in Good Condition, Have Plenty to Eat and Lots of Ammunition

THE BOERS DO NOT RESPECT AN OATH.

No Orders from Militia Department Regarding Removal of Canadians to Bermuda

London, Nov. 8. — Reports received here say that Lord Kitchener has become so exasperated at the repeated recaptures of Boers, who have surrendered, sworn allegiance to the British Crown and taken up arms again that he has instructed his officers that no more voluntary surrenders will hereafter be accepted. In future, whether the burghers come into the British camps and surrender willingly, under a flag of truce, or are taken in engagements, they will be treated as prisoners of war and deported.

BOERS IN GOOD CONDITION.

Cape Town, Nov. 8.—A member of the Imperial Yeomanry, who recently spent a few days in the Boer camps, has arrived here, having been released by order of Commandant Pypher. He says that the Boers have plenty to eat, are well clad and have plenty of arms and ammunition (Metford and Lee-Enfield), and excellent horses. The Yeoman reports that he and his companions were well treated during their confinement in the laager.

COULDN'T GET ACROSS.

Bloemfontein, Nov. 7. — During the last few days several unsuccessful attempts have been made by Commandant Kritsinger with his commando of 200 men, to cross the railway in the vicinity of Thaba N'Chu. The result of the census of the civilian population of Bloemfontein, taken on October 30, shows that there are 3,200 adults and 2,294 children in the town. The population is made up of Boers, Hollanders, Germans, English, Scotch, Irish, Welsh, Americans, Poles, Italians, Russians, Swiss, French, Portuguese and Australians. There are also 112 Jews.

CANADIANS FOR BERMUDA.

Ottawa, Nov. 8.—The Militia Department professes to know nothing of the proposal to remove three companies of the Third Regiment of Royal Canadian Infantry to Bermuda to guard Boer prisoners. In all probability the men would have to be re-attested to perform this service, but the men themselves would no doubt be glad of the change. Military life in Halifax during the winter season is fearfully monotonous.

London, Nov. 8.—According to The Daily News Miss Hobhouse, who recently made a severe attack on the concentration camps in South Africa, has been arrested in that country. She will probably be sent back to England.

Very Sudden Death at Port Hope

About nine o'clock yesterday morning Mr. Samuel Green, coachman for Mr. Geo. H. Ralston, of "Hill and Dale," Port Hope, died very suddenly. He, with A. Whittle, had been speeding one of Mr. Ralston's thoroughbreds on the Cobourg road. They had just turned to go home and were remarking upon some fine points in the animal when Mr. Green fell over against Mr. Whittle, who at once drove with all speed to Dr. Clemesha but was beyond aid, having almost immediately passed away. Deceased was about 54 years of age, and a member of the Independent Order of Foresters. He [illegible] a widow, four daughters, Mrs. W. A. [illegible], Port Hope; Edith and Ottie, at home; May, in Toronto; and one son, James, at Longford Mills.

Our Street Railway and Lakefield

The Lakefield News, in referring to the possibility of opening the street railway, says: It stated that amongst the possibilities was a line to Lakefield and Chemong. How this would affect Lakefield it is hard to conjecture. In some ways, it would be of great service to the residents. The most important question to some minds is how would it affect our merchants. There is no gainsaying the fact that they would be confronted with competition from larger and stronger firms, the advent of such a line would make access to Peterborough trade much easier than it is at present. For our part, however, we consider that so long as our merchants keep up their present efficient stocks and hold to their very reasonable prices they have nothing whatever to fear on this score.

Y. W. C. A. Notes

The regular weekly gospel meeting held on Sabbath afternoon, Nov. 3rd, was well attended, and a most helpful address was delivered by Rev. J. G. Potter, on "The Curiosity of a Queen," based upon I Kings: 10, 1—11. He emphasized specially that it was a curiosity to find out the reason of his fame 'concerning the name of the Lord,' [illegible] worthy of imitation, also that she went away praising God, and saying, "the half was not told me."

The attendance at the different classes and clubs during the week has been well up to the average, and classes in wood-carving and English literature organized with most capable instructors.

It is rumored that an entertainment is to be given in the course of the next two weeks, by a company of most talented and highly cultured young women, who are most interested in the furnishing of the new Y.W.C.A. rooms—watch the papers for further notices.

BULLETIN FOR THE COMING WEEK.

The week beginning November 10th, has been set apart as a week of prayer for the Young Women's Christian Associations throughout the world. In view of this, special meetings will be held on Sunday afternoon at 4.15, Tuesday at 8 p.m., Thursday at 8 p.m., and Friday at the same hour, in the Y.W.C.A. rooms on George street. All friends are invited to join us in these services. The Sunday afternoon meeting will be led by the secretary and will close promptly at 5.15. There will be special music. All young women are invited to be present.

The leaders for the week-night meetings, and subjects, will be announced later.

VESSEL WRECKED ON LAKE HURON

Eureka Lost off Kincardine in a Strong Westerly Gale

THE MATE'S WIFE DROWNED.

Kincardine, Ont., Nov. 8. — The schooner Eureka, loaded with lumber from Tawas for Lorain, Ohio, became waterlogged and went to pieces yesterday evening about twenty miles from this place. The crew took to a raft, and after being buffeted all night by the waves raised by a strong westerly wind and upset frequently, reached the shore about two miles north of here at six o'clock this morning. The cook, who was the mate's wife, was drowned. The survivors were much exhausted. The crew consisted of Captain H. S. Hughes, Port Huron; Mate Arthur Bigger, Cheboygan; Fred Carpenter and Jas. Sharkey, Alpena; Mrs. Bigger's body has been recovered.

Another Gas Find

It may be interesting to Peterborough people to learn that Collingwood is excited over the prospect of an unlimited supply of natural gas. The Bulletin says: The success with which Mr. Carpenter met in boring for natural gas a few weeks ago has aroused a lively interest in the matter. A well has been sunk at the Globe Hotel, which appears to be a greater success than any previously bored. Others are now in process of digging, and it is said that still further attempts to find this valuable commodity will be made as soon as possible. It is tolerably certain that gas may be found anywhere in the town at a depth of from seventy-five to one hundred and eighty feet. The quantity does not appear to be large, nor the pressure more than about fifty pounds, but to judge by the old well, which Mr. Carpenter has been using for the past eleven years the supply may be reckoned continuous.

Dissapointment Caused Insanity

Hyde Park, Mass., Nov. 8. — Announcement was made here to-day of the death of Adolph F. Kraus, the famous sculptor, which took place at the Danver's Insane Hospital last night. Mr. Kraus has been receiving treatment at the institution since last July. He was 51 years of age. A widow, four sons and two daughters survive.

A pensioner of the Prussian Government and winner of the Grand Prize of Rome, the name of the sculptor was established in Europe before he came to America in 1881. In this country he continued to win fame, and it was the disappointment of his ambition to produce a masterpiece which is said to have caused his mind to give way. He had partially completed a model in clay of a heroic figure of Belshazzar at the moment of seeing the handwriting on the wall, when it began to crumble and Kraus was compelled to abandon the work. His mind became unbalanced soon afterwards.

Among his noted pieces in America are the Theodore Parker and the Crispus Attucks monuments and the Iowa State soldiers' monument. He was the sculptor of the winged figures of victory that crowned the towers of machinery hall at the World's Fair at Chicago, and which received great admiration.

BOOK NOTICE.

No words of praise are too strong to speak in commendation of this splendid book. It takes the subjects concerning which young women everywhere are so ignorant, and lifts them into the exalted place they must ever hold in the minds of the intelligent and pure. No other class are so entirely without information as most brides, young wives and young mothers. Three thousand years ago the inspired writer declared "the people are destroyed for lack of knowledge," and the statement is still true to-day. This book to young wives and mothers should have been written centuries ago, and no time should now be lost in bringing it into the hands of every young woman of marriageable age in the land. It tells every young wife just what she needs to know, and saves from the blind blundering and sad mistakes which have wrecked so many lives. It equips the young wife to discharge intelligently the duties of her responsible and sacred relation. Its chapters are ennobling and inspiring. It places the whole subject in the realm of pure and sacred thought and contemplation.

A series of books upon personal and social purity of which this is the concluding volume, constitutes the most marked advance ever made in what Frances E. Willard pronounced "the latest and greatest crusade." These books will do effective work in a field too long neglected. Men and women, young and old, everywhere, need the information and inspiration which these books impart. This book to young wives, by Mrs. Drake, is a precious jewel in a splendid setting. For its writing its author received a prize of One Thousand Dollars, but every young woman who reads the book will become the possessor of knowledge more valuable than rubies. These books are for sale in Canada by Wm. Briggs, 33 Richmond St., West, Toronto, Ontario.

NO SOUTH AFRICAN CONTINGENT AS YET

British Government Has Said Nothing of Another Force.

THE STORY OFFICIALLY DENIED

Lord Strathcona Says There Has Been Nothing Official but Speaks of a Willingness to Accept Aid.

Montreal, Nov. 9.—So far there is no truth in the rumor emanating from Ottawa to the effect that the Dominion Government has received an official intimation from Hon. Joseph Chamberlain, Colonial Secretary, stating that the Imperial Government would now be pleased to accept the offer of another Canadian contingent made last spring and which still remains open.

One in a position to know, in an interview, said:

"As far as I know, the Canadian Government has not received any communication from the Imperial Government with regard to the sending of another contingent to South Africa. I do not believe there will be any necessity for such a step, as I do not think that Great Britain really needs any more Canadian troops. I believe the whole thing to be a canard. Great Britain, I do not conceive to be so hard pressed as all that."

LORD STRATHCONA SPEAKS.

Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal, in discussing the matter, said that he certainly did not know of any communication from the Imperial Government to the Dominion Government with respect to the sending of a third contingent. He thought that the attitude of Great Britain on the subject might be better expressed by a willingness to accept aid from Canada rather than there being any absolute necessity for help from this country. There was no doubt but what the mounted Canadian had played a great part in the fighting in South Africa, and to-day was the equal, if not the superior of any soldier in the field. The mounted Canadian was an intelligent agent in the field, and that was why so much had been accomplished by the aid of Canadian troops.

Took Off the Brakes.

An accident, luckily unattended by very serious consequences, occurred at the Lakefield Cement Company's works on Saturday last. Boys removed the brakes from some cars standing on the company's track, the result being that they ran down the grade about 150 yards and collided with the engine. The engineer luckily saw the cars coming and jumped off in time to save himself. The engine however, was considerably damaged, the front of the outside shell of the boiler being smashed, and the couplings likewise.

A Note of Warning

The Times is asked to call attention to the recent amendment to the act respecting master and servant, which makes the practice of "jumping" after receiving railway fare to the shanties, an offence punishable by law. The clause dealing with the practice, which in the past has caused the lumberman much loss and annoyance, is as follows:—"In case any person enters into an agreement under which he receives as an advance of wages, money, food, lodging or railway or steamboat ticket, to enable him to reach any place at which he has engaged to perform labor, work, or other services, if such person thereafter, without the consent of his employer, leaves his employment before the money or cost of such food, lodging or transportation has been paid, he shall on proof thereof before a justice of the peace, be liable on summary conviction, to a penalty not exceeding $25; and in default of payment of such penalty to imprisonment in the common gaol of the county or district for a period not exceeding thirty days as the justice may direct."

Green Goods

A number of citizens have received a printed circular from a person who signs himself "J. W. Ellis, Greenville, New Jersey." All circulars are marked confidential, and the contents refer to the desire of said Ellis to supply an unlimited amount of new crisp, bank notes, which he guarantees to be bank notes, which he guarantees to be as good as those issued by the Dominion Government, at a price that will well repay for the investment. He claims to be an expert engraver of seven years' experience, and, unlike former dealers, is quite willing to show goods before delivery. If the article is not what he represents it to be he does not insist on his would-be victim going into the speculation, but only asks that the matter be kept "mum." Like all former dealers in green goods, Ellis wants to do business only with sharp, shrewd people, men who know a good thing when they see it, and who will operate strictly in confidence.

SULTAN OF THE TURKS YIELDS TO FRENCH

He Gives Way on Every Point of the Dispute To France

THE FRENCH FLEET WILL QUIT MITYLENE

Official Note Issued That as Soon as the Sultan Ratifies the Decision Occupation Will Cease

Paris, Nov. 8.—France has scored a complete triumph in the Turkish dispute. The Foreign Office this morning received advice announcing that the Sultan had yielded to the entire demands formulated by the French Government and only the question of form regarding the execution of the engagements remains to be settled. This may be done within the next twenty-four hours, or at the lastest, in two or three days. Then Admiral Caillard will relinquish his occupation of the Island of Mitylene. An official note was issued at one p.m. to-day to the effect that the Porte had decided to yield to all the demands of France, and that as soon as the Sultan had issued an irade ratifying the decision the French squadron will leave Mitylene.

FOG INTERRUPTS BUSINESS.

Paris, Nov. 8.—On account of the fog it requires no stretch of imagination on the part of Parisians nowadays to mistake the French capital for London. The whole of France is practically in the same position. From all parts of the provinces come news of the fog and its inevitable drawbacks. Railways traffic, suburban and provincial, is very seriously disorganized. No steamboats dare to venture forth on the Seine. The tramways and omnibus lines maintain their service with the utmost difficulty. The ordinary routine of Paris officers and workshops is completely upset, as thousands of business men, clerks and employes are unable to report themselves for duty till long after the appointed hour. The weather expert at the Central Meteorological Bureau, says that the fog is caused by sudden lowering of the moisture laden atmosphere, when the soil is warmer than the layers of air above.

The Lakefield Canoe Co.

Lakefield News: Mr. Hilliard, manager of the Strickland Canoe Co., received notice early this week that seven of the company's canoes had been purchased in England by the Hinterland Consolidated Co., for use in West Africa. This latter company is an organization having for its object the exploration of the gold lands lying in the Sierra Leone region. Lakefield should be proud of an industry which has done so much in the past to advertise it over so large a portion of the world as the Strickland Canoe Co.

Sir Thomas Shaughnessy

Milwaukee, Nov. 9.—Sir Thomas Lady and Miss Shaughnessy are registered at the Pfister House, Milwaukee, where they have gone to pay their respects to Sir Thomas' parents, which it is his custom to do once a year. According to Milwaukee papers, the president of the Canadian Pacific was cordially greeted by his many old friends, "who found him the same as of old, democratic to the core, in spite of his knighthood." Speaking there of the transportation problem, Sir Thomas said that it was not a continuous waterway that the West wants so much as a route which will permit of products being rushed to market in the shortest possible time. This, he believes, will be met by development of French River and Lake Nipissing route.

When asked last night of the feeling in Canada on the situation in South Africa, he said—"The Canadians are very patriotic and are wide awake to the situation. They realise that the result can be no other than the ultimate defeat of the Boers, and are anxious that every effort be made to crush out as soon as possible the guerilla rebellion in the Transvaal."

Sir Thomas will visit Duluth before coming home.

A Heavy Fog

London, Nov. 7.— The heavy fog which shut down upon London and half the country Tuesday, and which was partially dispersed yesterday afternoon, returned during the night, and the southern and eastern coasts were enveloped in a denser mantle than before. The Dutch mail boat Koenigin Regentes collided with the British third-class cruiser Proserpine off Sheerness at midnight, and the mail boat was beached.

East Peterborough Institute Meetings

The regular winter meetings of the East Peterborough Farmers' Institute will be held at the town hall, Keene, on Wednesday, December 4, and at the town hall, Norwood, on Thursday, December 5. The deputation chosen by the Superintendent of Institutes to address these meetings are: Mr. Duncan Anderson, of Rugby, and Miss Blanche Maddock, of Guelph. Supplementary meetings will be held in January at Havelock, Westwood, Warsaw and Douro.

Claims of France and Turkey

London, Nov. 8.—The Vienna correspondent of the Times says those best initiated in the mysteries of the Yildiz Kiosk have for some time represented the Sultan as being in a state of overweening infatuation, which bodes ill for the tranquility of the Near East. The patronage which Abdul Hamid has received from Germany is said to have contributed more than anything to turn his head.

The Times' Paris correspondent says the recognition of the Chaldean Patriarch is one of the new claims of France on Turkey. If compliance with the demands is not soon made, France will advance further claims.

Weather Notes

The depression which was over the lake region yesterday has dispersed, after giving strong breezes and moderate gales and showers. Light snowfalls have occurred again, generally in Manitoba.

You may Snap your Fingers at Dyspepsia

There is a quality in Royal Baking Powder, coming from the purity and wholesomeness of its ingredients, which promotes digestion. Food raised by it will not distress. This peculiarity of Royal has been noted by hygienists and physicians, and they accordingly recommend it in the preparation of food, especially for those of delicate digestion.

PETERBOROUGH, NOVEMBER 9 1901

LOCAL NEWS-LETTERS

LAKEFIELD.

—Everybody in Lakefield reads the Times.

—Mr. J. M. Kilbourn is in New York, buying machinery for the Cement Works.

—It is expected the cement Works will get down to business in a few days.

—Mr. John Craig reports a splendid season's trade. What the popular proprietor of the Craig House has to learn about catering to the tourist trade, would not make much of a volume.

—The Lakefield Portland Cement Co., and J. C. Sherin and Son have recently placed in telephones.

—Organizer Collins has been successful in organizing quite a strong lodge of Chosen Friends in Lakefield. They held their first meeting on Thursday evening.

—Mr. C. A. Campbell, Mr. Abel Hendren and Mr. Thompson, of Maple, started on Tuesday morning to join Mr. A. Kidd's hunting party.

—Mr. William Trude had the misfortune to inflict quite a severe wound on his hand on Tuesday morning which will lay him up for a few days' repair, but we hope he will be soon back on duty.

—Mr. Fred Leavitt, who has been employed on a survey in Cuba, is now home on a visit to his parents.

—Miss [illegible] many friends will be pleased to hear that she is doing nicely under the watchful care of Nurse Ferguson, of the Nicholls Hospital, Peterborough.

—Clementi Lodge, A.F. & A.M., held their regular monthly meeting on Tuesday evening.

—Miss Gertrude Wallace, who has been spending the summer in Buffalo, with her aunt, has returned home.

—Mr. Morrison was successful on Sunday morning in arresting a tramp who had stolen an overcoat from Mr. Tate of Smith. The culprit was tried before Police Magistrate Edmison, of Peterborough, on Monday, and was remanded for a week. Meantime he is getting free board at the county jail.

HAVELOCK.

—The School Board met last week and accepted Mr. Kindred's resignation as principal, and instructed the secretary to advertise for applicants to fill the vacancy. Miss Hutchinson was re-engaged for the next room, and Miss Davidson was promoted from the junior room to the third room now taught by Miss Howson, who leaves at the end of the year to attend the Normal School. Miss McLaughlin, of Norwood, was engaged to teach the junior room.

—Deer hunters gone from Havelock are Messrs. Rev. Carson and W. Webb to Wilberforce, Hall, Smith, Sam Wilson and party to Monmouth, Carey, Cole and party to Cardiff Hill, White and party to Coe Hill, W. Johnston, G. Phillips and party went from Seymour to the Blue Mountains, Geo. Temple and party go from Brighton to Cardiff.

—Mr. Jas. Colquhoun, who has been laid up with typhoid fever, intends to resume work this week.

—The Presbyterian dinner and concert in the town hall on Friday night was well patronized. The receipts amounted to nearly $100.00.

—The School Board has purchased a new bell for the school to replace the old one, which has been out of order for some time.

—Messrs. Thompson & Son shipped a carload of potatoes to Toronto last week.

—Hallowe'en passed very quietly in Havelock, very few pranks being played by the small boys. It has been their custom to upset everything which they could turn over on Hallowe'en night. One of our citizens, expecting a call from them, tied a wire around a small outbuilding near the house and took the wire into the window of his bedroom. Shortly after he retired he felt a tug at the wire, he opened the window and fired off an old shot gun. Well, I guess the boys are running yet.

—Mr. Clark, a student from Trinity College, conducted the services in St. John's church on Sunday.

The local from Toronto arrives here now at 5.05 p.m., instead of 5.30 p.m.

—Mr. J. P. Purdy, of Rosedale, was in town on Saturday.

—Messrs. R. Phillips, T. Gorman and W. Cooper, were in Peterborough on Saturday.

—Mr. T. Curtis, our local furniture dealer, delivered a load of furniture at Cordova on Tuesday and one at Stanwood on Wednesday.

—Mrs. J. W. Bryans has returned from visiting friends in Peterborough.

KEENE

—At a meeting held on Monday evening the Keene Curling Club elected for the coming season the following officers: Pres.—R. J. McCamus; Vice-Pres.—H. English; Sec.-Treas.—T. J. Wallace; Com. of Management—Dr. Shaw, M. Kennealey, W. Campbell; Hon. Members—J. S. Russell, R. McIntyre, H. J. Cruikshanks. Another meeting of members is called for Saturday night. The prospects for the season are good.

—The bookagents have not yet gotten into line. The prospects for the season are not so good as in former years.

—Mrs. Landerville has disposed of her real estate in the village. The Victorian drug store has been sold to Mr. Duncan McFarlane. The lot north to Mrs. Plunkett, and the property west to Mr. Wm. McFarlane.

—Messrs. J. McNeil and A. Shearer spent a week in the woods of Burleigh partridge hunting. They report the shooting good.

—Miss Masterson of Burnley, is visiting Miss M. Quinn.

—Mr. Jas. Henderson has gone north deer hunting.

Bought Yesterday—Cured To-day.—Mrs. O. C. Burt, of 96 Broadway, New York, says: "I am surprised and delighted at the change for the better in my case in one day from the use of Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder. It worked like magic—there's no excuse for a person suffering pain with this remedy within reach. 50 cents. —5

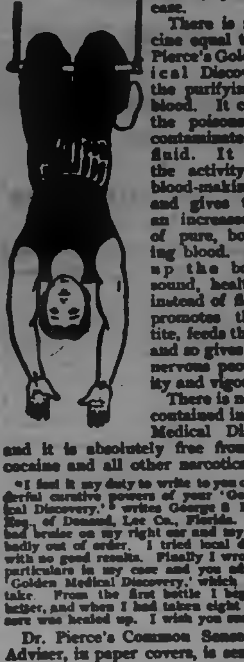
Gymnastics

Will do much to develop a muscular body. But the strength of the body is not to be measured by its muscle, but by its blood. If the blood is impure, the body, in spite of its bulk and brawn, falls an easy prey to disease.



There is no medicine equal to Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for the purifying of the blood. It carries off the poisons which contaminate the life fluid. It increases the activity of the blood-making glands and gives the body an increased supply of pure, body-building blood. It builds up the body with sound, healthy flesh instead of flabby fat, promotes the appetite, feeds the nerves, and so gives to weak, nervous people vitality and vigor.

There is no alcohol contained in "Golden Medical Discovery," and it is absolutely free from opium, cocaine and all other narcotics.

"I feel it my duty to write to you of the wonderful curative powers of your 'Golden Medical Discovery,'" writes George S. Henderson, Esq., of Denaud, Lee Co., Florida. "I had a bad bruise on my right ear and my blood was badly out of order. I tried local doctors, but with no good results. Finally I wrote you the particulars in my case and you advised your 'Golden Medical Discovery,' which I began to take. From the first bottle I began to feel better, and when I had taken eight bottles the sore was healed up. I wish you success."

Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, in paper covers, is sent free on receipt of 31 one-cent stamps to pay expense of customs and mailing only. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

EVERYBODY READS THE TIMES

A Few Pointers That Advertisers Would Do Well to Remember.

Josh Billings: "I lug a rooster for two things—one is the crow that is in him and the other is the spurs that air on him to bak up his craw with."

The Times has become a popular paper, not only amongst the people of the town and Ashburnham, but also amongst the residents of the surrounding towns and villages.

Mr. G. H. Hilliard, of Lakefield, says the Times is regarded in Lakefield as the brightest paper that comes to that burg, and is read by very many in the village.

Wm. O'Brien, the genial clerk of Douro, who has long been a subscriber to the daily edition, says that the Times is the popular paper in that township, 90 per cent. of the people being readers. He hopes that it may long keep up its onward pace.

Mr. Wm. Gallen, Reeve of Burleigh and Anstruther, states that the whole back country reads the Times, and regard the paper as one of the very best. He says that it is always full of good things.

Mr. P. P. Young, Young's Point, says everybody reads the Times in that locality. It is admirably conducted.

Mr. James Stevenson, ex-M.P., says the Times is the brightest and best newspaper published in Peterborough.

Commodore Calcutt says he would sooner miss his breakfast than miss getting the Times. It is a famous appetizer only equalled by Calcutt's celebrated ale.

Mr. J. B. Thornton, Omemee, says the Times is very popular in that village and is widely read.

Rev. Mr. Bastard thinks the Times deserves great credit for its progressive spirit. It is up-to-date, giving all the news up to four o'clock each morning.

Recently Mr. Sage and another of North Smith, brought us in a couple of clubs for the Weekly Times of 30 names. Here are 30 names from one section of Smith, that are constant readers of the Times.

Mr. Harry Garbutt, Reeve of Smith, says that the Times is the popular paper in that locality.

Mr. James Bagtis, Springville, gives similar evidence, and says you can hardly go into a house in his locality that the Times is not present.

Mr. Pearson, the great horse buyer, of Montreal, told the Times the other day that he has better results from the advertisement in the Times than from any other paper. He says he finds the Times is read by almost everybody in the district. He knows this, for almost every horse he buys is the product of the Times advertisement.

Mr. T. Donaldson, Cavan, member of the Counties' Council of Northumberland and Durham, says that the Times is very popular in Cavan.

Mr. James Chambers, Manvers, bears similar testimony in regard to Manvers Township.

Dr. Bingham, the popular city Medical Health Officer, missed his Times the other morning, and came to the office for a copy. He said he was not feeling well, and wondered what was the matter, until he remembered he had not had his Times.

The above are a few of the many evidences we have in our possession of the high regard in which this great family journal is held by the people. Merchants and other advertisers should remember that hundreds upon hundreds of families throughout the town and country cannot be reached by any other way except through the Times.

Lindsay Post.—Mr. Dougall Robertson, of the Scotch Line, Verulam, recently sold eight hogs to Mr. J. Bell, drover of Dunsford, and realized $104.00 on the lot. The animals were moneymakers, being only six months old.

ALONG BROADWAY.

SHORT STORY FOR THE DAY.

He was passing her with the slightest and most formal gesture of greeting when something that flashed into the girl's face at sight of him—a look half defiant, half appealing—made him turn back.

"Alicia!" he cried.

"Jack!" she answered, and not all her will could keep the throb of gladness out of her voice.

The hurrying crowd along Broadway caught them up in its great, restless tide and swirled and beat about them, now pushing them together, now sweeping them the width of the pavement apart, but presently, when they had weathered one of the little human eddies, he turned toward her.

"And so," he said, "you are really going to marry old Grigsby."

"Yes," she replied, looking straight before her.

"I read it in the morning papers," he went on. "They made quite a story of it; 'Romance of a beautiful young artist who captures the heart of a trust magnate.' A union of youth and beauty and millions, and all the rest of it, you know. It made the old days seem very far off, Alicia."

"There—there was never anything between you and me," she said hurriedly. "There couldn't be. We were both too desperately poor. It would have been madness to think of such a thing. We were like foolish children. We played with love."

"And people who play with fire end by burning their fingers," he went on ruefully.

"I am only going to do what I always said I should do," the girl answered doggedly.

"I know—I know," the man returned, "but still I suppose one never believes in the misfortune that he dreads most until it gets him by the throat, and then it is too late to cry out, isn't it? Do you remember that first winter, when you came to town, when you lived in a shabby little studio and cooked your meals over a gas jet and dreamed of fame? You used to think in those days that you would be a great artist some day, Alicia."

"I have found out better now," replied the girl with a mirthless laugh. "I had faith in many things then that I don't believe in now."

"In love?" suggested the man.

"In love," repeated the girl.

"It is a pity," said the man softly. "When a woman ceases to believe in love she has trampled all the roses underfoot and for her the world holds no more beauty and fragrance. She has thrown away that which gave the salt and savor to life and all the rest is dust and ashes on her lips."

The girl turned upon him so fiercely that a passer-by glanced at her curiously. "Why do you say that to me?" she cried. "What does a man know of what poverty means to a woman? You have been rich. You have had the good things of life. You have known what it was to feast and be care-free and happy, but suppose you had been like me—that all your life you had eaten the bitter bread of dependence, that you had seen yourself slighted, trampled upon, thrust aside, always Cinderella sitting in the ashes! Suppose you saw your beauty dimmed by shabby clothes, your wit dulled by the deathly round of daily drudgery—oh," she broke in passionately, "I tell you I have waited in the anteroom of fashionable women, no more regarded than a servant, until finally, when the dull and ugly mistress did come in, I felt like tearing the jewels and laces off her and crying out, 'Give me these and I will show you how a queen of society can look!'

"Is it strange that when money means all this to women we are so often willing to sell our very souls for it? It means everything to us—opportunity, ambition—and revenge!" she ended, catching her breath in something that was almost a sob.

"We used to be very happy in the old days," he said, making no answer to her outbreak, but speaking in a level tone, as if he were telling a story. "There were a lot of artists in the old building, and they used to pose you with your red gold hair against a dusky background and paint away like mad.

"I remember the first time I ever saw you. I had gone up there to get old Johnston to do a sketch for the Sunday paper and you were sitting in a great carved chair in the midst of his bare old studio. Nobody heard me enter and, as I stood, screened in the doorway I felt something tighten in my throat and presently I knew my eyes were wet with tears and I turned and went softly out for I had looked on love and it was holy.

"As you say, we are desperately poor. A table d'hote dinner at Maria's with a bottle of Chianti in its rush flask was a luxury. A cheap seat in the theater was a treat and we saved and planned for a month for a long, happy day in the country, but I wonder, when you are the rich Mrs. Grigsby and I read of you in the paper at Sherry's or your country house or your box at the opera, I wonder if your heart will be as light and your laugh as true. There are some things, Alicia, that even a millionaire cannot buy."

"You have a right to hate me," the girl said humbly.

"I know," he answered again, "but I am only sorry for you."

"You never did the right things, you know," she said with whimsical tenderness.

"True," he replied. "If I had I should have fallen into my uncle's plan for me to be a business man and I should have been able to offer you automobiles and diamonds, like Grigsby. Instead of which I am nothing but a poor devil of an unsuccessful newspaper man with nothing on earth to give the woman I love but all my heart and faith."

Down the street an organ grinder was playing, "Then you'll remember me," and the notes floated softly back mellowed by distance, and when the man spoke again his words took up the burden of the air.

"You will not forget me, Alicia," he said, "when you think of love and youth and all that was best and sweetest in life—then you'll remember me."

The girl flung out her hands to him in a gesture of ineffable love and appeal. "Oh, Jack, Jack!" she cried. "take me back! I only want your love. All the rest is nothing—nothing!"

"It's poverty you are choosing, Alicia," he warned her.

"I don't care if it's with you," she answered.

"Dear little girl," he breathed.

They walked along in silence for a few moments and then the woman said inconsequentially, "Don't you think Broadway the most beautiful street in the world?"

"I think it the road that leads to paradise," he answered lifting his hat reverently.

THE ABYSSINIANS MUTILATE SLAIN

London, Nov. 8.—Captain Cobbold, an English officer, who was sent out to Abyssinia some time ago, says the Abyssinian army has no system of intelligence, and possesses no maps. He adds: "I cannot but speak highly of the Abyssinian troops. I never met with soldiers who can do so much work with so little nourishment. Discipline is maintained almost entirely by the personal attachment of the men to their leaders. The practice of mutilating the slain in battle still exists, especially among the Galla soldiery, to whom it is mainly confined. A soldier who can produce proofs of eleven victims is entitled to wear a silver band round his sword."

In referring to the country, the Captain says: "It is impossible to speak with certainty of the future or of what may be done when the country is thoroughly exploited. At the present it is known that the province of Barri Shengul, which is conterminous with the Egyptian Soudan, is highly auriferous. Menelik obtains much of his wealth from this source. Prospecting is already going on in this area, and various concessions have been obtained from the Emperor, of which British companies seem to have a fair share. This country can be readily developed from the side of the Soudan, as the Blue Nile is navigable to within a short distance of the gold-field, and gold, which now has to be carried on muleback 300 miles to Adis Ababa, and a further 500 miles to the Red Sea coast, will be able to find its way in steamers down the Nile in a few days. It is to the development of commerce with the western province of Abyssinia that Great Britain should turn her attention, owing to the facilities afforded by the fine waters of the Sobat and Blue Nile. It is not only for its mineral wealth that I advocate the extension of commerce in this part of Abyssinia, as hundreds of miles of country in Lekka and Kaffa are covered with the finest coffee, with an easy reach of the Sobat."

In conclusion, Captain Cobbld said: "At present French influence in Abyssinia is extremely active. Politically it is with England that Abyssinia is chiefly concerned, owing to the fact that [illegible] for Erythrea, and the small French colony of Jibutil, Menelik's dominions are surrounded by British territory. Our presence with the army seemed to excite an unaccountary amount of comment and curiosity on the part of the French. Thanks to the efforts of Colonel Harrington, British prestige stands high in Abyssinia, and the Emperor appears most anxious to increase the friendly feeling [illegible].

A Case of Kidney Disease That Could Not Be Cured by Ordinary Drugs and Medicines.

THE DREAD DISEASE WAS BANISHED AFTER USING TWO BOTTLES OF

PAINES CELERY COMPOUND

A Statement Carrying Warning and Encouragement to Every Sufferer.

While the blood is the life of the system, carrying to every part its share of force and energy, it is also the means by which the waste matter, the result of decomposition of the tissues, is removed from the body. If disease has touched the kidneys, there is grave danger, and deadly oppression will settle upon the body and mind.

If you have any of the symptoms of Bright's disease, or diabetes, Paine's Celery Compound is the only medicine on earth that can stay the ravages of the disease and cure permanently. Mr. C. Kevill, of Dunsford, Ont., testifies as follows:

"For the past fifteen years I have been troubled with diseased kidneys. Often while working in a stooping position I would find it difficult to straighten up at once, and could only do so after repeated efforts. While under very severe attacks of my trouble I became very nervous, and continually had tired worn-out feelings. My rest at night seemed to do me no good, as I always felt tired in the morning. I had been taking medicines and was getting worse all the time. At last I decided to give Paine's Celery Compound a trial. I procured a bottle, and took it as directed, and found the effect wonderful. Before I had finished the first bottle I began to improve; after I had used the second bottle I felt as well as ever I did in my life. It banished all my aches and pains and my nervousness disappeared. I can go to bed now and sleep well and rise in the morning rested and refreshed."

Determined to Make a Stand

Paris, Nov. 7.— A despatch from Constantinople via Vienna, states that Turkey will not give satisfaction concerning all the claims made by France. The Sultan does not desire the return of M. Constans, the former French Ambassador in Constantinople, and will decline to guarantee the payment of the Lorando claim within a fixed period.

Another telegram from Constantinople says: "The Porte has sent a note to M. Bapst, Counsellor of the French Legation, enclosing monthly drafts on the customs in payment of the Lorando and Tubini claims, and embodying certain decisions of the Turkish Government regarding the quays difficulty."

BYE-ELECTIONS ARE NEAR AT HAND

Quebec, Nov. 8.—The Soleil gives it to be understood that the elections to fill vacancies at present existing in the Dominion Parliament, will be held almost immediately, and that they would have taken place earlier, but for the Royal visit. Of the thirteen vacancies in the House of Commons, five are in the representation of Ontario five in that of Quebec, and one each in that of Manitoba, New Brunswick, and Nova Scotia. Five of these seats were held by Conservatives and eight by Liberals. The vacancies were caused by the appointments of Judge Desmarais, M.P. for St. James division, Montreal, to the Bench, of Mr. Joseph Godbout, M. P. for Beauce, to the Senate, of Mr. A. M. Dechene, M.P. for L'Islet to the Senate, of Sir Louis Davies, M. P. for West Queens, P.E.I., to the Supreme Court Bench, of Mr. T. Fortin, M.P. for Laval, to the Bench; and of Mr. B. M. Britton, MP. for Kingston, to the Bench; and by the deaths of Hon. Clarke Wallace, M.P. for West York, Ont., and of Mr. J. W. Bell, M.P. for Addington, the voiding of the elections of Mr. A. Gibson, jr., M. P., for York, N. B., of Mr. C. J. Thornton, M. P. for West Durham, and of Mr. R.L. Richardson, M.P. for Lisgar. The seat for West Hastings has been vacated by the resignation of Mr. Harry Corby, and Mr. Prefontaine, M. P. has yet to vacate the seat for Terrebonne or for Maisonneuve, both of which he at present represents.

There are also three vacancies in the Senate for the Government to fill, and as the late occupants of them were all Conservatives, the naming of their successors promises to about equalize the standing of the two political parties in the Senate. The existing vacancies were caused by the deaths of Senators Almon, of Halifax, Villeneuve, of Montreal; and Allan of Toronto.

CITY OF PANAMA IN REBEL HANDS

New York, Nov. 8.— The Herald prints the following: From a source of information on the situation in Colombia which thus far has furnished no news not subsequently verified by wire, has been received the copy of a cablegram saying that the city of Panama has fallen and is in complete control of the Liberal party.

It is believed by the New York representative of the Liberals that Gen. Alban, the governor of the Panama department, is a prisoner, unless he has escaped by sea.

At the headquarters of the Liberal party in this city all were jubilant at the news of the fall of Panama. Dr. Restrepo, who is the head of the Junta here, said:

"All foreign interests will be protected. The isthmus will be kept open and the Panama Railroad guarded from guerilla attack if necessary. Everywhere where its Government is established the rights of foreigners will be secure."

A Good Advertisement

The trouble over No. 5 dam may not be a bad thing for the town afterall, as it has advertised the fact that Peterborough possess an unlimited supply of cheap power. Dr. Carmichael told The Times yesterday that Mr. Stratton deserves the thanks of the citizens on this account. All of which goes to prove the truth of the old saying: "It's an ill wind that blows nobody good."

MORE MOUNTED INFANTRY

Strong Appeal by Lieutenant Morrison, of the Second Contingent

He Thinks That Two Battalions of 500 Each, Made up of Cow Boys, Besides Mounted Artillery and Two Sections of Pom Poms should be sent

Ottawa, Nov. 8.—A strong feeling is being developed throughout the country that Canada should at once forward another contingent to South Africa. This sentiment is not confined to one section of the country, but is general. The government will do well to act in time, in order not to appear at the disadvantages of having been forced to move. Lieut. Morrison, who has had experience in South Africa, states in the Citizen that a third contingent is necessary. All over Canada, there is at present a similar [illegible] apparent in regard to the position in which this country finds itself, as contrasted with the other big colonies in reference to the South African war. This feeling of dissatisfaction is finding vent in tentative discussion in the press not unlike that which preceded the despatch of the first contingent of Canadian troops to the seat of war. Nor is it confined to opposition newspapers, or merely partisan criticism of the government. It is rather the expression of the large proportion of the people of Canada of a conviction that after all Canada is not going to show up well in comparison with the sister colonies when the finished story of the war is written. Canada sent a relatively small body of troops to the war. They fought well and came home when their term of enlistment expired. But months have rolled on, the fighting continues, the Australians, New Zealanders, Tasmanians and Afrikanders are still in the field, but the Canadians are comfortably at home resting on their laurels. That is the feeling and there is no use disguising it. And the feeling is the stronger because it is felt that Canadian mounted troops are just the sort of men that the empire are most in need of.

There is nothing to be gained by casting about to discover who is to blame for the fact. We are told that an offer of more troops was filed with the British war office many months ago by the Dominion government and has never been withdrawn. But the length and persistence of the war have caused the conditions to change since that time.

If Canada should offer another contingent it would be more satisfactory to the troops that go if the government volunteered a definite force for a definite object. A well-equipped, well-horsed regiment of dragoons (alias mounted infantry) largely composed of men who have seen service or mounted police and cowboys from the Northwest would be a very useful reinforcement for the British army. A regiment consisting of two battalions each 500 strong accompanied by two sections of horse artillery (not field artillery) and, if they can be secured, two sections of pom-poms, would constitute a complete mobile unit which would do inestimable service in hunting Boer commandoes. It is not quantity but quality Great Britain wants in troops out there. What is wanted are specialists in the work, men who can meet the Boers on equal terms. Ten or eleven hundred troops may sound a small number for Canada to volunteer, but let them be picked men—men who have had experience out there or whose experiences on the plains of the Northwest fits them for immediate and effective service. Give double pay, if necessary, to get the right men. Better send 1,100 of the sort of men who are urgently needed than 11,000 men who need to be made over. Send the force under a capable leader, a most important consideration, as a specially qualified unit for a definite purpose—the hunting down of commandoes. Let the war office know that purpose, furnish a force qualified for the work, and Canadians may be satisfied that the work will be done. But let there be some understanding that the force will work as a unit—the Canadian guns and the Canadian cavalry always together. This latter is of importance because a dozen returned men will enlist under such an arrangement and with a re-constituted unit where one would do so under the chance of being split up and mixed with British troops. The long range London criticism about guns impeding mobile columns is largely rot. Field guns may do so because field guns need, or should have, infantry for support, but Canadian cavalry and Canadian horse artillery can work together any and everywhere and need no infantry. We have the horse artillery guns here taking the same ammunition as the British Royal Horse, so there would be no difficulty about that. A thousand Canadian cavalry, each of the two battalions having with it a section (two guns) of Canadian horse artillery and a section of pom-poms, ought to and could go anywhere and take care of itself in South Africa, whether it was needed to operate alone chasing commandoes, or forming the advance or rear guards of larger forces. If kept together and used as a unit such a force will achieve results satisfactory to the government and the Canadian people.

London, Nov. 7.—A Unionist journal strongly urges the war office to accept at once the offer of a Canadian regiment of rough riders for service in South Africa. The same journal points out that the Canadian troops were among the best under the command of Lord Roberts in the earlier part of the war.

It is stated that the Government intends to accept Canada's offer.

THE NEWS AT OTTAWA.

Ottawa, Nov. 7.—The despatch from London to the effect that a Canadian cavalry contingent would be acceptable to the home authorities arrived too late last night to obtain official confirmation.

It is well known that the officials of the department of militia and mounted police have been quietly getting ready to send, if necessary, 500 rough riders in one month and another 500 a month later.

THEIR SOURCE OF STRENGTH.

London, Nov. 7.—During a recent interview with a representative of the Daily News, a former member of Kruger's cabinet said that "the Boer inspiration to continue fighting came not from the wordy harangues of pro-Boers in England, but from love of country, home, nationality and freedom, and the hate of those who would crush out our national life—these are the well-springs of our spirit of uncompromising resistance.

"The British have stripped us of everything except our Mausers and our patriotism," he continued, "and our sole business now is war."

"The British hope to destroy us by a process of attrition; they will find it a slow, costly and futile process. The further the attrition proceeds the more difficult it becomes, for the destructive forces of war take the weaker elements and leave the stronger, that are well able to manage the problems of food and ammunition, and can occupy the attention of the British army indefinitely. We do not strike the enemy often, but we strike it hard enough when we strike at all fully to vindicate our military locus standi."

THE REFUGEE CAMPS.

London, Nov. 7.—Mr. Brodrick says that certain recommendations made by the ladies who went out to investigate the refugee camps will be adopted. While everything possible is being done for the refugees, he states, no government can secure the inhabitants of a country from privation when a small number of desperate men are sparing no means to render it uninhabitable.

CHARACTERISTIC BOER VIEWS.

London, Nov. 7.—A member of a Johannesburg financial house has just had a remarkable chat with Mr. Kruger about South African prospects. The ex-President's talk was all arbitration, which he declared to be the only satisfactory way of ending the war. Asked what he would do if arbitration went against the Boers, he replied that such a thing was impossible, it could not happen, but, assuming for a moment that it might, he added: "We should take up arms if arbitration went against us. We should never submit to the results of the arbitration if the results were unfavorable to us."

London, Nov. 7.—Lord Kitchener cabling supplementary details of the recent fight near Brakenlaagte, Eastern Transvaal, says: "The Boer loss was 44 killed, including Gen. Oppermen, and 100 wounded. The Boers got nothing beyond the guns. The Boer attack was easily repulsed until the arrival of Louis Botha with 500 men.

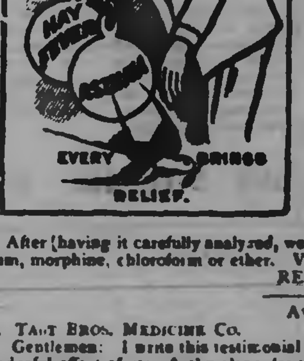
Asthma Cure Free!

Asthmalene Brings Instant Relief and Permanent Cure in All Cases,

Sent ABSOLUTELY FREE on receipt of postal. Write your name and address plainly.



There is nothing like Asthmalene. It brings instant relief, even in the worst cases. It cures when all else fails.

The Rev. C. F. WELLS, of Villa Ridge, Ill., says: "Your trial bottle of Asthmalene received in good condition. I cannot tell you how thankful I feel for the good derived from it. I was a slave, chained with putrid sore throat and Asthma for ten years. I despaired of ever being cured. I saw your advertisement for the cure of this dreadful and tormenting disease, Asthma, and thought you had overspoken yourselves, but resolved to give it a trial. To my astonishment, the trial acted like a charm. Send me a full-size bottle."

REV. DR. MORRIS WECHSLER
Rabbi of the Cong. Bnai Israel.
NEW YORK, Jan. 3, 1901.

DRS. TAFT BROS.' MEDICINE CO.:

Gentlemen: Your Asthmalene is an excellent remedy for Asthma and Hay Fever, and its composition alleviates all troubles which combine with asthma. Its success is astonishing and wonderful.

After having it carefully analyzed, we can state that Asthmalene contains no opium, morphine, chloroform or ether. Very truly yours,

REV. DR. MORRIS WECHSLER.

AVON SPRINGS, N. Y., Feb. 1, 1901.

DR. TAFT BROS. MEDICINE CO.

Gentlemen: I write this testimonial from a sense of duty, having tested the wonderful effect of your Asthmalene, for the cure of Asthma. My wife has been afflicted with spasmodic asthma for the past 12 years. Having exhausted my own skill as well as many others, I chanced to see your sign upon your windows at 130th street, New York. I at once obtained a bottle of Asthmalene. My wife commenced taking it about the 1st of November. I very soon noticed a radical improvement. After using one bottle her asthma has disappeared and she is entirely free from all symptoms. I feel that I can consistently recommend the medicine to all who are afflicted with this distressing disease. Yours respectfully,

O. D. PHELPS, M. D.

DR. TAFT BROS. MEDICINE CO.

Gentlemen: I was troubled with Asthma for 22 years. I have tried numerous remedies but they have all failed. I ran across your advertisement and started with a trial bottle. I found relief at once. I have since purchased your full-size bottle and I am ever grateful. I have a family of four children and for six years was unable to work. I am now in the best of health and am doing business every day. This testimony you can make such use of as you see fit.

Cancer Growing

Two Years

Not long ago, we had the pleasure receiving the following letter:

"When I began your treatment there was a hard lump in my breast, which had been growing for two years, and it was so bad at last that it drew the nipple in. I consulted two doctors, and they both pronounced it cancer, and advised me to have my breast cut off. Your remedy, however, was recommended to me by a friend, and I am very thankful to say that it not only saved my life, but did away with the necessity of having to undergo the painful operation, which I so much dreaded."

We do not publish the names of those who give us testimonials for the gratification of the curious, but any sufferer from cancer or tumor, may have the name and address of the lady who wrote the above, by sending 2 stamps to Stott & Jury, Bowmanville, Ont.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

Local Happenings Picked Up Here and There by The Times.

NOTE.—The Times requests its readers to contribute items of news to its columns. Anything that is phoned or sent in writing to the office, of a nature suitable for publication, will be received and published.—Ed. Times.]

—Stores will be open today as usual.

—No Police Court yesterday.

—The banks will be closed today.

—The Court of Revision met last night.

—The steamers are engaged in hauling wood to town.

—There is single fare on all the railways good till Monday.

—Eighteen teams were employed on the Cereal Works new roadway.

—The new switch has been laid into the Cereal Works.

—Mr. M. H. Leary, who is always to the fore, has added another fine horse to his splendid livery.

—Mr. W. J. Pearson bought another load of fine horses, which were shipped to Montreal last night.

—Havelock is to have a citizens' ball on the evening of Nov. 22nd. A Peterborough orchestra and Mr. Archie Moore, as floor manager, have been engaged.

—The Dickson Company sent up three bus loads of men this week to their limits in the north country. Over one hundred and fifty men have gone back so far this season.

—The tax Collector states that the second instalment of taxes is due on or before the 15th of this month, and that he will be in his office after six o'clock every Saturday evening.

—Today being a legal holiday the banks will be closed, and Mr. W. F. Nelson, agent for the Haight & Freeze Co., announces that bank cheques will be cashed at their agency, Water street, tomorrow.

—The Royal chorus is being photographed at Whitson's. The photo will be a valuable souvenir to remember when the Royal chorus sang before the future King and Queen of England.

—Mr. William McKay, of Hamilton, son of the well known contractor of that city, arrived in town this week to take employment on the Cereal Works building. A number of other Hamilton men are coming to town for the same purpose.

—The second of the "Questionable Characters" series of talks to men at the Y.M.C.A. will be given tomorrow, by Mr. J. C. Sheck, manager of the Dickson Co. The first king of Israel, Saul, will be considered. The George street church quartette will sing. A large attendance of men is expected.

Yesterday morning the horse attached to the delivery waggon of Mr. Wm. Collins, Ashburnham, ran away while left standing at the corner of Dublin and Union street. In turning the corner at Edinburgh street the rig was upturned and was badly wrecked and the groceries completely destroyed. The horse was not injured.

—Port Hope Times: Peterborough has the idea that a good flow of natural gas could be found there if bored for, and the Mayor invited Mr. Fraser, who is boring the wells here, to go there and look over the ground. He examined the excavations for the lift lock and other places and reports favorably, and offers to drill a well for them for $1000.

—"Peat," the Toronto Telegram says, "is being produced in marketable shape at Beaverton, at the rate of thirty tons a day, is being sold in competition with anthracite coal, and is being burned with good results." The Telegram then proceeds to point out that the national wealth would be enormously increased by any development of peat fuel or peat gas as a substitute for the hard and soft coal which the United States exchanges for good Canadian money.

—Orillia Packet: An Orillian lately returned from London, Ont., tells the Packet that an amusing incident occurred on a recent Sunday morning in one of the leading churches of that city. The pastor had just got well started with his sermon, when his false teeth fell from his mouth to the pulpit platform. The floor was well carpeted, and the teeth bounded forward without breaking. The pastor was not in the slightest embarrassed by his misfortune. He stopped speaking, came forward to the spot where the teeth were lying, and turning his back to the congregation he picked up the plate and put it in his mouth again.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Events Under This Head Transpiring in and Around Peterborough.

NOTE.—The Times requests its readers to furnish the paper with items of a personal and social nature either by 'phone or in writing.—Ed. Times.)

—Violet Fitzgerald, Lakefield, is visiting in town.

—Hon. Senator Cox is in town accompanied by a number of the directors of the Quaker Oats Company.

—Mrs. William Tapson of Bowmanville is in town as the guest of her father, Mr. Sherlock, Stewart street.

—Mr. Dale Cahill, of the head branch of Grafton & Co, Dundas, has been transferred to Peterborough.

—Mr. J. H. Gardiner, auctioneer, Port Hope, who was a guest of Mr. J. Crocker Ashburnham, returned home on the noon train yesterday.

—Mr. Fred Lefevre's many friends in town are giving him a hearty welcome back from Cuba. He is the guest of Mr. W. D. Parker.

—Lindsay Post: Mr. J. Sutcliffe, senior member of the firm of J. Sutcliffe & Son, of Lindsay and Peterborough, was in town today, the guest of his son Mr. F. W. Sutcliffe, Bond street.

—Miss Wasson, of Warsaw, who was operated on at Nicholls hospital, a few days ago for appendicitis, is doing nicely and will soon be convalescent.

—Master Wm. King, son of the late Wm. King, Auburn, went up to Toronto Thursday to have an operation performed on his ankles, which have been weak since childhood.

—Messrs. Ed. Brown, R. B. McKee, H. LeBrun and R. B. Rogers have returned from a pleasant tour of Stony lake upon Mr. R. B. Rogers' house boat, which was in tow of Mr. Boyd's steam yacht.

—Lakefield News: The Misses Mellor left on Wednesday afternoon for Peterborough where they intend to pass the coming winter. Their address in Peterborough will be 161 Water street.

—Lakefield News: Miss Mary Strickland returned home on Saturday last from Peterborough, where she has been helping Mrs. Tate settle into her winter quarters at 3 Fleming terrace.

—Lakefield News: We are sorry to learn that Mrs. Tate since her removal to Peterborough, has been somewhat seriously indisposed. Evidently the Peterborough climate does not agree with her. She will find very many friends eager to welcome her back to the salubrious atmosphere of Lakefield.

GOD SAVE THE KING.

God save King Edward VII., who is 60 years old to-day. He was born at Windsor Castle on Nov. 9, 1841; married March 10, 1863, Alexander of Denmark, the present Queen. The latter was born Dec. 1, 1844.

Nervous and Sleepless

Two horrors crowded into one life, the product of poor digestion, and the poisons that are therefore formed within the body. There's just one method of cure for this terrible condition—plenty of food, but mind, food properly digested. That's the difficulty—the digestive power of the stomach must be improved. Rich, red blood formed, strength given to the organs to drive out poisons; then comes strength, vigor and more endurance. Ferrozone does all this and more; it makes sick people well; weak people strong. Use Ferrozone and you reap health. Sold by Ormond & Walsh, Price 50c.

Schools Open

There is an impression abroad that the schools will be closed on Monday. This appears to be erroneous. The Times called up several members of the Board of Education, and was told that school would go on as usual.

A Bad Boy

Yesterday, while the staff in the Times' news rooms were away to dinner, an employee in the press department, named Edwin Legrandre, gained an entrance by climbing up the hoist, and partially destroyed one of the type setting machines for the time being. The injury to the machine has since been repaired, but new parts will have to be purchased. Legrandre was at once discharged. The matter will probably come before the Police Magistrate.

Mr. Kennedy's Enterprise

Mr. H. P. Kennedy has given the citizens another exhibition of his pluck and enterprise, by purchasing the meat business of Gosslin & Ross, in the market building. The rapidly growing trade of Mr. Kennedy made this deal advisable. The customers of Messrs. Gosslin & Ross will be safeguarded by the transfer. The rapid expansion of Mr. Kennedy's business is an evidence that he properly caters to the wants of the public. The selling staff are being gradually increased, Mr. Lorne Giddy, of Port Hope, an experienced butcher, being the latest addition. See Mr. Kennedy's announcement in another column.

BOILERS

Require Strong Workmen to Construct.

A big, hustling boiler-maker down at Niles, O., had an experience with Grape-Nuts Food that is worth knowing. Geo. Preston says there was a time when his appetite for breakfast failed him and it came from stomach trouble caused by his way of eating.

He would get hungry from his work about 9 or 10 o'clock but was not allowed to eat during working hours, and when dinner time came he would overeat and would be in misery the rest of the day and not able to eat any supper.

He says, "I was troubled with headaches and so dizzy from stooping over that I would stagger when straightening up.

Grape-Nuts being called to my attention I took a package to my boarding place and had some for breakfast, and I did not get hungry until near the noon hour. I now know what was the matter with me. I began to eat a good, healthy food and it agreed with me, so I have kept on using Grape-Nuts for breakfast with a little cream.

I have never taken one drop of medicine only once for sore throat, but I am now as well and hearty as any man that walks and I know how to keep my strength by the use of good food, and I think I would loose a part of it if I left off Grape-Nuts. This food has been better to me and my family than any medicine.

I am at Niles, Ohio, and ready to show the truth of what I write. Anyone can call and see me and my family and judge for themselves whether we are healthy or not. I have used 22 packages of Grape-Nuts since I began."

EAST PETERBOROUGH AND MR. BLEZARD

Why an Early Campaign Movement Is Begun.

MR. BLEZARD'S POPULARITY

The Liberals Are Wise in Bringing on the Norwood Meeting.

Mr. Anderson's Canvass Said To Be Suffering—Mr. Blezard's Friends Feel Sore of His Turning Down.

Mr. Blezard, Mr. Anderson, and Hon. J. R. Stratton are advertised to speak upon the same platform at the opening meeting of the campaign in the East Riding. Mr. Stratton was wise in bringing on this meeting, for, although it is rather early, in view of the fact that the elections are not to be held till next June, it is none too early in view of the fact that Mr. Anderson's canvass was suffering. Nothing else of course could have been expected by any reasonable man. Mr. Blezard has hosts of friends and they would be bound to resent his summary turning down. That he himself, beyond regretfully admitting it, does not resent it, is, as we said at the time, just the course he would pursue. He is a man with a manly sense of what is right and wrong, and having no quarrel with his party, had no inclination to visit the sins of a few upon the heads of the many. No amount of smiling sweetness on the part of his pseudo-friends, however, can fully atone for the wrong they have done him. The only way in which to do that would be for Mr. Anderson to retire in his favor, which would be a full apology so far as a full apology can be made, and likewise a graceful and Christian act. In the long run Mr. Blezard is bound to be avenged. Public sentiment resents unfairness, and people have a fellow-feeling for a victim when wrong is being done. In the meantime we congratulate our old and honored friend that his overthrowers have been compelled to render homage to his good name and influence. When at the time of his temporary eclipse, the darkness of night and political oblivion seemed setting in upon him, we spoke up for him as best we could, and if our voice was heard, as we know it was, and heeded too, we feel that we have been well rewarded by the atonement which his associates now render him. Let him beware, however. The wisest man of Troy said that he feared the Greeks even when bringing gifts. Yes, and we would add that they are then to be feared most. We trust that the honest simplicity of the farmer, unmixed with the guile of political centres, will not in the end suffer by a mixing. Mr. Anderson, we are sure, is of the same mind. It is a wise move, even if a little late.

ANNOUNCEMENT TO THE PUBLIC

November 8th, 1901.

This is to notify our many customers that we have this day sold our Meat Business at 3?3 George street (Market Arcade) to Mr. H. P. Kennedy, who will continue business for present at the old stand.

In retiring from business we have to thank our many customers for the patronage which they have accorded us, and to bespeak for the new proprietor a continuance of the same.

We are free to admit that the service given under the new management should be even more satisfactory than in the past, as the facilities afforded Mr. Kennedy in his large Live Stock trade throughout Ontario, are such that enable him to furnish his meat market with a greater variety and a choicer stock of meats than others have the opportunity of doing.

Our customers can rest assured that only the choicest Beef, Lamb, Pork, Fowl of all kinds, and Meats, the variety of which are only to be found in all well equipped meat markets, will be found in the new store, and for the present we will both be in Mr. Kennedy's employ, and will be glad to welcome not only our old customers, but the general public.

All outstanding accounts will be expected to be promptly settled with the undersigned.

MALT BREAKFAST FOOD

Is a Boon to Dyspeptics.

The weak, erratic stomach of the dyspeptic demands nourishment that can be retained and that affords strength. Malt Breakfast Food is the only grain food that perfectly fills the bill, because it agrees with the weakest stomach and is easily assimilated and ready to be taken up by the natural process of absorption.

Malt Breakfast Food gruel is acknowledged to be the most refreshing and appetizing dish for the poor suffering dyspeptic. Its use for a few days will tone and strengthen the stomach and digestive organs, after which the patient may commence with the regular Malt Breakfast Food porridge, which will soon banish all trouble and establish a healthy and natural appetite.

The best physicians instead of prescribing medicines, are strongly advocating the use of Malt Breakfast Food for impaired digestion. If your stomach is weak, try Malt Breakfast Food for a week; results will be so pleasing you will never give it up. Grocers everywhere.

Perfect Cure for Bronchitis

This disease can be treated only by a remedy carried to the affected parts along with the air breathed, for nature intended these organs for the passage of air alone, and sprays, atomizers and internal medicines utterly fail. But Catarrhozone doesn't fail, for it goes wherever the air breathed goes, and its healing antiseptic vapor is sure to reach every affected part. Catarrhozone is inhaled at the mouth and after passing through every air cell of the breathing organs is slowly exhaled through the nostrils. Catarrhozone protects and heals the inflamed surfaces, relieves congestion, allays inflammation, and perfectly cures all bronchial affections. Price $1. Small size 25c. Druggists or Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

"Bought my Life for 35 cents."—This was one man's way of putting it when he had been pronounced incurable from chronic dyspepsia. "It was a living death to me until I tried Dr. Von Stan's Pineapple Tablets. Thanks to them to-day I am well, and I tell my friends I bought my life for 35 cents." 60 in a box.—50

A Few Pointers That Advertisers Would Do Well to Remember.

Josh Billings: "I luv a rooster for two things—one is the crow that is in him and the other is the spurs that air on him to bak up his crow with."

The Times has become a popular paper, not only amongst the people of the town and Ashburnham, but also amongst the residents of the surrounding towns and villages.

Mr. G. B. Hilliard, of Lakefield, says the Times is regarded in Lakefield as the brightest paper that comes to that burg, and is read by very many in the village.

Wm. O'Brien, the genial clerk of Douro, who has long been a subscriber to the daily edition, says that the Times is the popular paper in that township, 95 per cent. of the people being readers. He hopes that it may long keep up its onward pace.

Mr. Wm. Gallery, Reeve of Burleigh and Anstruther, states that the whole back country reads the Times, and regard the paper as one of the very best. He says that it is always full of good things.

Mr. P. P. Young, Young's Point, says everybody reads the Times in that locality. It is admirably conducted.

Mr. James Stevenson, ex-M.P., says the Times is the brightest and best newspaper published in Peterborough.

Commodore Calcutt says he 'would sooner miss his breakfast than miss getting the Times. It is a famous appetizer only equalled by Calcutt's celebrated ale.

Mr. J. B. Thornton, Omemee, says the Times is very popular in that village and is widely read.

Hon. Mr. [illegible] thinks the Times deserves great credit for its progressive spirit. It is up-to-date, giving all the news up to four o'clock each morning. North Smith, brought us in a couple of

Mr. Harry Garbett, Reeve of Smith, says that the Times is the popular paper in that locality.

Mr. James Baptie, Springville, gives similar evidence, and says you can hardly go into a house in his locality that the Times is not present.

Mr. Pearson, the great horse buyer, of Montreal, told the Times the other day that he has better results from the advertisement in the Times than from any other paper. He says he finds the Times is read by almost everybody in the district. He knows this, for almost every horse he buys is the product of the Times advertisement.

Mr. T. Donaldson, Cavan, member of the Counties' Council of Northumberland and Durham, says that the Times is very popular in Cavan.

Mr. James Chambers, Manvers, bears similar testimony in regard to Manvers Township.

Dr. Bingham, the popular city Medical Health Officer, missed his Times the other morning, and came to the office for a copy. He said he was not feeling well, and wondered what was the matter, until he remembered he had not had his Times.

The above are a few of the many evidences we have in our possession of the high regard in which this great family journal is held by the people. Merchants and other advertisers should remember that hundreds upon hundreds of families throughout the town and country cannot be reached by any other way except through the Times.

Lindsay Post.—Mr. Dougall Robertson, of the Scotch Line, Verulam, recently sold eight hogs to Mr. J. Bell, drover of Dunsford, and realized $184.50 on the lot. The animals were monsters, being only six months old.

BOERS GOT HELP FROM THE GERMANS

One of Prisoners Says He Enlisted With Boer Officer in Germany

COMMANDOES ARE SPLITTING

London, Nov. 11.—A despatch from Middleburg, Cape Colony, says that the enemy has gained no success, but has, on the contrary, been driven from pillar to post. Nevertheless, there are still a few who seem to imagine that by some means or other they will win in the end, for during the past week a few young recruits have joined the ranks of the Boers.

Smuts' commando is said to be in a very bad condition. His horses are reported to be very poor, most of the men are dressed in khaki, and food is very scarce. During the week he has been kept constantly on the move, and considering the state of his horses it is surprising that he has not been captured. He has travelled fully 150 miles during the week, and that through a hostile country with columns in pursuit and local troops on the watch, and has had to fight several skirmishes on the way.

Among this commando are several who originally belonged to Kritzinger. Col. Gorringe having captured some of these men in khaki uniforms, tried them by summary court martial and had them shot on the spot. Among the prisoners captured, is a German, who states that he was enlisted in Germany eighteen months ago by a Boer agent, with the promise of a farm in the Transvaal. He described the condition of the commando as being most wretched. They had no rest and very little food for some time. The foreigners are said to be treated badly, and are sorry they did not surrender before the fifteenth, but are now afraid to do so. Other prisoners report that there is great dissatisfaction with Smuts' leadership, and that probably very shortly he will be superseded by a man named Van der Venter. It is now certain that this Smuts is the late Transvaal Attorney-General.

Smuggling Chinamen

Buffalo, N.Y., Nov. 9.—An attempt to smuggle Chinamen into this country from Canada was frustrated by the police at an early hour this morning. While two patrolmen were standing at Niagara street and Hertel avenue they saw a carriage rapidly approaching them, and when the driver saw the patrolmen he whipped up his horse. That excited their suspicions and they ordered the driver to stop. The door of the carriage was opened and in it were four Chinamen huddled as far out of sight as they could get. The driver of the rig who gave his name as Grant Householder, was arrested. It is supposed that the Chinamen were brought across the river from a point near Fort Erie.

Russia and Japan

New York, Nov. 11.—A despatch from London to the Times reports a Tokio despatch to the London Times in which the Times' correspondent says the leading Japanese journals have been earnestly discussing the overtures in Russian newspapers looking towards a Russian alliance with Japan. The proposed basis of the arrangement is that the Tokio Government refrain from all measures impeding Russia. Russia, in return, would pledge herself to leave a free hand to Japan in Korea, but Russia should be allowed to appropriate a convenient naval station in southern Korea.

None of the Japanese journals approve of the idea, the papers objecting that two powers cannot divide supremacy in the far east. They also interpret the proposal as pointing to the permanent absorption of Manchuria by Russia.

THE CHINESE INDEMNITY

An American Banker Needed in Shanghai to Collect $25,000,000.

Washington, Nov. 11.—W. W. Rockhill, Special Commissioner of the United States to China, had a conference with Assistant Secretary Taylor of the Treasury to-day in regard to the arrangements for looking after the collection of the indemnity of $25,000,000 due the United States from China. It was agreed by the Powers, under the terms of the protocol, that each Power should appoint a banker in Shanghai to attend to the collection and disbursement of the indemnity, the bankers to compose a special committee. There is no American bank in Shanghai, and Minister Conger recommended recently that the British member of the committee be appointed to represent the United States. Mr. Rockhill and the Treasury officials would be glad however, if the business could be placed in the hands of an American. It is suggested, therefore, that if a responsible American citizen should start a banking house in Shanghai, he would probably be able to secure appointment to care for this Government's share in the indemnity and receive a commission thereon. He would of course be required to give a bond for the honest performance of his duties.

THE BRITISH ARMY.

Penalty of Lowering the Military Spirit—Golf Before Duty

London, Nov. 11.—The following is taken from "The Diary of Col. de Villebois Mareuil," who was killed while in the Boer service: "People will never understand this war, its duration, and the extraordinary success of this people, the Boers, if the English Army is described as a European Army. It is an army without energy or ideas, or morale—I refer to the rank and file, an army which remains stuck still opposite the Boers because it has neither sufficient worth to do anything nor enough endurance to abandon its comforts for a matter of thirty days.

"It is a fine thing to demilitarise a nation by degrading the military calling to the lowest degree. But since empire in this world is kept by force, let those who abdicate the one cease to pretend to the other. Stuff is no longer sufficient, and one might take long odds, if the experiment was carried out to the end, that a weak place would be discovered in that famous British Navy; for when the military spirit has descended to such a degree of decadence in a nation it would be astonishing if the isolated life aboard preserved the British sailor's mind from all contact with the British mind."

The St. James' Gazette says: I venture to send you the following extract from a letter received from my brother this week. I may say my brother is in Kimberley, and was one of the gallant band of the Town Defence who helped to keep the enemy at bay during the months of the siege. Referring to the prolongation of the war he says:

The fact of the case is that most of our officers are fonder of golf and cricket than duty. Only last week two Boers went to one of our outposts near here, right between two blockhouses, and left their worn-out horses and took our fresh ones without any of our pickets knowing about it. And again, some officers were playing golf, when they were told the enemy was around. They finished their game, and then gave orders to fall in; but meanwhile, brother Boer had exchanged their horses and all got away, our men not being able to follow on the horses. That is the kind of thing that is keeping the war on.

Sees Menace to China

London, Nov. 11.—"A secret despatch passed through this city to-day," says the Shanghai correspondent of the Standard, "reputed to be from the Chinese minister in St. Petersburg, warning the empress dowager that Russia is determined to retain possession of Manchuria and that if the Manchurian convention is denounced other terms will be exacted which will gravely menace China's independence."

Boer Sympathies

London, Nov. 9.—The appointment of Rev. Charles Gore, Canon of Westminster, to be Bishop of Worcester, has raised both a political and ecclesiastic storm. Only a few days previous to the announcement of his appointment Mr. Gore came out in The Times with a strong letter condemning the concentration camps and other severe measures in South Africa. Several of the Government organs immediately stigmatized him as a pro-Boer, and deplored the fact that such a talented author should have been so hopelessly misled. Their astonishment over Lord Salisbury's almost immediately afterward elevating Mr. Gore to the Bishop's Bench was so great that it took away their breaths and so far appears to have stifled adverse press comment, though the matter continues to be the subject of keen private criticism among lay and clerical supporters of the Government. The evangelical party in the Church also bitterly upbraids Lord Salisbury for selecting a man so prominent in high church circles.

In less prejudiced quarters the affair is taken as once more exemplifying Lord Salisbury's extraordinary cynicism and utter lack of interest in current events, though others see in it another instance of nepotism, as the former head of Pusy House, Oxford, and editor of Lux Mundi, is a connection of the Premier's family.

A NEW DEAL

The Quaker Oats Co. After the Light and Power Co.

The Peterborough Hydraulic Power Co., which is practically the Quaker Oats Company, it is said have secured a large block of the stock of the Peterborough Light & Power Company, and are likely to get a controlling interest. They propose to put additional capital into the Company, and develop all the water power that belongs to them on the river.

It is also said that the Company propose to go on with their new dam without delay.

The company is calling for plans and estimates for the equipment of the old power house on the Ashburnham side of the river in preparation for active operations. There are at present five wheels in the building and it will be comparatively little trouble to add equipment whereby some six hundred horse-power can be developed. This will be a temporary arrangement to answer the immediate purposes of the company.

FROM THE HUNTERS

They are Filling the Woods with Lead—No Good Results

One of Mr. Dickson Jewett's pigeons arrived yesterday from the Snowden party at Gold Lake, and brought the following message:

"All well; Georgeroger still killing deer—got five to date. Tooley is filling the woods with lead, but no results. Buttermilk getting low. Send this to the Times. THE CHIEF."

Mr. John Montgomery returned from Parry Harbor, where he left a party of seven. They killed five deer in three days. Mr. Gus Sawers remained with the party.

A letter from the Fitzgerald-Hamilton-Larocque hunting party, states that five deer had been shot up to Wednesday. Since Wednesday it has been learned that two other bears had been gathered in. The letter states that the party is having a whale of a time, and [illegible] to linger in their vicinity.

Messrs. J. Brighthouse and Wm. Dailer, who have their camp at Gull Lake, have got two deer. Rev. Mr. McKnight joined the hunters last week.

HIS MAJESTY'S BIRTHDAY

How It Was Observed in Peterborough—The Stores Open as Usual

The birthday of His Majesty the King was not generally observed in Peterborough. The banks and government offices were closed, but the stores were all open. The market was not large, and the business done was, we understand, below the average. Many flags were displayed on the stores and public buildings, but this was practically all that went to mark the occasion. Amongst the decorations that of Messrs. J. J. Turner & Sons was the most elaborate. This enterprising firm erected a banner over the street, bearing the words "Long Live King Edward VII."

The Peterborough section of the 14th Field Battery, under the command of Lieut. Bradburn and Lieut. Ackerman, made things lively at 12 o'clock. The boys turned out with two guns, and took up their positions in front of the Court House. Here they fired a Royal salute of 21 guns.

ENGLAND AND THE MITYLENE AFFAIR

Its Importance is Being Minimized by the Press

MINISTERS IN CONFERENCE

Has Britain an Understanding with Germany?

The Occasion May Yet be the Case of a Great and Terrible War—It is Said That This Cannot Long be Averted

New York, Nov. 9.—The London correspondent of the Tribune cables:

A second meeting of the Cabinet, adjourned from the previous day, is the only sign of excitement in England over the French naval demonstration at Mitylene. Press comments are cautious and temperate, and leader writers are content with the expression of a hope that the Sultan will make timely concessions to the French Government, and enable the fleet to withdraw after protecting unimportant national interests. These bland reflections are filled out with pretty references to Sappho and to Antony's dalliance with Cleopatra.

There is an evident intention on the part of the English press to minimise the Mitylene affair as much as possible, and to class it with the recent efforts of the United States and of Austria-Hungary to obtain a settlement of private claims. If the Ministers take the same view, it is remarkable that they have been in session two successive days; although it is barely possible that they are holding prolonged consultations over the legislative programme and are paying little attention to Admiral Caillard's cruise with 2,000 troops. There may however, be more serious complications. There is no probability that the British Government considers itself liable under Lord Beaconsfield's Cyprus convention, to defend the Ottoman Empire against a French seizure of the revenues at Mitylene. It is, however, an open question, whether the Foreign Office may not be embarrassed by some secret arrangement with Germany respecting the near East. The German Emperor has been steadily developing the commercial interests of his Empire in Asia Minor, and strengthening his own influence at the Sultan's capital. It has been suspected for a long time by students of current diplomacy, that Germany's neutrality in South Africa was the result of a secret understanding with Great Britain respecting the near East. If these suspicions are well founded, the activity of despatch bearers flying between Lord Lansdowne's and Lord Salisbury's houses is a natural bit of by-play and the prolonged Cabinet conference is not an affair of minor importance like the flutter of Lesbian swallows.

EQUALITY FOR FRENCHMEN.

Paris, Nov. 9.—It is learned from a good source that one of the demands made on the Sultan by N. Bapst, the councellor of the French Embassy at Constantinople is that Frenchmen shall be placed on an equality with Englishmen before the Ottoman courts.

REINFORCEMENTS READY.

Paris, Nov. 9.—A Toulon despatch to the Matin says that the French Mediterranean squadron, which is at that port, is ready to start at the shortest notice.

STILL AT MITYLENE.

Paris, Nov. 9.—A despatch from Admiral Caillard, received here last night, but dated yesterday morning, announces that his squadron is still lying before the Island of Mitylene. No landing has yet been effected. A heavy sea is running.

RUSSIAN OPINION.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 9.—The newspapers here anticipate that, following the lead of France, other powers will discover claims against Turkey. The Russian newspapers generally welcome the French naval demonstration in Turkish waters as a setback to what the Rossiya terms "German pretensions in Turkey."

MITYLENE'S IMPORTANCE.

London, Nov. 9.—Smyrna, with its gulf, and the Island of Mitylene, now the scene of the activities of the French fleet in the Aegean Sea, is the most important town in Asia Minor, and the chief commercial centre of the Levant. For this reason it has always figured in schemes of Christian Governments to make the Turk "pay up." The export trade of Smyrna is quite large. It ships cotton, figs, raisins, opium, carpets, and other commodities which find their way into all parts of the world. The town itself consists of a Turkish and Frank quarter, and is the terminus of two railway lines. In ancient times Smyrna was an Aeolian settlement, and was afterward colonized from the City of Colophon, in Ionia, and became a member of the Ionian League. It was claimed as the birthplace of Homer. Destroyed in war and rebuilt by Lysimachus, it grew to be one of the chief cities of Asia. It was one of the seven cities mentioned by John in Revelations. In 178 A. D. it was leveled by an earthquake, and was restored by Marcus Aurelius. Since 1424 it has been under the rule of the Turk. The population consists of Turks, Armenians, Franks and Greeks and numbers about 200,000. Mitylene lies in the Aegean Sea, west of Asia Minor, and not far from Smyrna. Its chief city is Mitylene. This island is not important in itself but from their station here the French can easily proceed to Smyrna and seize that place in case the French Government desires to do so. The island is only forty-three miles long. Its nearest coast is about fifty miles from the city of Smyrna and the mouth of the Smyrna Gulf is directly south of it.

STIMULATED HIS WIT

How Constable Cochrane Secured an Irishman's Answer

High County Constable Cochrane was saying the other day that he had hardly ever seen an Irishman who wasn't ready with a quick retort, no matter what the circumstances might be.

"It was about three years ago that I arrested a certain fellow. He was about the drunkest man I ever saw to be still standing upon his feet. As soon as got hold of him he wanted to make trouble. He was just like many others from the "ould sod," when they get full of bad "booze" and they think there is a chance for a scrap. He made a pass at me, but I reached over and tapped him once on the head with my stick. He became quiet right away, and he looked up at me and said:

"And what time is it?"

"Of course I couldn't help but answer, 'Just struck one.'"

"'Well, if that's so,' he answered. 'Oi'm dum glad yez didn't hit me an hour sooner.'"

TURKEY SEETHING WITH DISORDER

Annual Butcheries are in Full Swing in Armenia

THE SULTAN IS IN A FURY

New York, Nov. 9.—The Sultan's yielding to the French demands brings out the full gravities of the possibilities of the effect of the French seizure of Mitylene upon the crumbling edifice of Turkish despotism, says the Constantinople correspondent of The World. The whole of European Turkey is seething with disorder. In Armenia the annual butcheries have been in full swing for the past 3 months, and in the remainder of the Empire there is the perennial violence, corruption, waste and lawlessness. From the army down to the magistracy every part of the machine of Government is in a hopeless condition. In the opinion of the diplomatic body at Constantinople, any attempt to patch things up will be merely futile efforts. The news of the French intervention was suppressed at Constantinople for three days, but the Sultan's Cabinet, being in constant session, showed that a serious crisis had arisen. The Sultan has been in a condition of epileptic fury and his Ministers, who live in perpetual terror of their lives at his hands, were helpless and afraid to do or suggest anything. It is believed in Constantinople that Russia is behind France in this business and it is felt that the present trouble is inevitably destined to lead to developments in the Eastern question in which England will be powerless to make her influence felt.

FIGHT TILL NO BOERS ARE LEFT.

LONDON, Nov. 11

The situation in South Africa continues to be most deplorable, but it should be accepted philosophically by the British Government and the British people, and made the best of. Criminations and recriminations are useless at this moment. Undoubtedly the English Cabinet are responsible for blunders —some very stupid ones—in connection with the war; but what is to be gained by English newspapers and magazines continually harping and enlarging upon this fact? The war has to be fought out to the bitter end. The Boers have willed it so; they will accept no terms that involve the loss of their sovereignty and as this cannot possibly be restored to them, unless Great Britain is prepared to withdraw entirely from that part of the continent, the only alternative is to keep up the fight until complete victory is achieved. This may take another year or more yet, and it will certainly entail the expenditure of further large sums of money and unhappily the loss of many more valuable lives. But nevertheless the issue must be faced and the sacrifice accepted with that coolness and intrepidity which is becoming to a great nation. Situated as the enemy is, the worrying out process is necessarily a slow one, but it must come to an end some time, and when it does there will not apparently be many Boers left to stir up trouble in the future.

UNCLE SAM'S BIG KICK

OPPOSITION TO HIS PET MONROE DOCTRINE THE CAUSE

Hon. David Mills, Canada's Minister of Justice, Comes in for Attention in the Affair.

"It is singular that just as Great Britain, through Lord Pauncefote, is about to waive for all time any protest against our complete control of the Nicaraguan canal we should hear from the north a piping protest against an extended interpretation of the Monroe doctrine.

"A Canadian statesman, David Mills, has written a magazine article in which he declares the Monroe doctrine to be a great menace to the sovereignty of every European state. He points out that under the Monroe doctrine, while the United States may concede the power of European countries to hold existing possessions in North and South America, one European state cannot transfer its American possessions to another European state, and hence may ultimately be compelled to abandon such possessions entirely.

"Coming to particulars, Mr. Mills points out that Canada has a Pacific as well as Atlantic seaboard, and he claims that proportionately to population the dominion's external commerce is more extensive than that of the United States. He demands on Canada's behalf the right to use on terms of equality a canal across the Isthmus of Panama.

"Ther are a characteristic bumptiousness about the claims of this Canadian publicist. He tacitly admits that an isthmian canal will only be built, if at all, with the aid of United States capital. The claim that Canada should have, in common with all other nations, the freest ingress and egress after the canal has been built has never been disputed. The crucial question, as Mr. Mills well knows but deliberately dodges, is as to whether the United States shall or shall not control the canal they are about to build. England, which he distinctly more at stake than her dependency the dominion of Canada, is about to admit this right. Lord Pauncefote is now at Washington with the draft of a treaty which concedes every material point insisted upon by the advocates of the Monroe doctrine.

Under these circumstances Mr. Mills and other Canadian statesmen of his type might as well prefer to keep peace with the march of events. The shortening of time between the Atlantic and Pacific coasts will be of immense benefit to the commerce of the world, Canada's included.

NO WAR IS IN SIGHT

ENGLAND WILL HAVE NO TROUBLE WITH RUSSIA

Perfect Tranquility Prevails in Afghanistan and no War in Sight—The Buffer State

London, Nov. 8.—Telegraphic advices from Simla to various points in Europe show that tranquility continues to reign throughout Afghanistan, while recent disturbing Russian advices upon the same subject, reproduced in these columns last week, have been much modified by semi-official utterances of the Russian Foreign Office. It is now declared in St. Petersburg that neither England or Russia has exercised much influence lately in Kabul and that during recent years the Indian Government had paid no subsidy to the Ameer. With regard to Ishak Kahn, the late Ameer's brother, residing in Samark, and there is believed to be no danger likely to arise from that quarter, for it is said that Ishak is quite reconciled to his present position, for he has no money and his followers are gradually dwindling, while there is a sufficient Russian garrison at the place to put down any possible uprising.

The Russian semi-official press also explains the projected visit of the Russian Minister of the War to the Afghan frontier, intelligence of which was recently published by a Paris paper, on receipt of advices from its correspondent in St. Petersburg. The journey of General Kuropotkin, it is declared was arranged for long before the death of the Ameer, and is simply one of inspection. He will visit Merv and Ashabad, and probably Kushk, where an important military post was recently established. It is also declared that no troops have recently been sent from the Caucasus to Central Asia.

In opposition to a free acceptance of these Russian views is the fact testified to last summer, when rumors of the Ameer's serious illness were rife, that considerable bodies of Russian troops have recently been sent into Turkestan, down the Volga to Astrakhan, and from Petrovsk, on the northeastern Caspian coast. According to trustworthy reports received at the end of September there were then 75,000 troops in Turkestan and on the Afghan and Persian frontiers and that more than half of that number had been gradually arriving during the month at Tashkent, Samarkand, and at various military posts in Ferghana. Still, several foreign correspondents in St. Petersburg have assured their papers that they learn "on the highest authority" that at the present moment Russia has not more than 8,000 men and less than 50 guns within striking distance of the Afghan frontier.

Attacks Insurgents Force

Manila, Nov. 9.—Advices from Catbalogan, capital of Samar Island, report that Major Waller attacked a force of insurgents occupying a strong position at Sojton, two 3-inch guns being used to shell the rebel stronghold. Throughout the first day the insurgents held the place, but yesterday Major Waller renewed the attack, and after a desperate engagement carried the position. Two marines of the attacking force, and twenty-six insurgents were killed. Major Waller destroyed the quartels and seventy houses.

General Smith has issued orders forbidding the purchase of hemp in the island of Leyte, except in small quantities for food, which purchase must be under the supervision of the military authorities. All the ports in Leyte are closed, and traffic is forbidden where it cannot be supervised by the military.

COURT OF REVISION

Changes Made in the Assessment and Roll Confirmed

D. W. Dumble, over assessment, south Smith, west George, part 19. Assessment reduced from $300 to $200.

Wm. Might, on behalf of Wm. Blackstock, over assessed of lots in plan 88. Appeal dismissed.

W. F. Hilliard, over assessment of real property of Hilliard estate. Assessment reduced $3,850.

S. J. Anglesey, against statute labor. Appeal allowed.

C. H. Clementi, over assessment, lots 1 and 2, plan 92. Appeal dismissed.

H. Phelan, over assessment of north Charlotte, west George, part 14, and for income. Assessment of real property increased from $1,900 to $2,100, and income struck off.

John Kelly, over assessment. Appeal dismissed.

The assessment roll as revised was then, on motion, passed and confirmed, and the Court adjourned.

The Court of Revision met with Ald. Corkery chairman, Kidgouse, Shortly and Batten present. The appeals which had not been disposed of at the last meeting were dealt with. All the appeals are, therefore, disposed of for this year. The following were the appeals taken up last night:

W. J. English, against assessment for statute labor. Appeal allowed.

T. B. Roddy, for the C.P.R., appealed against wrong assessment for their offices, corner George street and Charlotte street. Appeal dismissed and assessment confirmed.

Frost & Wood Co., wrongly assessed. Appeal dismissed.

D. W. Dumble, appeal over assessment, north Simcoe, east Water, part 1. Part assessed to Geo. K. Martin as tenant reduced from $600 to $300; part assessed to R. B. Stone as tenant reduced from $300 to $200, and part assessed to Mrs. Metge as tenant reduced from $400 to $300.

BRITAIN'S SEA POWER

The Largest Cruiser in the World Just Launched

London, Nov. 11.—The largest cruiser in the world, the King Alfred, was launched at Barrow-in-Furness last week. This ship belongs to the large armored cruiser class, ordered under the supplemental naval program in 1898, the companion ships being the Drake, the Good Hope and the Leviathan. They are of 14,100 tons displacement and 500 feet long. They have 6-inch broadside armor, will carry two 9.2-inch and twelve 6-inch guns, and with 30,000 horse-power are to give a speed of twenty-three knots for eight hours. The King Alfred will carry a complement of nine hundred men.

Horses and Mules Burned

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 7.—Fire last night completely destroyed the stables and barns of the Excelsior Hauling and Transfer Company. Together with the buildings, sheds and about $12,000 worth of feed in the lofts, 200 head of horses and mules lost their lives in the flames. Colonel Ed. Butler, president of the company, said that $150,000 would be a low estimate of the total loss. He said that the stock was insured for $100 per head and that there was insurance on the contents, possibly covering one-half or two-thirds of their value.

News Items.

La Guaira, Venezuela, Nov. 11.—Senor Herboso, the Minister of Chili at Bogota, with the authorization of his government, has cabled to President Castro offering the good offices of Chili in order to arrange the differences between Venezuela and Colombia. President Castro's reply was as follows:

"I accept your proposition with pleasure on condition that Colombia gives full powers, and do not forget my answer to the Congress at Mexico, stipulating reparation and the payment of damages for invasions and losses, bases which I consider just and reasonable."

Colon, Colombia, Nov. 11.—There is absolutely no truth in the report circulated in the United States that Panama has been captured by the liberals.

Catbalogan, Samar, Nov. 11.—The insurgents are becoming more active in the island of Leyte. Yesterday the town of Mataion was attacked.

At Inopacan the insurgents cut the telegraph line. While a detachment of American troops were repairing it they were fired upon by a band of insurgents. After a brief skirmish the rebels were dispersed.

First Lieutenant Robert T. Crawford, of the First Infantry, a sergeant and five men, while attempting to cross the Bahyon river in Samar, were drowned.

NOTES OF THE WAR FROM THE BOER SIDE

The Boers Will Fight Until They Are All Exterminated.

NO END OF THE WAR IN SIGHT

The Country to Be Settled With British People After the War, Which Will Ensure Peace and Plenty Together With Freedom.

The recent aggressive activity of the Boers show that their remarkable mobility and fighting qualities are again in evidence. That their struggle for independence is universally regarded as hopeless, is conceded. It is unlikely that they will receive any better terms than the British have heretofore offered them; but the Boers fight on, very much as the Americans did in their darkest hour for independence, against enormous odds and, despite British proclamations which threaten with condign punishment all Boer leaders and burghers failing to surrender before September 15 last. Despite the presence of an overwhelming British force, the threat of banishment for leaders in arms, and of the confiscation of the property of other burghers in arms, the Boer commandoes continue to harry the exposed British columns and to break the British lines of communication.

One of the Boer officials is represented as saying that every Boer rebel must be provided with a rifle, "and for every one of them we have to capture a British soldier." When the story of the Boer side of the struggle is faithfully written, we shall have a story of constancy and courage, and of the adaptation of scanty means to the exigencies of warfare. Two years after the beginning of the war the spirit, if not the fact, of revolt was so rampant among the Boers of Cape Colony that it was necessary to bring the entire colony under martial law. The persistence of the spirit after the "subjugation" of the Boers is a serious problem of the future for their British masters.

The only hope of the British to make the conquest of the Boer Republics secure is, according to high British authority, to settle the countries with Englishmen. "When the settlement is effected," says a British writer, "and the inexhaustible resources of South Africa are thrown open for exploitation to the world, there will be no danger of Dutch domination, for the overwhelming majority of the workers will be of Anglo-Saxon origin."

The effacement of the Boer population in South Africa by the infusion of Anglo-Saxon blood will require a very long time, if finally successful. Conditions in the Boer countries must remain indefinitely unsettled and uninviting to peaceful immigration. Great Britain cannot safely relax military control of the Boer countries unless liberal concessions are made to the Boer population.

Great Britain has entered on the third year of the war, with about 200,000 men and 450 guns in South Africa and with 100,000 men in military training at home awaiting a call for their services. Four months' reserves of food for this great army and for 400,000 horses and mules must be maintained. The Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, recently said in a public speech that the organized resistance of the Boers ended a year ago, and that only guerrillas were in the field. Nevertheless, a year after this organized resistance in South Africa ceased, as asserted, it was necessary to keep not less than 200,000 British soldiers and 450 guns in the country. The war has been prolonged far beyond the limit fixed for its duration by any British writer or speaker who undertook to forecast the outcome, and the end is not yet.

The Mail says that there will now be energy put into the war that has been unknown since its commencement. The result will be the rounding up of the remaining Boer forces. The country will be happy, prosperous and peaceful in a couple of years.

KING EDWARD CELEBRATES HIS BIRTHDAY

His Majesty Spends the Day at Sandringham

NO OFFICIAL OBSERVANCE

Only the Customary Salutes and Ringing of Church Bells—Duke of Cornwall Made Prince of Wales.

London, Nov. 9.—The King is spending his birthday at Sandringham with the Queen, the Prince and Princess of Wales, and the rest of the royal family. There has been no official observance of the day, with the exception of the customary salutes at Windsor and at the Naval and Military headquarters, and the ringing of church bells.

KING CONFERS HONORS.

London, Nov. 9.—King Edward has the happy knack of doing the right thing at the right moment, and the announcement that he has conferred the title of Prince of Wales and Earl of Chester on the Duke of Cornwall meets with a chorus of approval. The Duke has richly deserved the honor. It is the reward for the skilful manner in which he accomplished his difficult mission to British dominions beyond seas. When the Duke and Duchess returned from their seven months' tour it was stated in these despatches that many days would not elapse before the heir-apparent was created Prince of Wales, and the only reason why the announcement was not officially published a week ago was because the King wished to make it known on his birthday.

Among the honors bestowed on the occasion of King Edward's birthday are a Baronetcy upon the retiring Lord Mayor of London, Frank Green, and knighthoods for Chief Justice Little of Newfoundland and Gray of Bermuda, G. A. Critchett oculist to the King, and George Hussey, Mayor of Southampton. Sir Francis Plunkett, Minister at Brussels, is made a Knight Grand Cross of the Bath, and Clinton Dawkins, formerly financial member of the council of the Governor-General of India, and now a member of the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., is made a Companion of the Bath. Mr. Dawkins lately served on the commission to recommend changes in the administration of the War Office.

IN THE MEDITERRANEAN

The descent of the French squadron on the island of Mitylene off the coast of Asia Minor about midway between Smyrna and the entrance from the Aegean Sea to the Dardanelles, is of diplomatic importance. The reasons given for the occupation of Mitylene and the seizure of the Custom House stations on the island as security for the payment of the French money claims, and as a material guarantee of the fulfilment of the Sultan's promise regarding the other demands made by the French Government, are more specious than convincing. The true causes of the action are not mentioned.

The reason given why Salonica in Macedonia was not selected as the port from which the indemnity is to be collected may be accepted without discussion. It is different, however, with Beirut in Syria. The probability that there would have been an immediate clash with Great Britain was sufficient to prevent the French squadron heading in that direction or any other point in the neighborhood of Cyprus or Egypt. To avoid undesirable complications a port had to be selected out of the zone of conflicting interests. The French Government was thus limited to the selection of Smyrna, where, although British commercial and railway interests are considerable, France and Germany have quite as important interests.

The customs collections at Smyrna are second only to those of Constantinople, and if the object of the French Government had been merely to obtain payment of its money claims, Smyrna was, next to Salonica, the port naturally indicated. The occupation would have been a short one, and disturbance to trade, if any, would have been confined to a minimum. But a short occupation is apparently just what the French Government does not desire. The other claims cannot be settled offhand; they are complicated, and involve issues that do not appear on the surface. This is the case more particularly with the question of the protection of the religious orders. Although the Porte is the other party to the negotiations, it is really the German Government with which issue is being joined.

Ever since the Russo-Turkish war of 1877 the German Government has in a greater or lesser degree claimed and exercised the right to protect the Catholics of German nationality in the Ottoman Empire. This was in direct conflict with the claims held by France as the eldest daughter of the Church from times past, to act as guardian of the interests of the Holy See and protector of Catholics irrespective of nationality, in the Ottoman dominions.

Notwithstanding all the outward tokens of amity with Germany, the Sultan would probably willingly get quit of the whole French claims at a short notice, now that a portion of his territory is occupied by their troops, if he could do so by the payment of a pecuniary indemnity. In regard to the question of the protection of Catholics, however, he is driven into a corner, for he has the interests and claims of his German patron to consider, as well as his own desire to rid himself and his empire of intruding missionaries and the other foreign influences that are causing him and his shadow of a government never-ending trouble. The settlement of this matter, therefore, is one that may be indefinitely delayed, and it is to provide against that contingency that the French Government decided on the occupation of Mitylene with its splendid sheltered bays and roadsteads, and the valuable lookout port and station of Sigri at its western extremity, and the advantageous position it occupies towards Smyrna and the adjoining Turkish coast should military operations at the rear of the southern defences of the Dardanelles be considered desirable.

The moment chosen by the French Government for its unexpected display of vigor could hardly have been more favorable. The teeth of Great Britain are firmly set in South Africa and French financiers hold some $400,000,000 of British Government and other longer or shorter dated bills and obligations; the financial and industrial situation in Germany is seriously compromised; Austria is in a state of internal religious, racial and political confusion; Italy is daily waiting the opportunity to land in Albania and Tripoli, and the small Balkan States are ready to march their armies into Macedonia and Thrace; while Russia, as no doubt it was arranged at the recent meeting between the Czar and President Loubet, stands by ready to back the demands of France by demonstrations in the Black Sea and on the Turkish Asiatic frontier; and the Sultan, thanks to his Armenian policy and other circumstances, is without a friend in the civilized world. The French action has been carefully prepared, and its successful issue will not only greatly raise the prestige of France throughout the East, but tend to quell the symptoms of disaffection among the Mussulmans that has recently manifested itself in Algeria, and is believed in France to have been stirred up by British and Turkish agents. It will also help to bring other questions in the Near East that have been pending for years closer to a solution.

After Baby Comes.

In the days following the baby's birth there is often a long up-hill struggle to recover strength, and the nurse busies herself in the preparation of jellies and broths for the invalid.

When Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is used as a preparative for motherhood the baby's advent is practically painless, there is abundant strength to nurse and nourish the child, and a rapid recovery from the shock and strain inseparable from maternity.

"I was pleased that Dr. Pierce answered my letter," writes Mrs. C. W. Young, of 21 South Regent Street (Lee Park), Wilkesbarre, Penna. "When I had these mishaps I began to think I would never have children. My back used to almost break and I would get sick at my stomach and have such headaches I did not know what to do; they used to set me nearly crazy, and I used to dread to get up, I felt so bad; then I began taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. When baby was expected I took it all the time I was that way. I felt fine all the time, and I never get those dizzy spells now. I hardly ever have a nervous headache any more. I have a perfect romp of a boy; he is the light of our home. I am now twenty years old and my baby is almost eight months old. I now feel well, and weigh 130 pounds, and the baby 23½ pounds. We feel very grateful for the good your medicine did for us. We are both healthy, thanks to Dr. Pierce's medicine."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets keep the bowels healthy.

EVERYBODY READS THE TIMES

A Few Pointers That Advertisers Would Do Well to Remember.

Josh Billings: "I luv a rooster for two things—one is the crow that is in him and the other is the spurs that air on him to bak up his crow with."

The Times has become a popular paper, not only amongst the people of the town and Ashburnham, but also amongst the residents of the surrounding towns and villages.

Mr. G. B. Hilliard, of Lakefield, says the Times is regarded in Lakefield as the brightest paper that comes to that burg, and is read by very many in the village.

Wm. O'Brien, the genial clerk of Douro, who has long been a subscriber to the daily edition, says that the Times is the popular paper in that township, 90 per cent. of the people being readers. He hopes that it may long keep up its onward pace.

Mr. Wm. Gollem, Reeve of Burleigh and Anstruther, states that the whole back country reads the Times, and regard the paper as one of the very best. He says that it is always full of good things.

Mr. P. P. Young, Young's Point, says everybody reads the Times in that locality. It is admirably conducted.

Mr. James Stevenson, ex-M.P., says the Times is the brightest and best newspaper published in Peterborough.

Commodore Calcutt says he would sooner miss his breakfast than miss getting the Times. It is a famous appetizer only equalled by Calcutt's celebrated ale.

Mr. J. B. Thornton, Omemee, says the Times is very popular in that village and is widely read.

Rev. Mr. [illegible] thinks the Times deserves great credit for its progressive spirit. It is up-to-date, giving all the news up to four o'clock each morning.

North Smith, brought us in a couple of [illegible] Recently Mr. Sage and another of clubs for the Weekly Times of 10 names. Here are 50 names from one section of Smith, that are constant readers of the Times.

Mr. Harry Garbutt, Reeve of Smith, says that the Times is the popular paper in that locality.

Mr. James Bogue, Springville, gives similar evidence, and says you can hardly go into a house in his locality that the Times is not present.

Mr. Pearson, the great horse buyer, of Montreal, told the Times the other day that he had better results from the advertisement in the Times than from any other paper. He says he finds the Times is read by almost everybody in the district. He knows this, for almost every horse he buys is the product of the Times advertisement.

Mr. T. Donaldson, Cavan, member of the Counties' Council of Northumberland and Durham, says that the Times is very popular in Cavan.

Mr. James Chambers, Manvers, bears similar testimony in regard to Manvers Township.

Dr. Bingham, the popular city Medical Health Officer, missed his Times the other morning, and came to the office for a copy. He said he was not feeling well, and wondered what was the matter, until he remembered he had not had his Times.

The above are a few of the many evidences we have in our possession of the high regard in which this great family journal is held by the people. Merchants and other advertisers should remember that hundreds upon hundreds of families throughout the town and country cannot be reached by any other way except through the Times.

A WILD RIDE.

SHORT STORY FOR THE DAY.

It was in Colorado, on one of the wildest and roughest railroads I know of. I was fireman of 67, which was used in the passenger service. She had the largest drivers on the road, and they only measured forty-eight inches in diameter. Matt Irwin was the engineer.

Sixty-seven had just been housed after a run. I was filling the oilcans and Matt was hauling off his overalls when Mr. Fox, the superintendent, climbed into the cab.

After a few commonplace remarks he said abruptly:

"Matt, there's been a big mistake made in the higher offices—but that is not for us to criticise—and there is but one way to rectify it."

Here the superintendent's voice dropped to a whisper. "One hundred and fifty thousand dollars in gold has got to be in B—— before midnight, to connect with the eastern express and you are the man selected to take it through."

"A lone engine might create suspicion, so we'll make up a wild freight. They'll all be empties. Back down to the offices before you couple on, and we'll put the safe under the coal in the tender."

That was all. He jumped off and disappeared.

For some time Matt and I sat staring at each other. Then he slid off his seat and said:

"This won't do! Supper, Harry; supper. We haven't much time to lose. It only lacks a few minutes of 6. Be back before the quarter."

The wind was whistling among the cars, whisking the dust and papers about, while in the south, a big black cloud was coming up, resplendent with chain lightning. Altogether the night promised to be unusually bad.

I was back on time, but Matt was there before me. He had lighted the shaded steam gauge lamp and stood scanning a small piece of pasteboard.

"What do you make of this, Harry?" he asked as I climbed up beside him. "I found it pinned to my cushion."

On it was scrawled with a lead pencil, the words:

Danger! Don't pull the wild freight tonight if you value your lives.

A TRUE FRIEND.

"I make it that someone beside the superintendent and us knows of it," I replied, the cold shivers beginning to chase each other up my spinal column. "There's danger ahead!"

"Aye, there is danger ahead, my boy." And old Matt spoke softer than I had ever heard him before. "If you want to——"

"I'll go where you lead," I replied quickly, knowing what he was going to say.

"Then we'll go through if it takes the wheels out from under! Bring up the wipers!"

And, without waiting for the hostler to take the engine out, Old Matt backed her on to the turntable, where the wipers swung her around, and then we backed down to the offices, where four trusty men soon had the square safe under the coal.

A few minutes later we were coupled on to a half dozen empty freight cars and a caboose.

"We've got a clear track," he said looking across at me, and then he drew up the corners of his mouth, and I looked for a quick run.

Before we reached the outskirts of the town the rain began to come down in a perfect deluge.

Great drops fell, mixed with hail, and in such quantity that the dry drains were soon transformed into raging creeks.

The wind howled and shrieked above the rumble of the train and threatened to lift 67 off the rails. When the telegraph poles began to snap off, Matt's face began to lengthen.

It was all down grade, and all the steam was used to run the air pump. I had only to keep the fire alive.

Eight miles down we ran past a small station where a freight train was side tracked. It had perhaps a dozen cars.

Just before we reached it I saw a man dart in between two of the cars to escape the headlight.

I thought him either a trainman or a tramp, but have since changed my mind.

We were half way down the Haversack grade, with a straight stretch of track and a long curve before us when Matt looked across and said:

"I'm afraid the little pasteboard was only a scare. K——"

There was a flash of light behind the rattle of coal and Bob Duncan, the forward brakeman, stood in the cab. His face was as white as a sheet.

"Shut her down—shut her down, for heaven's sake!" he shouted. "A freight's broke loose and is coming down the grade two miles a minute."

Before you could snap your fingers my face was as pale as Bob's.

Matt Irwin never lost his head and with a coolness that comes to few men in times of danger, he asked, "How do you know?"

"Seen her by a flash of lightning. O'Connor and Billy have jumped."

And then he swung out on the step and disappeared.

"Jump if you want to, Harry," called old Matt. "I'm going to stick to her."

"Keep your eye peeled for her," he cried, and commenced to let 67 out.

"There she is!" I shouted.

And there it was sure enough. It had just come out of a cut. One of the boxes was on fire the flame streaming back half a car length and cutting through the air like a meteor.

"She's four miles behind," said old Matt, and coming four miles to our one. If we can get around the curve there's a show of her jumping."

And then began that terrible ride.

He hooked 67 up to the first notch and then opened the throttle.

With seven cars behind us we shot down the grade of 175 feet to the mile.

Sixty-seven set low in her frame, but every low joint rang her bell for an eighth of a mile. She jumped and swayed and threatened to leave the rails. The wind shrieked around us like a thousand demons and the rain poured against the windows in a perfect stream.

"There's danger ahead and death behind!" shouted the old engineer. "If the rain loosens a boulder and raps it on the track—"

I shuddered. There was a blasted pine that marked the curve. The next second we reached it. For a moment I thought it was all over. Then 67 righted. There was a sharp jerk. We forgot all about fear, and our seven cars cleared the roadbed and went down the bluff with a crash that was heard high above the storm, leaving a clean track for the runaway behind that was coming as swift and sure as death.

If the runaway got around the curve the probabilities were that we would be knocked from the track into the river.

We were very near to the bottom now, where the roadbed followed the river, and the engineers were cautioned not to run over fifteen miles per hour.

But orders were not respected that night. We were making thirty miles per hour when a flash of lightning showed me that dark string of cars coming around the curve. The blazing box was on the opposite side and invisible.

Old Matt gave 67 the steam so suddenly she seemed to jump from under us, but the runaway was not more than half a mile behind and was coming with the speed of a tornado.

There was no getting out of the way. In a moment it would be on us. I imagined I could see the black mass coming down on us in the darkness, when a heavy rumble was heard, followed by a tremendous crash.

The rain had loosened the rock and dirt overhanging the track and it only needed the jar of 67 to set it in motion.

Something like 1,000 tons of debris rolled on to the track directly behind us, and into this those runaway cars plunged.

But we did not find this out till afterward. Matt kept 67 up to what was a tremendous speed on that track. She plunged and rolled and rang her bell continuously. A dozen times I thought we were going into the river.

We pulled through all right but that was my last trip. When I got off the engine, my hair was streaked with gray and now it is white as snow.

For some time it was thought that the runaway cars had broken loose, but the company became suspicious, and had the case looked into, with the result of running down some tough characters, who finally confessed to cutting them loose with the intention of ditching us between Haversack grade and the bottom and securing the treasure.

Old Matt has retired from the road, but I do not think that either he or I shall ever forget the run of 67.

East Peterborough Institute Meetings

The regular winter meetings of the East Peterborough Farmers' Institute will be held at the town hall, Keene, on Wednesday, December 4, and at the town hall, Norwood, on Thursday, December 5. The deputation chosen by the Superintendent of Institutes to address these meetings are: Mr. Duncan Anderson, of Rugby, and Miss Blanche Maddock, of Guelph. Supplementary meetings will be held in January at Havelock, Westwood, Warsaw and Douro.

Claims of France and Turkey

London, Nov. 8.—The Vienna correspondent of the Times says those best initiated in the mysteries of the Yildiz Kiosk have for some time represented the Sultan as being in a state of overweening infatuation, which bodes ill for the tranquility of the Near East. The patronage which Abdul Hamid has received from Germany is said to have contributed more than anything to turn his head.

The Times' Paris correspondent says the recognition of the Chaldean Patriarch is one of the new claims of France on Turkey. If compliance with the demands is not soon made, France will advance further claims.

PETERBOROUGH MARKET

Notes.—The hog market is 2.5 lower than last week, and prospects are for much lower prices, as bacon in the Old Country market at present is practically unreliable on account of heavy deliveries. All classes of meat a further drop of from 1-2 to 1-3 cent per lb. is predicted for next week.

SOUTH AFRICAN AFFAIRS

London, Nov. 8.—Inquiry at the War Office to-day regarding Canada's offer of mounted infantry made last May elicited a reply that the Imperial Government had taken no steps as yet to avail themselves of the offer, which is still regarded as open. The War Office would have to receive the sanction of the Cabinet before the offer.

THE CONTINGENT QUESTION.

Ottawa, Nov. 8. — Semi-official denials to the contrary notwithstanding, the statement wired that the Government had been considering the question of another contingent for South Africa is fully confirmed to-day in reliable quarters. It was definitely decided not to approach the War Office officially with a renewed offer, as a communication of that nature was still before them, but to await an intimation from Downing street before proceeding further.

FIRST OFFER RECEIVED.

Ottawa, Nov. 9.—The first application of a Canadian officer to serve on another Canadian contingent for South Africa, should it be decided to send one, is from a personal friend of Col. Pinault, the Deputy Minister himself, namely, Major Boulanger, of the First Battery, Quebec.

TO STAY WITH THE WAR.

Toronto, Nov. 9.—"The bones of Canadian soldiers lie buried on the veldt. Why should not Canada help to finish the war, and win the cause for which they died?"

The speaker was Lieut.-Col. George T. Denison. And as he uttered the words his frame stiffened to a military erectness, his eyes flashed. He stood in the spacious hall of Heydon Villa, where from the walls gaze down the ever-rampant heroes of Waterloo and the chief actors in many other epoch-making events in Britain's martial history.

"Should Canada send another contingent to South Africa? Why, of course she should. She should have done so long ago." He blazed forth with patriotism and conviction.

"You ask if Canada should send more men to South Africa?" he repeated, with a tone and inflection indicating that he did not understand how the question could be asked in any seriousness. "Does anyone say we should not? In all conscience, does anyone say we should not?"

The interviewer was scarcely prepared for such an outburst. He hesitated.

"Who says we should not?" demanded the master of Heyden Villa, turning the tables and interviewing the interview.

"Have you not heard it said that Canada needs her young men at home, that she cannot afford to throw them away on distant battle fields?" parried the interviewer.

"Trash and nonsense!" the Imperialist exclaimed. "I cannot believe that any one really thinks that. We had men fighting in South Africa. They came home. Whom have we sent to take their places? No one! Was the war over when they left the scene of action? Is it over yet? Was it not mean to leave others to fight the issue to the finish after starting with such pretentious promises of aid?"

"How can Canada continue to stand aloof at the present time? With soldiers once in the field, the war became her war, and she should have stayed with it until the end.

"Dozens of her sons lie in unmarked graves out on the veldt. What is she doing to win the cause for which they died?

"Can any Canadian seriously argue that we are justified in bringing our two or three thousand troops home from their comrades' graves to sit down and wait till others vanquish the foe?

THE WAR WAS JUST.

Col. Denison acquiesced, but immediately broke out impatiently: "But the right or wrong of the original question of sending troops does enter into the situation. There was indeed no question of right or wrong. There was only one thing to do. The Empire was threatened. I say if the British had been defeated in South Africa the final result would have been the dismemberment of the Empire. Canada, as part of the Empire, sent troops to help fight the battles of the Empire, and help avert the great danger. And why has she withdrawn from the contest?"

London, Nov. 8. — Reports received here say that Lord Kitchener has become so exasperated at the repeated recaptures of Boers, who have surrendered, sworn allegiance to the British Crown and taken up arms again that he has instructed his officers that no more voluntary surrenders will hereafter be accepted. In future, whether the burghers come into the British camps and surrender willingly, under a flag of truce, or are taken in engagements, they will be treated as prisoners of war and deported.

BOERS IN GOOD CONDITION.

Cape Town, Nov. 8.—A member of the Imperial Yeomanry, who recently spent a few days in the Boer camps, has arrived here, having been released by order of Commandant Pypher. He says that the Boers have plenty to eat, are well clad and have plenty of arms and ammunition (Metford and Lee-Enfield), and excellent horses. The Yeoman reports that he and his companions were well treated during their confinement in the laager.

COULDN'T GET ACROSS.

Bloemfontein, Nov. 7. — During the last few days several unsuccessful attempts have been made by Commandant Kritzinger with his commando of 300 men, to cross the railway in the vicinity of Thaba N'Chu. The result of the census of the civilian population of Bloemfontein, taken on October 20, shows that there are 3,200 adults and 2,200 children in the town. The population is made up of Boers, Hollanders, Germans, English, Scotch, Irish, Welsh, Americans, Poles, Italians, Russians, Swiss, French, Portuguese and Australians. There are also 113 Jews.

CANADIANS FOR BERMUDA.

Ottawa, Nov. 8.—The Militia Department professes to know nothing of the proposal to remove three companies of the Third Regiment of Royal Canadian Infantry to Bermuda to guard Boer prisoners. In all probability the men would have to be re-attested to perform this service, but the men themselves would no doubt be glad of the change. Military life in Halifax during the winter season is fearfully monotonous.

Montreal, Nov. 9.—So far there is no truth in the rumor emanating from Ottawa to the effect that the Dominion Government has received an official intimation from Hon. Joseph Chamberlain, Colonial Secretary, stating that the Imperial Government would now be pleased to accept the offer of another Canadian contingent made last spring and which still remains open.

One in a position to know, in an interview, said:

"As far as I know, the Canadian Government has not received any communication from the Imperial Government with regard to the sending of another contingent to South Africa. I do not believe there will be any necessity for such a step as I do not think that Great Britain really needs any more Canadian troops. I believe the whole thing to be a canard. Great Britain, I do not conceive to be so hard pressed as all that."

Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal, in discussing the matter, said that he certainly did not know of any communication from the Imperial Government to the Dominion Government with respect to the sending of a third contingent. He thought that the attitude of Great Britain on the subject might be better expressed by a willingness to accept aid from Canada rather than there being any absolute necessity for help from this country. There was no doubt but what the mounted Canadian had played a great part in the fighting in South Africa, and to-day was the equal, if not the superior of any soldier in the field. The mounted Canadian was an intelligent agent in the field, and that was why so much had been accomplished by the aid of Canadian troops.

Nervous and Sleepless

Two horrors crowded into one life, the product of poor digestion, and the poisons that are therefore formed within the body. There's just one method of cure for this terrible condition—plenty of food, but mind, food properly digested. That's the difficulty—the digestive power of the stomach must be improved. Rich, red blood formed, strength given to the organs to drive out poisons; then comes strength, vigor and more endurance. Ferrozone does all this and more; it makes sick people well; weak people strong. Use Ferrozone and you reap health. Sold by Ormond & Walsh, Price 50c.

Dissapointment Caused Insanity

Hyde Park, Mass., Nov. 8. — Announcement was made here to-day of the death of Adolph F. Kraus, the famous sculptor, which took place at the Danver's Insane Hospital last night. Mr. Kraus has been receiving treatment at the institution since last July. He was 51 years of age. A widow, four sons and two daughters survive.

A pensioner of the Prussian Government and winner of the Grand Prize of Rome, the name of the sculptor was established in Europe before he came to America in 1881. In this country he continued to win fame, and it was the disappointment of his ambition to produce a masterpiece which is said to have caused his mind to give way. He had partially completed a model in clay of a heroic figure of Belshazzar at the moment of seeing the handwriting on the wall, when it began to crumble and Kraus was compelled to abandon the work. His mind became unbalanced soon afterwards.

Among his noted pieces in America are the Theodore Parker and the Crispus Attucks monuments and the Iowa State soldiers' monument. He was the sculptor of the winged figures of victory that crowned the towers of machinery hall at the World's Fair at Chicago, and which received great admiration.

BOOK NOTICE.

No words of praise are too strong to speak in commendation of this splendid book. It takes the subjects concerning which young women everywhere are so ignorant, and lifts them into the exalted plane they must ever hold in the minds of the intelligent and pure. No other class are so entirely without information as most brides, young wives and young mothers. Three thousand years ago the inspired writer declared "the people are destroyed for lack of knowledge," and the statement is still true to-day. This book to young wives and mothers should have been written centuries ago, and no time should now be lost in bringing it into the hands of every young woman of marriageable age in the land. It tells every young wife just what she needs to know, and saves from the blind blundering and sad mistakes which have wrecked so many lives. It equips the young wife to discharge intelligently the duties of her responsible and sacred relation. Its chapters are ennobling and inspiring. It places the whole subject in the realm of pure and sacred thought and contemplation.

A series of books upon personal and social purity of which this is the concluding volume, constitutes the most marked advance ever made in what Frances E. Willard proclaimed "the largest and greatest crusade." These books will do effective work in a field too long neglected. Men and women, young and old, everywhere, need the information and inspiration which these books impart. This book to young wives, by Mrs. Drake, is a precious jewel in a splendid setting. For its writing its author received a prize of One Thousand Dollars, but every young woman who reads the book will become the possessor of knowledge more valuable than rubies. These books are for sale in Canada by Wm. Briggs, 29 Richmond St., West, Toronto, Ontario.

MALT BREAKFAST FOOD

Is a Boon to Dyspeptics.

The weak, erratic stomach of the dyspeptic demands nourishment that can be retained and that affords strength. Malt Breakfast Food is the only grain food that perfectly fills the bill, because it agrees with the weakest stomach and is easily assimilated and ready to be taken up by the natural process of absorption.

Malt Breakfast Food gruel is acknowledged to be the most refreshing and appetizing dish for the poor suffering dyspeptic. Its use for a few days will tone and strengthen the stomach and digestive organs, after which the patient may commence with the regular Malt Breakfast Food porridge, which will soon banish all trouble and establish a healthy and natural appetite.

The best physicians instead of prescribing medicines, are strongly advocating the use of Malt Breakfast Food for impaired digestion. If your stomach is weak, try Malt Breakfast Food for a week; results will be so pleasing you will never give it up. Grocers everywhere.

—"Peat," the Toronto Telegram says, "is being produced in marketable shape at Beaverton, at the rate of thirty tons a day, is being sold in competition with anthracite coal, and is being burned with good results." The Telegram then proceeds to point out that the national wealth would be enormously increased by any development of peat fuel or peat gas as a substitute for the hard and soft coal which the United States exchanges for good Canadian money.

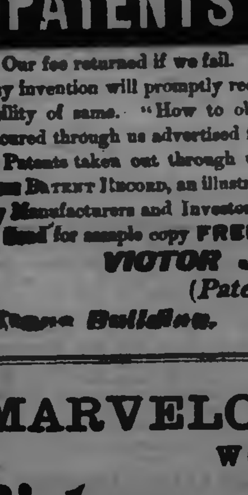
Asthma Cure Free!

Asthmalene Brings Instant Relief and Permanent Cure in All Cases,

Sent ABSOLUTELY FREE on receipt of postal. Write your name and address plainly.



There is nothing like Asthmalene. It brings instant relief, even in the worst cases. It cures when all else fails.

The Rev. C. F. WELLS, of Villa Ridge, Ill., says: "Your trial bottle of Asthmalene received in good condition. I cannot tell you how thankful I feel for the good derived from it. I was a slave, chained with putrid sore throat and Asthma for ten years. I despaired of ever being cured. I saw your advertisement for the cure of this dreadful and tormenting disease, Asthma, and thought you had overspoken yourselves, but resolved to give it a trial. To my astonishment, the trial acted like a charm. Send me a full-size bottle."

DR. TAFT BROS. MEDICINE CO.

Gentlemen: I write this testimonial from a sense of duty, having tested the wonderful effect of your Asthmalene, for the cure of Asthma. My wife has been afflicted with spasmodic asthma for the past 12 years. Having exhausted my own skill as well as many others, I chanced to see your sign upon your windows on 130th street, New York. I at once obtained a bottle of Asthmalene. My wife commenced taking it about the 1st of November. I very soon noticed a radical improvement. After using one bottle her asthma has disappeared and she is entirely free from all symptoms. I feel that I can consistently recommend the medicine to all who are afflicted with this distressing disease. Yours respectfully,

O. D. PHELPS, M. D.

DR. TAFT BROS. MEDICINE CO.

Gentlemen: I was troubled with Asthma for 22 years. I have tried numerous remedies but they have all failed. I ran across your advertisement and started with a trial bottle. I found relief at once. I have since purchased your full-size bottle and I am ever grateful. I have a family of four children and for six years was unable to work. I am now in the best of health and am doing business every day. This testimony you can make such use of as you see fit.

Cancer Sufferers Gain Strength

A great many people suffering from Cancers and Tumors, find their strength rapidly slipping away. These horrible diseases undermine the health and sap the vitality.

To operate or use plasters, simply means further exhaustion. The new Constitutional treatment, instead of weakening, actually builds up the strength and invigorates the entire system, not only this, but it arrests the progress of the disease and entirely eliminates every particle of the Cancer poison from the system. It is a pleasant treatment, and can be taken at home, without pain or inconvenience.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

Local Happenings Picked Up Here and There by The Times.

NOTE.—The Times requests its readers to contribute items of news to its columns. Anything that is phoned or sent in writing to the office, of a nature suitable for publication, will be received and published.—Ed. Times.)

—No Police Court Saturday.

—The railways did a good business on Saturday.

—The Chief of Police intends to enforce the snow by-law this season.

—The Cobourg Asylum will be ready for occupancy in about four weeks.

—The weather on Saturday, the King's birthday, was proverbially "Queen's" weather.

—Major Miller is mentioned as a probable conservative candidate for the local Legislature for West Peterborough.

—The total membership of the local branch of the Federation of Labour is about five hundred.

—St. Luke's annual congregational dinner and entertainment will be held in the town hall Ashburnham, Nov. 29.

—The police have two pair of boys' leather mitts picked up on the road in North Monaghan by ex-Warden Forster.

—Siding into the Cordage Company's property is being planned. The building operations are being pushed along rapidly.

—The West End Sporting Association has organized for the season, and have their headquarters at the corner of Park and Elm streets.

—We are pleased to see that Mr. Con. Clancy is around again and will be found at his post in Mr. R. H. Leary's carriage agency, Water street.

—The great St. Andrew's Day concert in the Market Building on Friday evening, 29th instant, promises to be a great success.

—The treasurer of the Supreme Tent of the Knights of Maccabees is short in his accounts, $37,000. There are one or more branches of the order in Peterborough.

—Mr. Joseph Craig, of the Fergus News-Record, an old Peterborough boy, has gone back on a deer hunt. We would advise the settlers to keep within doors until the slaughter ceases.

—It was the first time Dorothy had seen a street sprinkler. "Oh, mamma," she exclaimed, with wide open eyes, "just see what that man's got on his wagon to keep the boys from riding on behind."

—A Western Ontario publisher recently sued a delinquent subscriber for $14.40 and got it in spite of the man's defence—"never" ordered it. The court evidently thought somebody had been reading the paper during the time that bill was accumulating, and should pay for it.

—The high price of fuel is agitating the people of Ottawa, and the City Council will ask the Legislature for power to establish a municipal coal yard to break the combination on coal yard to break the combination among local dealers. If Peterborough prices do not take a drop some of our citizens will be burning their fences or the town sidewalks before spring.

—At a certain local hotel the other night a man won a bet of $2 by driving a cork out of a bottle. There were several who wanted to wager larger sums that he couldn't do it, but he declined all but the $2 bet on the familiar ground of "Gentlemen, I don't want to rob you." It was an ordinary whisky bottle, full up to the neck. He proposed to grip it firmly in the left hand and strike with the palm of his right smartly upon the concave bottom, holding the bottle in a horizontal position. In a reign of deepest silence he smote, and to the surprise of all, the cork flew out. Anybody can do it, he says.

St. Luke's High Tea

The ladies of St. Luke's congregation are now busily engaged in preparations for their annual High Tea and entertainment which is to be held in the Town Hall, Ashburnham, on Wednesday evening, November 20th. The success attending these events in the past has become proverbial, and this year's tea is expected to become a record breaker. Keep the date in mind.

Private Instructions

Prof. Sheets is prepared to give instructions in physical culture, deportment and dancing, at private residences. For particulars apply to Prof. Sheets, at Foresters' Hall, Simcoe St.

A Dog Story

Mr. Dickson Jewett was telling a bunch of commercial men at the Snowdon House the other night, about the wonderful sagacity of his late lamented dog, "Sport," when one of his hearers said that he owned a dog once that could almost tell the time of day. On one occasion he was showing to a friend, the good points of his dog, and threw a half dollar coin into the river. Obediently the dog dived for the coin and brought up a two-pound catfish and 25 cents in change. This settled it and Dickson at once set 'em up.

Peterborough Club

At a meeting of the Peterborough Club the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

Hon. President—Hon. J. R. Stratton.
President—Lieut.-Col. H. C. Rogers.
Vice-Pres.—His Honor Judge Weller.
Sec.-Treas.—M. H. D. Hall.
Executive Committee—Dr. Boucher, Dr. Young, R. E. Wood, T. F. Matthews, G. W. Hatton, P. Campbell, J. J. Lundy, C. B. McAllister and H. LeBrun.

Adjourned Meeting

The adjourned meeting of the W.C.T.U. will be held in the Y.M.C.A. this afternoon, commencing at half-past three o'clock. Will the members please come out in full force? Also, we would invite every lady in Peterborough who is interested in this work of women for "God, and Home and Native Land," to come to the meeting and hear Mr. A. W. Beall, M.A., give a synopsis of the work of the Provincial Convention, and also what has been accomplished during the year in the Province. There is a wide field in Peterborough for this Society, and we ask for the co-operation of the mothers of the town. Come out Monday afternoon and hear Mr. Beall.

ELIZABETH KENNEDY, President.
A. ROBERTS, Cor.-Secy.

MARRIED IN TORONTO

Miss Gertrude Stanley, Sister of Mr. Chas. Stanley of Peterborough

On Thursday last, at 15 Oxford street, Toronto, a quiet home wedding was solemnized, the contracting parties being Miss Gertrude Lucy, youngest daughter of the late Mr. Samuel Stanley, and Mr. Theodore H. Young.

Rev. Mr. Williams, rector of St. John's Church, officiated.

The bride, who was given away by her brother, was most becomingly gowned in cream brocaded satin, trimmed with pearls, and carried white chrysanthemums. The bridesmaid was Miss Carrie Young, wearing cream lustre and silk, and carrying roses. The groom was assisted by Mr. Paul Stanley, a brother of the bride.

Mr. and Mrs. Young left for New York on their honeymoon, and on their return will take up their residence in Toronto. The bride is quite well and favorably known here and is a sister of Mr. Chas. Stanley, of the Stanley Piano Co. Mr. and Mrs. Stanley were present at the wedding. The Times joins with their many friends in wishing Mr. and Mrs. Young many years of happiness.

CLERGYMAN'S CHILDREN

Coffee Being Replaced by Postum Food Coffee

"I am the wife of a minister. About three years ago a warm friend, an intelligent mother and the conscientious wife of a minister, asked me if I had ever tried giving up Coffee and using the Postum Food Coffee. I had been telling her of my excessive nervousness and ill health. She said: 'We drink nothing else for breakfast but Postum Food Coffee, and it is a delight and a comfort to have something that we do not have to refuse the children, when they ask for it.'

I was surprised that she would permit the children to drink any kind of coffee, but she explained that it was a most healthful beverage and that the children thrived on it. A very little thought convinced me that for brainwork one should not rely upon a stimulant such as coffee is, but should have food and the very best of food.

My first trial of Postum was a failure. The cook of all cooks brought it to the table, lukewarm, weak, and altogether lacking in character. We were in despair, but decided on one more trial. At the second trial, we faithfully followed the directions, used four teaspoonfuls to the pint of water, let it boil full fifteen minutes after the real boiling began, and served it with rich cream. It was delicious and we were all won.

I have since sung the praises of Postum Food Coffee on many, many occasions and have induced numbers of friends to abandon coffee and use Postum, with remarkable results. The wife of a college professor said to me a short time ago that nothing had ever produced so marked a change in her husband's health as the leaving off of coffee and the use of Postum Food Coffee." Edith Smith Davis, Appleton, Wis.

THE TRENT CANAL

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—Will you give your readers a few particulars regarding the Trent Canal. I and many others are not familiar with the subject.

AN AMERICAN-CANADIAN.

Reply.—The Trent Valley Canal is 200 miles long. When completed it will give continuous navigation to barges of 600 tons burden, which is twice the capacity of the Erie Canal, from Montreal to Sault Ste. Marie, via Georgian Bay, Lake Simcoe, Otonabee and Trent Rivers to Lake Ontario. It will shorten the distance between all the great western lake ports and Liverpool, 727 miles.—Ed. Times.

A BELATED POEM

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I enclose a few lines which my son clipped from an American paper, and which he asked me to send to the great family journal, which everybody reads. The lines tell a touching story of little Johnny and his Hallowe'en experience:

Little Johnny lies in bed,
With bandages around his head;
He cannot stand upon his feet,
And soup is all that he can eat,
For he has lost a tooth or two!—
His little back is black and blue,
His little legs are sore and raw,
'Tis feared he has a broken jaw—
Sweet Johnny went on Hallowe'en
To wreck a gate that Deacon Green
Had just had made the day before.
The deacon caught him!—So no more.
For he has lost a tooth or two!—

PREPARE FOR IT

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—By chance I happened to see a letter signed by Mr. Dumble, which appeared in one of your contemporaries. It is a pity that he did not use a paper of wider circulation to ventilate his ideas in regard to Peterborough's future in connection with the completion of the Canal. As President of the Board of Trade, Mr. Dumble should be able to have some action taken regarding the water front, and dredging the river. That dockage facilities will be needed at once, is apparent. But is it not the duty of the Government to provide such? If so, would it not be well for the Board of Trade to make a motion that the Government be requested to proceed with the work?

VERITAS.

THE KING'S BIRTHDAY

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—The first anniversary of the King's birthday since his accession to the throne has come and gone. After our much vaunted loyalty, let us take a retrospect of how it was observed. All the public offices were duly closed, but since the shopkeepers kept open, who alone have brought a stigma upon our loyalty. "Breathes there a man with soul so dead," etc., (you know the rest of it.) It is true, that while most of them have fenced it out without any signs of contrition, a few, by way of apology, hoisted the Union Jack from the housetops, while they raked in the shekels below, but it is doubtful whether such an incongruous attitude will place them on a higher plane than their less pretentious brethren. Even contractors closed down for the day. While none of the shopkeepers would have suffered, had they all closed up alike, the contractor for the new dam at the Locks necessarily lost heavily by the intermission, owing to the nature of the work, and the necessity of having it advanced to a certain extent before the cold weather sets in. Yet we find him and his men duly observing the day. Since man is the architect of his own fortune, and the shopkeepers have exhibited the full measure of their loyalty, let it be known to the world that they have earned for themselves the sobriquet of being the least loyal of the citizens of Peterborough.

Now let us turn our attention to the most loyal class of our citizens, I unreservedly grant the meed of praise to the watering cart man, judging by the volumes of dust and smoke pedestrians had to swallow during the day. Au revoir.

CONSISTENCY.

Neuralgia Drives People Mad

Only those who have suffered it, know of the darting, distracting pains and aches neuralgia inflicts. Ordinary remedies can't even relieve. It requires an extraordinary strong, penetrating liniment to drive out the pain. To get relief rub Polson's Nerviline into the spot. Pain can't resist Nerviline which has five times the strength of any other liniment. Drives out neuralgia in half an hour. Nerviline! Nerve liniment! always successful. Try a large 25 cent bottle.

RAILWAY NOTES

—The railways did considerable business Saturday, on account of the cheap fares.

—"Look, John!" exclaimed his wife, pointing towards the end of the car on Conductor Haskill's Lakefield lightning express the other day, "that poor brakesman is choking!" "No, dear," replied John, calmly, "he is merely calling out the next station."

—It is announced that the land sales of the Canadian Pacific Railway for October were heavier by nearly 100,000 acres than for any other months in the history of the company. The sales for the month were 150,712.34 acres, and the price was $455,835.68. For the previous month sales were 63,900.46 acres, and the price $197,617.01. For the month of October, 1900, the sales aggregated 12,864.9 acres, for $62,700.34. For the two months of the year the total increase has reached nearly 150,000 acres, the exact figures being 340,040.48 acres for 1901, and 392,182 for 1900.

—It is being persistently reported that General Manager Reeve, of the Grand Trunk, will resign the office at the new year, and that he will be succeeded by Mr. Frank W. Morse, 3rd vice-president.

Deafness Curable

Sufferers from impaired hearing will be glad to know that their affliction is probably not due to any organic defect in the ear, but results probably from a thickening of the lining of the middle ear caused by catarrhal inflammation. Hundreds of perfect recoveries as a result of the inhalation of Catarrhozone are reported and as the highest authority we recommend this standard remedy to readers. Catarrhozone quickly restored the hearing, and its efficiency is placed beyond dispute by the case of Mr. Fazal of St. Thomas, who recovered perfect hearing by using Catarrhozone, after years of deafness. Price $1. At Druggists or by mail from Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

A Modern Fable

A Bill Clerk in a Grocery House once took part in a Production by Home Talent. Every one who bought a ticket had a friend in the cast. The Bill Clerk was a Glutton, but most of the People were wedged in and had to Stick. His acting was very Bammaraz. When they gave him a call, he did not know that they were kidding him. After the show they came around and told him he was Great. The Paper gave him a Notice better than Coquelin ever got. He had himself Photographed in Costume and began to Grow a Marguerite curl in the middle of his Forehead, and keep one hand inside of his Coat. The Mantle of Edwin Booth had Fallen on him, but it did not reach the Small of his Back. All he wanted was a chance and he Would make Otis Skinner look like a Side Order of Something. He read the Dramatic Papers and unless he was choked off he arose at Evening Parties and recited. Then all the Girls told him he had Wonderful Talent and after he went away they said he was the jassiest piece of Punk they ever saw.

The Bill Clerk began to write Letters of Congratulation to himself and use Powder on his face. He Forsook the low down Grocery Trade and decided to go on the Stage. He changed his Name from Wesley Fink to Ormond Dupont, and had "Theater" painted on his trunk. After that, all he needed, in order to be an Actor, was an Engagement. He Packed up and Headed for the Rialto, with all the Photographs of himself and the Notices from the Home Paper. The Managers and Agents turned Him down and waved him away and kept him sitting in waiting rooms for hours at a Time, but they could Not Drive Ormonde back to the Canned Fruit Business again. He was Going to Act, whether or no.

So, Finally, he signed with a Company presenting a Problem Play entitled "A Wet Dog." In the First Act he Played the Part of a Man who brought in the Trunk. In the Second Act he had to Walk right out in the Glare of the Footlights and ask: "Did you Ring?" In the Third Act he was number Four from the Right End. And now all his old Friends in the Grocery Trade can see that they know some one who is really on the Stage.

Poor Girl Pity Her

Growing! Yes, into weakness, but not strength. Studies—plenty of them. Tired, of course she is, and weak too. Does not eat enough, and digests far less than enough. This condition is so frequent, but how seldom noticed even by fond parents. Give her Ferrozone, then watch her appetite improve, her cheeks and lips grow ruddy, her step elastic, her spirits buoyant. All this simply the result of eating and digesting enough, making blood, and thereby strengthening the nerve and brain power. Ferrozone gives a woman's strength to weak girls. Your daughter or wife needs Ferrozone. Get it to-day at Ormond & Walsh's.

Mr. Smelf's Mail

Bobcaygeon Independent: Some of our city contemporaries are shooting off a little about the number and quality of the mail matter they been [illegible] calendars and [illegible] the quality of the mail matter they have been receiving lately. Tut, tut, they are not a circumstance to the great journal. Here are a few things picked up, for example, for $51.00 [illegible] an apology to a client or $2,000; (we forwarded the $51,000 cheque, with instructions for him to pay his client the $2,000 and keep the balance for cigars.) one packet of pressed flowers from British Columbia; a third and last notice from Postmaster-General for our postage account, as he desires to make up his annual report; four boxes of cake, with condolences, that are unnecessary, as we invariably place such samples under the mattress and forget them; a draft by the Dominion Bank on sight for 200 good wishes for the New Year; an amiable notification from a gentleman at Bonanza Creek, Yukon, that it would afford him unutterable pleasure to blow the—still more unutterable—vacuum out of our upper story; two brusque orders to discontinue; and six new orders to forward, each with dollar enclosures, one from British Columbia, one from Chicago, one from Prince Edward Island and three from Ontario, and these are merely picked up at random, remember.

A MARVELLOUS MEDICINE

"No Cure, No Pay," is the Newest Proposal of the Proprietors of Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills.

[illegible]d to Morning Times.

Sir,—We make the following proposal to the readers of the Times: To any one who is a subject of rheumatism (no matter how long standing) or any blood disease, as enumerated below, and will give Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills a fair trial and do not find a perfect cure we will refund the money paid for the pills. If no substantial improvement is observed, we will in addition, pay $10 in cash on satisfactory evidence being supplied us to this effect.

We have yet to know of a single case where these wonderful pills have not been almost entirely successful in effecting a cure. CANADA CHEMICAL CO.

Ex-Ald Bailey, St. John's, writes: 'I cannot speak too highly of Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills. They worked a miracle in my case, and cured me after many years of suffering. I do not think their equal is to be obtained.

Dr Clarke's Little Red Pills are a positive and certain cure for la grippe, rheumatism, asthma, paralysis, catarrh, eczema, coughs, backache, indigestion, all stomach and liver troubles, female complaints, even when the disease having been standing for many years, the most stubborn cases will yield. Price 50 cents per box. For sale by Ormond & Walsh. The Canada Chemical Company will forfeit $10 for any case that these pills do not help.

Dr. Clarke's Sure Cure for Catarrh, and Dr. Clarke's Sure Cure for Eczema same price. $10 will be paid for any case they will not permanently cure.

Roseberry Said to Have His Majesty's Support and a New Policy

ADDITIONS TO THE BRITISH LIST OF CASUALITIES

New Plan of Settlement of the South African Difficulties—Lord Kitchener's Report

London, Nov. 11.—A leading member of the Liberal Imperialist League says that Lord Rosebery's reappearance in politics was instigated by King Edward, who thinks the Cabinet needs strong opposition as a stimulus. This member of the league also says Rosebery's forthcoming speech will give decided expression of opposition to Mr. Chamberlain's extermination policy, and may formulate a new plan of settlement of the South African difficulties along Liberal lines.

Sir Franklin Lushington, Chief Police Magistrate of London, who has presided at Bow street Police Court in many famous cases, is dead. He was seventy-eight years old, and had been Police Magistrate since 1869. He was Knighted in 1899.

MORE CASUALTIES.

Lord Kitchener reports that in the recent fight at Brakenlaagte an addition to the 239 casualties already reported must be made. The British lost 12 killed and 22 wounded.

FROM THE KLONDIKE

Mr. Albert Wells, of Dawson City Arrives in Town

Mr. Albert Wells, who is employed in the post office at Dawson City, spent Sunday in town, the guest of his brother-in-law, Mr. J. Edgar, paper merchant, Simcoe street. Mr. Wells has spent several years in the north, and has made his "pile."

To a Times representative he said that the country is richer by far than people imagine. Mining is yet in its infancy, vast regions, with untold millions of hidden gold is yet to be developed. He thinks the Government should not give this valuable land to railway promoters like McKenzie & Mann.

Mr. Wells was on board the steamer Hating, that struck a rock, and was thought to have been seriously damaged. He says that the bulk of the trade of the territory was given to the United States in the proportion of two-thirds to one-third. Now this has been changed, and Canada gets the big end.

Mr. Wells left last night for New York on business. He intends to stop off here for a few days on his return.

MARRIED MAN TO TWO WOMEN

Mistake Made by Mayor Huston of Lockport in his First Marriage Service

Lockport, N.Y., Nov. 12—Mayor Huston to-day, in the embarrassment of his first marriage service, innocently married Mary Moscato and Angelina Napal, pretty Italian lasses, to Joe Scotch, while Tony Scotch, who had come to Mary, stood by, and the witnesses, fellow officials of the Mayor, enjoyed the joke immensely. The Mayor did not discover his mistake until the whole thing was done, and the Italians were too ignorant of American civil rites to know the difference. So the Mayor pronounced the four "to be men and wives" and sent them off to the priest for the proper religious service, which would undo his error.

NEW COINS NEXT YEAR

London, Nov. 12.—For the first time in many years the British mint will not issue any new money at Christmas. The first issue of the coinage of King Edward VII. will be as early in 1902 as possible. Before the date of issue the coinage will be heralded by a royal proclamation describing minutely the character and appearance of each coin, without which formality none could be legally put into circulation. Most of the dies of the Victorian coinage will then be destroyed, but, of course, specimens will be preserved. The mint is already more than usually busy in connection with the special army medals, and the issue of the new coinage, both of which involve enormous labor.

As soon as the issue is made there will certainly be a tremendous rush for the new coins. Precedents show first issues from the mint in a new reign are long hoarded in enormous quantities. In view of this a sufficient quantity must be issued to counteract the tendency of scarcity to inflate the face value of the coinage in its ordinary use; This may partly account for the postponement of the new issue, as the fewer Victorian coins that are in circulation the stronger will be the provocation to put the new money into active use. The second issue may be made within a shorter interval than usual, as it is the first issue alone that has charms for the collector.

THE BOER PRISONERS

The Treatment Accorded to Them by Their British Captors

London, Nov. 12.—Some particulars concerning the way in which the Boer prisoners are treated in India and Ceylon is given by the Indian correspondent of the "Civilta Cattolica," a periodical published in Rome. They at present number about 10,000, and are distributed in six camps, namely, at Diyatalawa, in Ceylon, Ahmednagar, in Bombay; Bellary, in Madras, and Trichinopoly, in southern India. Each prisoner is provided with a sun helmet, canvas shoes, slippers, light flannel jacket, shirt drawers, stockings and pocket handkerchiefs. Each has a camp bedstead and mattress with pillow and two coverlets. As regards food they receive the same allowance as is made to the soldiers who guard them, while the Boer soldiers are provided for in the same way as British soldiers serving in the field. The camp consists of long rows of mud cabins, thatched with straw, like those of the natives; arranged in wide clean streets, lit up at night by the electric light. In each cabin there are from ten to twelve prisoners in charge of one of the Boers, who is elected by his fellow prisoners and styled captain.

Around all the cabins there is a barrier of barbed wire, outside which are the cabins of the English soldiers who keep guard. The prisoners get up at 6 o'clock in the morning, and go to bed at 9 o'clock at night. Twice a week they are taken out for exercise, accompanied by British soldiers. Except at appointed times, no Boer is allowed to pass the barrier which surrounds the camp under pain of death, but the officers are permitted under parole to go wherever they like. The military authorities have provided amusements for the prisoners, and often the soldiers on guard join them in a friendly game at cricket or football. Money from friends must be handed over to an official, who will restore it when they are set at liberty.

BOERS FOR BRITAIN

Pretoria, Nov. 11.—A corps of National Scouts was recently organized of surrendered Boers, with General Collier commanding. The first squadron is now in the field, and is doing good work.

A second squadron is now being formed by General Andreas Cronje. The corps also has British officers, under Captain Blakemore. This development will probably prove an important factor in the speedy termination of the war, and an effective settlement thereafter.

Uncle Sam to Have His Own Way

London, Nov. 11.—The Pall Mall Gazette this afternoon, referring to the speech made by Senator Lodge at Boston on Saturday last, says:

"If, as believed, Mr. Lodge's speech reveals the mind of President Roosevelt, this country will have nothing to complain of. The isthmian business will be settled next year in a manner honorable and satisfactory to both countries, which means, we presume, that America will get her own way in the matter. The Monroe doctrine is to be sternly upheld by a great navy, if need be. This is in the interests of peace, As the Monroe doctrine does not affect that part of the American continent which belongs to the British Empire the announcement will cause no friction."

THE ROYAL FAMILY OF EUROPE

Startling Statement Regarding the Royal Family of Europe

London, Nov. 12.—We hear the most alarming anticipations about the King. The report is going about everywhere, and it finds some sanction in the fact that the King has lost within a comparatively short space of time a brother and a sister from the fell disease which, according to popular rumor, he believes to be threatening his own life. Three of the late Queen Victoria's children died during Victoria's lifetime and one other, the late Queen's eldest daughter, widow of the late German Emperor Frederick, died only a few months after the death of her mother.

An interesting article which I have just been reading in the Dublin Freeman's Journal, the leading newspaper of Ireland, insists that one main cause of the illness which at present affect so many royal houses in Europe is to be found in the fact that "the sovereigns of Europe have disregarded that great law of nature which discountenances the marriages of near blood relations." The article goes on to tell us that while "there are in Europe over a score of Emperors, Kings and minor reigning sovereigns—all but two are the descendants of James, of England, the only child of the marriage of Darnley and Mary, Queen of Scots."

The King of Sweden, who as everybody knows, is the descendant of Marshal Bernadotte, one of the soldiers whom the great Napoleon raised from the ranks and set upon a throne, and the Prince of Montenegro, who became a soverign ruler within the recollection of us all, are almost the only exceptions. The result of this condition of things naturally is that European Princes and Princesses are compelled to marry "in and in," if I may use that colloquial expression when dealing with such a subject—in other words, have to find their marriage consorts in families more or less nearly related to their own.

At present there is hardly a European imperial or royal family which is not oppressed by serious and boding illness of some kind, and it is only reasonable to say that some explanation of this fact may be found in this system of intermarriage. It is certainly a curious historical fact that the dynasty of the Stuarts, in many ways the worst dynasty that ever ruled over England, should have left so many descendants among the reigning houses of Europe.

A Hero in the Elevator

New York, Nov. 11.—Fire in the carpet-making plant of the Planet Mills in Brooklyn to-day destroyed $25,000 worth of property and endangered many lives. There were 300 women at work on the upper floors of the building. William Stewart, an elevator man, kept his cage going until the last woman had left the building, and then fell unconscious from the smoke and fire fumes he had inhaled. Three firemen were overcome by smoke and were rescued by their comrades.

AN OTONABEE MYSTERY.

BODY OF A MAN FOUND LYING IN AN UNUSED WELL.

Supposed to Have Been a Tramp Who Committed Suicide—No Clue to His Identity

Alexander and Bertram Long, two young men of Otonabee, made a startling discovery about noon yesterday. Their father, Mr. Charles Long, rents and works a farm on lot 21, con 12, Otonabee about four miles out of town. The dwelling on the farm has been unoccupied for over a year. The two boys were plowing and at noon they went to the pump near this dwelling to water their horses. The pump would not work, and lifting a board, they saw lying in the well the body of a man. The well is about sixteen feet deep and contains considerable water but the body was not submerged.

As soon as Mr. Long was made aware of the discovery he came to town and notified High Constable Cochrane, who went out and brought the body in to Undertaker Belleghem's. The body is that of a man 35 or 40 years of age, 5 feet eight inches in height and of medium build with black hair and moustache. It is poorly clothed and the man appears to have been a tramp. In the stable a few weeks ago a man's coat and vest were found, and they may have been left there by the deceased. The body is a good deal decomposed. So far as could be ascertained there are no marks of violence and it seems probable that the man committed suicide by crawling into the well.

The authorities will decide this morning whether an inquest may throw any light on the matter.

ITEMS OF INTEREST

Moscow, Nov. 11.—One more door has been carefully closed against the Jews in Russia. There are a large number of Jews upon the Russian stage, and many are in the imperial service in that department. On the strength of this connection with the Imperial theatres, Jewish actors, actresses, and minor members of the stage army have been in the habit of travelling freely about Russia in the pursuit of their calling. It has now been ordained that such persons shall not be considered as having any rights not belonging to them apart from their connection with the Imperial theatres. In other words, they will have to reside only in the towns where they are officially employed, and may not travel during the months when the Imperial theatres are closed.

SERMON BY ELECTROPHONE.

London, Nov. 11.—When the Archbishop of Canterbury preached at St. James' Church, Tunbridge Wells, the manager of the municipal telephones, recognizing that many would be unable to obtain admission, installed an electrophone in the church. Subscribers who desired were connected with the instrument, and hundreds sat at home and listened to the Archbishop's discourse. Residents at Crowborough and Wadhurst, ten miles off, heard as perfectly as though they were actually present, and in one case a gentleman took shorthand notes of the Primate's utterances.

TYPEWRITING BY TELEGRAPH.

London, Nov. 11.—The first of a series of experiments has just been concluded on the wires of the General Post Office by Mr. Douglas Murray with his long-distance high-speed page-printing telegraph system. The trunk line from London to Glasgow was used. A speed of [illegible] words a minute was maintained, although the atmospheric conditions were frequently unfavorable. Transcription by automatic typewriter was carried on at the rate of seventy words a minute. Mr. Murray claims that the trials have demonstrated that the system is simpler, more durable, and more easy to keep in order than any system now in use. There is a likelihood that the Post Office will make terms with Mr. Murray for adopting his system, which would mean a reduction of skilled labor at the General Post Office.

THE DEFENCE OF LONDON.

London, Nov. 11.—During the past few weeks a careful survey has been made of the districts surrounding the metropolis with a view to strengthening the batteries and fortifications commanding the main London roads. Lord Roberts has personally inspected several of the positions, and as the result of his recommendations heavy modern guns are to be mounted in the place of the now obsolete muzzle-loading weapons, along the entire range of the Surrey hills and in several commanding positions on the outskirts of North London.

PROTESTANTS ALARMED.

London, Nov. 11.—Lord Salisbury has acknowledged the receipt of a letter sent to him by the Protestant Alliance calling attention to "an invasion of Jesuits and members of the Roman Catholic religious orders into this country." The object of the invasion, says the letter, is "to place the British Sovereign, the British people, and the British churches once again beneath the cruel heel of the Papacy."

15,000 NEW RIFLEMEN.

London, Nov. 11.—Since the inauguration of the rifle club scheme, which was entrusted to the National Rifle Association, no less than 15,000 members have been enrolled, and the clubs affiliated to the association number 302. The suggestion put forward by those who opposed the movement from the first that clubs would interfere with the strengthening of the volunteer force has proved groundless, for the latter body has in many districts placed its ranges at the disposal of the clubs, and not infrequently has drawn recruits from a class of men who but for the clubs would never have become acquainted with the use of firearms.

AN EIGHT-YEAR-OLD HERO.

London, Nov. 11.—Herbert Wain, only eight years old, the son of a Midland railway goods guard, has been awarded the Royal Humane Society's certificate for bravery at Romiley, near Chatsworth, Derbyshire, the plucky boy, going to the rescue of two little girls, aged three and four, saved from drowning. He had previously saved a boy. The Marchioness of Granby presented the Humane Society's certificate to the hero of eight.

THE MONROE DOCTRINE

Uncle Sam Somewhat Excited Over the Attitude of Canada

New York, Nov. 12.—There is a good deal of feeling in official circles in Washington over the attitude of Canada, as shown by the speech of the Canadian Minister of Justice, in regard to the Nicaragua canal treaty. Many of the leading papers answer the Canada Minister with abuse. The following, taken from the Sun, is a fair sample:

"The Minister of Justice in the Laurier Government, Mr. David Mills, is reported as saying, in a speech at Ottawa, that Great Britain ought to influence Nicaragua not to enter into any new canal treaty with the United States that may not be satisfactory to Canada.

"The same boreal statesman has published in the Empire Review in London an article in which he refers to this country as "an ambitious and not over scrupulous State," and gives notice to the world that Canada will not be content to permit the construction of an isthmian canal by the United States at an expense of one hundred and fifty or two hundred million dollars unless the Dominion is guaranteed, gratis, perfect equality with ourselves in the use of the canal. He likewise asserts that Great Britain must not sacrifice Canada's "rights" to certain Alaskan territory which he describes as "claimed by the United States."

"Can this boreal statesman of expansive, aggressive, land-grasping, republic-defying propensities be the same David Mills who undertook some years ago, on his own account, to veto the construction of the Canadian Pacific railway, and resisted so strenuously the admission of British Columbia into the Canadian system?

"How under the sun are we going to get his consent to proceed with our little canal enterprise?"

Lock Victim in an Ice Box.

Chicago, Nov. 11.—Three robbers after resorting to the old-time plan of locking the bartender in the ice box, were interrupted in their depredations at two minutes past two o'clock this morning, when their prisoner forced his way out of his cold prison.

A fusilade of shots followed, and this attracted a large number of persons to the vicinity, but the robbers escaped with their booty.

The robbery occurred in the saloon of P. Hendrickson, Division and Sedgwick streets, Samuel Swanson, the bartender, was alone when three men entered. They approached the bar, but failed to arouse Swanson's suspicion. Then one of the three pointed a revolver at the bartender's head. The others also stepped forward flourishing revolvers and Swanson thought best to submit.

He was quietly asked to step into the ice box and complied without attempt at resistance. Then the robbers broke the cash drawer and took out the day's receipts, amounting to upward of $60.

As the robbers were helping themselves to whisky and cigars the door of the ice box suddenly opened and out sprang the bartender. In his hands he swung two bottles of beer and rushing toward the robbers he aimed a blow at one. The third sprang to the side and one of his companions fired a shot at Swanson. The third meanwhile seized the money and several boxes of cigars and sprang to the door.

Several more shots were fired, but Swanson escaped injury. He followed robbers to the street, but they were soon lost to view.

BRITISH PREMIER ON SOUTH AFRICAN WAR

Lord Salisbury Advocates Steadfastness and Doggedness

NO NEGLECT OF IT'S DUTY

Guerilla Warfare Must be Stamped Out—Sure and Substantial Progress Being Made in South Africa

London, Eng., Nov. 11.—The feature of the Lord Mayor's banquet on Saturday evening in Guild Hall, was Lord Salisbury's speech. It was pleasant to record, he said, that the peace of the world had been so little disturbed by the events of the last two years. Half a century ago we would not have found such a correct and pacific attitude on the part of all the great powers. It was a sign of the increasing international amity and understanding, also that the cloud of the last three weeks over the Mediterranean had so lightly passed away. Fifty years ago this would not have been so.

Touching upon South African developments in another part of his speech, Lord Salisbury said:—

" 'I strongly deprecate the spirit of pessimism so frequently heard in the utterances of some of our public men as to the war in which we are engaged. Unlike the wars of former years, no longer does the capture of the enemy's capital and the dissipation of his field force constitute a conclusive victory. We are now confronted by a system of guerilla war, which must be slowly and effectively stamped out. We are progressing slowly, perhaps, but steadily." It was absurd to suppose that Great Britain would not be able to meet due and expected difficulties.

The Prime Minister proceeded in his gravest tones: "We cannot lay before you the whole circumstances of the case. We cannot tell you publicly all that is going on. We should be gravely neglecting our duty if we did. Yet it is only by some such revelation that we can give you full and entire satisfaction. All I can say is, and I am speaking the judgement of those who have the best opportunity for determining what is really going on, that you are making month by month, and week by week sure and substantial progress.

NO NEGLECT OF DUTY.

"We maintain that there is no ground for saying that the Government has in any degree neglected its duty, either in meeting the demands of the Generals on the spot, or in making other preparations necessary for the conduct of the war."

"The position of the Government had not changed. It desired nothing better than bringing back these territories to the blessings of the British Empire, that they should enjoy immediately, peace, freedom and civil rights, and, within the earliest opportunity which circumstances and time might permit, that they should enjoy the other blessings of self-government which were enjoyed by all the British self-governing colonies.

"I deeply regret the ravages of the war in the colonies to which we are anxious to accord the fullest practical measure of self-government; but we have had neighbors in South Africa whose conduct for years has been a menace to the stability of that section of our empire. Now, we are engaged in removing this menace; and we are determined to do it so effectually that it will never require doing again."

That the trouble should never recur was, he believed, the deep resolve of the British people. However much sacrifice and labor it required, he felt sure they would enthusiastically support their Government.

The effect which the British Empire will exercise over the destinies of the world and the position it will occupy in the commonwealth of nations will not be decided, said the British Prime Minister, merely by passion or enthusiasm. A far more precious and more effective quality was that of determination, that no discouragement, no passing inconvenience, should deter them for a moment from carrying out steadily, lengthily and doggedly the policy which they believed to be the policy of the empire.

Two Days on Keel of a Boat

Thessalon, Nov. 11.—Mr. W. J. Harper, a pioneer resident of Cockburn Island, now residing at Thessalon, had a terrible experience last week. He was crossing from Thessalon to Little Cockburn in his sailboat, when a squall capsized the craft. He succeeded in getting upon the bottom of the boat and for two days and two nights drifted helplessly, the water at times washing over him and once he fell asleep, and fell overboard, losing his hat.

After more than fifty hours the boat touched Grant's Island, and Mr. Harper crawled ashore. He lived on wintergreen berries, strawberry leaves, birch buds, etc., for several days, when a party of Indians coming from John's Island, camped on Grant's Island, and found Mr. Harper almost exhausted. They carefully nursed him, poulticed his feet, which were blue and numb, and after 24 hours brought him to Thessalon, just one week from the day of his departure.

Mr. Harper carried the mail between Cockburn and Thessalon for some years, a most perilous undertaking, and on two former occasions nearly lost his life. He has come through this terrible experience very well, and will soon be around as usual.

T. A. S. CONCERT

An Evening With the Children—To be Repeated on Friday

A closely packed hall greeted the opening chorus, the Maple Leaf, by the little children, at the T. A. S. concert last night under the direction of Miss M. Weyer and Miss A. Simons. The second number was a recitation by Miss Carrie White, and an encore, and was followed by a violin solo, and later a skirt dance, both by Miss K. Wallace. A recitation, Mollie the Milk Maid, was succeeded by a cake walk by the little girls, with solos by little Kathleen O'Brien, Ollie Languey and Helen O'Brien. An instrumental duet by Miss Mamie and Master Harry Theobald was loudly encored. Several boys next gave a wild exhibition of contortions capers under the hypnotic influence of Prof. Paderewski—otherwise one of our popular young men. A fancy dance, "Fisher's Hornpipe," by Miss H. Wallis, was the next on the program and was followed by the little tots in a chorus, with solos by Miss H. O'Brien. A piano solo was rendered by Miss Constance Granett, and Master O. Giroux and Master R. Coughlin next gave a vocal selection nicely accompanied by Miss N. Coughlin. Four little girls, Misses L. Coughlin, B. Weyer, Ollie Shapps and M. Callaghan, gave a dialogue, "Familiar Characters," and Miss Febert followed with a charming vocal selection. Next came a song by four of the boys, a dialogue, and then a march and fan drill by eight young ladies, Misses M. Carveth, L. Morrow, N. Coughlin, J. Conroy, L. Devlin, G. McFadden, N. Simons and E. Langney, and a floral procession taken part in by Miss Bessie Weyer, as queen, assisted by two little pages, Masters H. Wallis and L. Hayes, flower-children, Mistress Mary, and Lord Tintle Frills. Before the final tableau, "A Glimpse of Fairyland," by the children, Miss Doherty gave a piano solo. The program was closed by the singing of God Save the King. Mrs. Wallis and Misses M. Doherty and A. Simons were the accompanists for the evening.

At the conclusion of the program the chairman, Mr. James Hickey, complimented Miss Weyer and Miss Simons on the success of their efforts and thanked them for the work they had done. He announced for to-night a meeting of the Ladies' Literary Committee, for Wednesday, the usual social evening, for Thursday, a meeting of the Glee Club, and for Friday the repetition of the entertainment given last night.

TO PENETENTIARY FOR TEN YEARS

Sentence Passed on David Hawes, the Colored Porter

ASKED MERCY OF THE JUDGE

Pleaded Forgiveness for Sake of Wife and Children Justice Ferguson's Scathing Remarks on the Crime

Toronto, Nov. 11.—David Hawes, a colored Pullman car porter, was convicted by a jury at the Assizes on Saturday evening of a crime, for which if it had occured in the Southern States, he would undoubtedly have been tried very summarily and suffered immediate death at the hands of an angry mob. The charge was preferred by Miss Louisa LeBar, who was travelling alone from Winnipeg to Whitby. The prisoner was sentenced this morning by Mr. Justice Ferguson, to serve ten years in the Kingston Penitentiary with hard labor. Hawes pleaded for the leniency of the court; it was his first offence, he said, and he had determined to be a better man in future. He said in part: "They say God forgives; I hope you will for the sake of my wife and children, of whom I am the sole support."

JUDGE'S REMARKS.

In passing sentence His Lordship remarked that the prisoner had been found guilty of a heinous offense which was punishable by statute with death, although the extreme penalty of the law was seldom enforced in Great Britain and her colonies. "The evidence showed that you dogged the girl all the way from Winnipeg, with mean, despicable and evil intent, the product of a most dishonest and contemptible mind. I am afraid that we shall have to go back to the period when the death penalty was enforceable in crimes of this nature if we have to try many more of these dirty cases.

"It is not in my province to exercise mercy," said the Judge. "The evidence of your previously good character has borne weight, not, I assure you, in the way of mercy, but with a view of determining the proper sentence."

Unable to Kill the Elephant

Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 11.—After nearly 3,000 persons had paid 50 cents each to see the electrocution of Bostock's alleged vicious elephant, Jumbo II in the pan-American exposition stadium this afternoon several prominent citizens of Buffalo requested that Mr. Bostock, in the name of decency, prevent a public electrocution. Bostock immediately refunded the gate receipts and announced that the elephant would be electrocuted privately.

At 6 o'clock Jumbo II was placed in the "death harness," and slightly tickled by 2,200 volts of electricity. Jumbo never winced.

The announcement was later made that the elephant had withstood 11,000 volts and had not been affected. Mr. Bostock now says that he will exhibit Jumbo II at the Charleston exposition.

A DYNAMITE GUN FOR THE AMERICANS

Hurled 500 lbs. of Nitro-Gelatine a Distance of 3,000 Yards

EXPLODED UNDER THE WATER

Desired Delayed Action of Two Seconds was Secured—Column of Water 200 Feet High.

New York, Nov. 11.—Highly successful tests of a new dynamite gun of destructive powers in excess of any weapon hitherto designed, have just been privately conducted by a special board of officers of the Bureau of Ordnance of the United States army at Fisher's Island.

With the full calibre projectile the gun proved its ability to hurl 500 pounds of nitro-gelatin, said to be sufficient to annihilate any battle ship afloat, a distance of about 3,000 yards with a degree of accuracy not excelled by the latest types of heavy rifled ordnance. Two days were devoted to the tests. The first shot hurled a six-inch shell, carrying fifty pounds of explosive a distance of 5,700 yards, bursting on contact with the water and sending a column of water 200 feet into the air, with a ten-inch shell carrying 200 pounds of explosive.

The extreme range was found to be 6,400 yards, the shell exploding under water with the desired delayed action of two seconds.

TEST FOR ACCURACY.

In the test for accuracy, five 8-inch shells were dropped at the respective ranges of 5,047 5,000, 5,030, 4,940 and 4,970 yards, all of which would have taken effect assuming that the target had been a battle ship about three miles away or about double the distance of 3,000 yards now generally accepted as the limit of a practical fighting range. In the test for rapidity of fire five full calibre shells, weighing 1,165 pounds, or more than half a ton each, were discharged in eleven ten each, were discharged in eleven minutes and fifty-five seconds, almost bringing the weapon within the class of rapid-fire pieces.

A companion gun has just been mounted in the fortifications at Hilton head, defending the naval station at Port Royal, S. C., and will be tested by the same board within a few days.

PETERBOROUGH, NOVEMBER 12, 1901

THE YELLOW PERIL

The aged Li Hung Chang, according to our advices, lies at death's door. It is possible that by the hour this edition goes to press, we may have heard of his death. With him passes the last of a generation of prominent Chinese statesmen who were powerful forty years ago in China, but have gradually died off, leaving Earl Li as the last survivor. Away back in 1862, when Gordon was fighting the Tai Ping rebellion, Li was a general, and was hunted by Gordon with homicidal intent for his treachery in murdering the rebel Wangs, who had been turned over to him on condition that their lives should be spared and themselves well treated. That was a fair illustration of his character. Since that time, as a statesman and diplomat, he has been noted for ability, but even more for duplicity sometimes even impenetrable. For fifteen years he has been playing the part of tool for the Empress Dowager, and at the same time for the Russian Government. Probably, he has in reality been more the latter, as it was a line of business always susceptible of prosecution on a cash basis, without the necessity of division of profits with anybody. Li's various negotiations with Russia undoubtedly have promoted the movement which has culminated in the Russian occupation of Manchuria, Mongolia, and Eastern Turkestan, and it is more than possible that the Empress Dowager's tardy realization of the fact is partly responsible for the old gentleman's failure in health.

Whether dead or alive he is negligible as far as future events may be concerned. His place is likely to be filled, if filled at all, with somebody more obnoxious to Western ideas and interests than he. At least it may be said of him that he was not reactionary in the sense that the Boxer leaders, Prince Tuan and Gen. Yang Lu, are. It is also noticeable that with his elimination from the scene, they and their kind are rapidly coming to the front, and herein lies the Yellow Peril to civilization.

Nothing could be more notorious than the fact that the Empress Dowager was the real instigator of the Boxer movement, of the murder of the Japanese Chancellor of Legation, Akira, of the murder of Baron Von Ketteler, and of the attempt to massacre the foreign Ministers and legation people at Peking. Tsi Hsi [illegible]; indeed, needed to be taken and hanged as an example to her people. Instead, she has been treated with consideration and honor by the Powers, and the day will surely come when they all will be sorry for the blunder. She is as determined as ever to drive the foreigners out of China, and only awaits her opportunity to do so with characteristic ignorance, impudence and atrocity.

Already her anti-foreign policy crops out in the appointment of one of her most bloodthirsty Boxer agents, Na Tung, as a member of the new Chinese Board of Foreign Affairs. Again she designs to surround the throne with creatures who can be depended upon to lead in a new attempt to butcher the legationers should opportunity offer. While she is tolerated in control of the Chinese government, China will be a powder magazine, and somebody will drop a lighted match in it or lightning will strike it some day. The Yellow Peril is not a thing of the past; it is an ugly and perhaps an imminent one.

CARBOLIC ACID

An enquiring reader of the newspapers propounds the question why it is that so many people too poor to afford luxuries, seem to be possessed of carbolic acid. He says that we frequently read of cases in which somebody has gotten hold of the carbolic acid bottle by mistake in the dark, or in ignorance of its properties, or because it happened to be a handy instrument with which to commit suicide, and he asks why the law against the promiscuous sale of poisons is not enforced in this case.

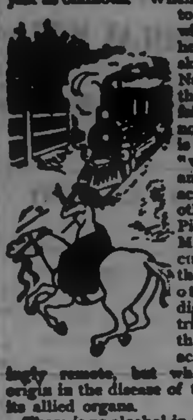
In the first place it may be stated that there is no law which can be framed which will absolutely prevent the sale of poisons to persons who might want to make unlawful use of them. Many substances useful in the household are poisonous when taken in large quantities and this is especially so with liquids used as disinfectants, several of these are deadly poisons when taken internally. So are some [illegible].

It is probable that few people in their right minds, or with even a fragment of common sense remaining, would commit suicide by means of carbolic acid if they understood just what kind of stuff it is. It produces intense agony, unlike some other poisons, and some persons who have attempted to destroy themselves by means of it have had a chance to repent while slowly recovering from the very painful effects of the act. But the poison is often at hand when somebody is rash enough to desire to commit suicide in a hurry, and that, perhaps, explains the frequency of its use.

Speaking of poisons in general, however, it may be said that the carelessness of the average family in leaving such things about is [illegible]. Some drug stores put up these substances in bottles of a peculiar shape, plainly marked with a large label, showing a skull and cross-bones. The odd shape of the bottle, unlike that of any ordinary receptacle, lessens the chance of getting hold of it in the dark by mistake, though it would seem that anyone going to a closet where bottles of poison were mixed up with other bottles would have the sense to take a light, or at any rate to be sure that the bottle was what it ought to be before taking any of the contents. On general principles, it is best to keep such things on a high shelf, where children cannot reach them, and, in most cases, this high shelf would better be in a locked closet.

In Danger.

Every one is in danger who neglects the warnings of declining health. The warnings are not as startling as the sudden shriek of a locomotive, but they are just as ominous. When the body begins to lose in flesh, when the cheek is hollow and the skin sallow it is Nature's warning that the body is failing of proper nourishment. It is a condition of "weak" stomach, and "weak" stomach soon involves other organs. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition, and cures through the stomach diseases seemingly remote, but which have their origin in the disease of the stomach and its allied organs.



There is no alcohol in the "Discovery" and it is absolutely free from opium, cocaine, and all other narcotics.

"Before I commenced to use your medicine I was in a bad condition (for eight years), and four doctors treated me," writes Mrs. Bettie Askew, of Garysburg, Northampton Co., N. C. "They, of course, gave me at the time some relief, but it did not last long. I was some days in my bed and some days I dragged about the house. I have used five bottles of the 'Golden Medical Discovery' and five of the 'Favorite Prescription' and four vials of the 'Pellets.' Now I feel like a new woman, and I want the world to know it."

Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser, 1008 large pages, paper binding, sent free on receipt of 31 one-cent stamps to pay expense of customs and mailing only, or 50 stamps for it in cloth binding. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

EVERYBODY READS THE TIMES

A Few Pointers That Advertisers Would Do Well to Remember.

Josh Billings: "I luv a rooster for two things—one is the crow that is in him and the other is the spurs that air on him to bak up his crow with."

The Times has become a popular paper, not only amongst the people of the town and Ashburnham, but also amongst the residents of the surrounding towns and villages.

Mr. G. B. Hilliard, of Lakefield, says the Times is regarded in Lakefield as the brightest paper that comes to that burg, and is read by very many in the village.

Wm. O'Brien, the genial clerk of Douro, who has long been a subscriber to the daily edition, says that the Times is the popular paper in that township, 75 per cent. of the people being readers. He hopes that it may long keep up its onward pace.

Mr. Wm. Gallen, Reeve of Burleigh and Anstruther, states that the whole back country reads the Times, and regard the paper as one of the very best. He says that it is always full of good things.

Mr. P. P. Young, Young's Point, says everybody reads the Times in that locality, it is admirably conducted.

Mr. James Stevenson, ex-M.P., says the Times is the brightest and best newspaper published in Peterborough.

Councillor Calcutt says he would sooner miss his breakfast than miss getting the Times. It is a famous appetiser only equalled by Calcutt's celebrated ale.

Mr. J. B. Thornton, Omemee, says the Times is very popular in that village and is widely read.

Rev. Mr. [illegible] thinks the Times deserves great credit for its progressive spirit. It is up-to-date, giving all the news up to [illegible] each morning. North Smith brought us in a couple of [illegible]. Recently Mr. Sage and [illegible] of clubs for the Weekly Times of 10 names. Here are 20 names from one section of Smith, that are constant readers of the Times.

Mr. Harry Garbutt, Reeve of Smith, says that the Times is the popular paper in that locality.

Mr. James Hogle, Springville, gives similar evidence, and says you can hardly go into a house in his locality that the Times is not present.

Mr. Pearson, the great horse buyer, of Montreal, told the Times the other day that he has better results from the advertisement in the Times than from any other paper. He says he finds the Times is read by almost everybody in the district. He knows this, for almost every horse he buys is the product of the Times advertisement.

Mr. T. Donaldson, Cavan, member of the Counties Council of Northumberland and Durham, says that the Times is very popular in Cavan.

Mr. James Chambers, Manvers, bears similar testimony in regard to Manvers Township.

David Healy says that in Asphodel, Hastings and Norwood, everybody literally reads the Times.

Dr. Bingham, the popular city Medical Health Officer, missed his Times the other morning, and came to the office for a copy. He said he was not feeling well, and wondered what was the matter, until he remembered he had not had his Times.

The above are a few of the many evidences we have in our possession of the high regard in which this great family journal is held by the people. Merchants and other advertisers should remember that hundreds upon hundreds of families throughout the town and country cannot be reached by any other way except through the Times.

Lindsay Post.—Mr. Donald Robertson, of the Scotch Line, Verulam, recently sold eight hogs to Mr. J. Bell, drover of Dunsford, and realized $101.60 on the lot. The animals were monsters, being only six months old.

A MARVELLOUS MEDICINE

"No Cure, No Pay," is the Newest Pro Bono of the Proprietors o Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—We make the following proposal to the readers of the Times: To any one who is a subject of rheumatism (no matter how long standing) or any blood disease, as enumerated below, and will give Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills a fair trial and do not find a perfect cure we will refund the money paid for the pills. If no substantial improvement is observed, we will in addition, pay $10 in cash on satisfactory evidence being supplied us to this effect.

We have yet to know of a single case where these wonderful pills have not been almost entirely successful in effecting a cure. CANADA CHEMICAL CO.

Ex-Ald. Bailey, St. John's, writes: I cannot speak too highly of Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills. They worked a miracle in my case, and cured me after many years of suffering. I do not think their equal is to be obtained.

Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills are a positive and certain cure for la grippe, rheumatism, asthma, paralysis, catarrh, eczema, coughs, backache, indigestion, all stomach and liver troubles, female complaints, even when the diseases having been standing for many years, the most stubborn cases will yield. Price 50 cents per box. For sale by Ormond & Walsh. The Canada Chemical Company will forfeit $10 for any case that these pills do not help.

Dr. Clarke's Sure Cure for Catarrh, and Dr. Clarke's Sure Cure for Eczema same price. $10 will be paid for any case they will not permanently cure.

THE BRITISH ARMY.

London, Nov. 10.—The following is taken from "The Diary of Col. de Villebois-Mareuil," who was killed while in the Boer service: "People will never understand this war, its duration, and the extraordinary success of this passive defence if the English Army is described as a European Army. It is an army without energy, ideas, or morale—I refer to its means and life, an army which remains alone, still opposing the Boers because it has neither sufficient worth to do anything nor enough endurance to abandon its comforts for a matter of three days.

It is a fine thing to demilitarize a nation by degrading the military calling to the lowest degree, but since empire in this world is kept by force, let those who abdicate the one cease to pretend to the other, itself is no longer sufficient, and one might take long odds, if the experiment was carried out to the end, that a weak place would be discovered in that famous British Navy; for when the military spirit has descended to such a degree of decadence in a nation it would be astonishing if the [illegible]

THE CHINESE INDEMNITY

An American Banker Needed in Shanghai to Collect [illegible]

Washington, Nov. 11.—W. W. Rockhill, Special Commissioner of the United States to China, held a conference with Assistant Secretary Taylor of the Treasury to-day in regard to the arrangements for looking after the collection of the indemnity of $[illegible] due the United States from China. It was agreed by the Powers, under the terms of the protocol, that each Power should appoint a banker in Shanghai to attend to the collection and disbursement of the indemnity, the bankers to compose a special committee. There is no American bank in Shanghai, and Minister Conger recommended recently that the British member of the commission be appointed to represent the United States. Mr. Rockhill and the Treasury officials would be glad however, if the business could be placed in the hands of an American. It is suggested, therefore, that if a responsible American citizen should start a banking house in Shanghai, he would probably be able to secure appointment to care for this Government's share in the indemnity and receive a commission thereon. He would, of course be required to give a bond for the honest performance of his duties.

Smuggling Chinamen

Buffalo, N.Y. Nov. 9.—An attempt to smuggle Chinamen into this country from Canada was frustrated by the police at an early hour this morning. While two patrolmen were standing at Niagara street and Hertel avenue they saw a carriage rapidly approaching them, and when the driver saw the patrolmen he whipped up his horse. That excited their suspicions and they ordered the driver to stop. The door of the carriage was opened and in it were four Chinamen huddled as far out of sight as they could get. The driver of the rig who gave his name as Grant Householder, was arrested. It is supposed that the Chinamen were brought across the river from a point near Fort Erie.

Russia and Japan

New York, Nov. 11.—A despatch from London to the Times repeats a Tokio despatch to the London Times, in which the Times' correspondent says the leading Japanese journals have been earnestly discussing the overtures in Russian newspapers looking towards a Russian alliance with Japan. The proposed basis of the arrangement is that the Tokio Government refrain from all measures impeding Russia. Russia, in return, would pledge herself to leave a free hand to Japan in Korea, but Russia should be allowed to appropriate a convenient naval station in Southern Korea.

None of the Japanese journals approve of the idea, the papers objecting that two powers cannot divide supremacy in the far east. They also interpret the proposal as pointing to the permanent occupation of Manchuria by Russia.

This condition is so frequent, but here seldom noticed even by fond parents. Give her Ferrozone, then watch her appetite improve, her cheeks and lips grow ruddy, her step elastic, her spirits buoy and [illegible]. All this simply the result of eating and digesting enough, making blood, and thereby strengthening the nerve and brain power. Ferrozone gives a woman's strength to weak girls. Your daughter [illegible] needs Ferrozone. Get it to-day, at Ormond & Walsh's.

SOUTH AFRICAN AFFAIRS

The recent aggressive activity of the Boers show that their remarkable mobility and fighting qualities are again in evidence. That their struggle for independence is universally regarded as hopeless, is conceded. It is unlikely that they will receive any better terms than the British have heretofore offered them; but the Boers fight on, very much as the Americans did in their darkest hour for independence, against enormous odds and, despite British proclamations which threaten with condign punishment all Boer leaders and burghers failing to surrender before September 15 last. Despite the presence of an overwhelming British force, the threat of banishment for leaders in arms, and of the confiscation of the property of other burghers in arms, the Boer commandoes continue to harry the exposed British columns and to break the British lines of communication.

One of the Boer officials is represented as saying that every Boer rebel must be provided with a rifle, "and for every one of them we have to capture a British soldier." When the story of the Boer side of the struggle is faithfully written, we shall have a story of constancy and courage, and of the adaptation of scanty means to the exigencies of warfare. Two years after the beginning of the war the spirit, if not the fact, of revolt was so rampant among the Boers of Cape Colony that it was necessary to bring the entire colony under martial law. The persistence of the spirit after the "subjugation" of the Boers is a serious problem of the future for their British masters.

The only hope of the British to make the conquest of the Boer Republics secure is, according to high British authority, to settle the countries with Englishmen. "When the settlement is effected," says a British writer, "and the inexhaustible resources of South Africa are thrown open for exploitation to the world, there will be no danger of Dutch domination, for the overwhelming majority of the workers will be of Anglo-Saxon origin."

The effacement of the Boer population in South Africa by the infusion of Anglo-Saxon blood will require a very long time, if finally successful. Conditions in the Boer countries must remain indefinitely unsettled and uninviting to peaceful immigration. Great Britain cannot safely relax military control of the Boer countries unless liberal concessions are made to the Boer population.

Great Britain has entered on the third year of the war, with about 200,000 men and 450 guns in South Africa and with 100,000 men in military training at home awaiting a call for their services. Four months' reserves of food for this great army and for 450,000 horses and mules must be maintained. The Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, recently said in a public speech that the organized resistance of the Boers ended a year ago, and that only guerrillas were in the field. Nevertheless, a year after this organized resistance in South Africa ceased, as reported, it was necessary to keep not less than 200,000 British soldiers and 450 guns in the country. The war has been prolonged far beyond the limit fixed for its duration by any British writer or speaker who undertook to forecast the outcome, and the end is not yet.

The Mail says that there will now be energy put into the war that has been unknown since its commencement. The result will be the rounding up of the remaining Boer forces. The country will be happy, prosperous and peaceful in a couple of years.

The St. James' Gazette says: I venture to send you the following extract from a letter received from my brother this week. I may say my brother is in Kimberley, and was one of the gallant band of the Town Defence who helped to keep the enemy at bay during the months of the siege. Referring to the prolongation of the war he says:

The fact of the case is that most of our officers are fonder of golf and cricket than duty. Only last week two Boers went to one of our outposts near here, right between two blockhouses, and left their worn-out horses and took our fresh ones without any of our pickets knowing about it. And again, some officers were playing golf, when they were told the enemy was around. They finished their game, and then gave orders to fall in; but meanwhile, brother Boer had exchanged their horses and all got away, our men not being able to follow on the horses. That is the kind of thing that is keeping the war on.

London, Nov. 11.—A despatch from Middleburg, Cape Colony, says that the enemy has gained no success, but has, on the contrary, been driven from pillar to post. Nevertheless, there are still a few who seem to imagine that by some means or other they will win in the end, for during the past week a few young recruits have joined the ranks of the Boers.

Smuts' commando is said to be in a very bad condition. His horses are reported to be very poor, most of his men are dressed in khaki, and food is very scarce. During the week he has been kept constantly on the move, and considering the state of his horses it is surprising that he has not been captured. He has travelled fully 150 miles during the week, and that through a hostile country with columns in pursuit and local troops on the watch, and has had to fight several skirmishes on the way.

Among this commando are several who originally belonged to Kritzinger. Col. Gorringe having captured some of these men in khaki uniforms, tried them by summary court martial and had them shot on the spot. Among the prisoners captured, is a German, who states that he was enlisted in Germany eighteen months ago by a Boer agent, with the promise of a farm in the Transvaal. He described the condition of the commando as being most wretched. They had no rest and very little food for some time. The foreigners are said to be treated badly, and are sorry they did not surrender before the fifteenth, but are now afraid to do so. Other prisoners report that there is great dissatisfaction with Smuts' leadership, and that probably very shortly he will be superseded by a man named Van der Venter. It is now certain that this Smuts is the late Transvaal Attorney-General.

Deafness is Curable

Sufferers from impaired hearing will be glad to know that their affliction is probably not due to any organic defect in the ear, but results probably from a thickening of the lining of the middle ear caused by catarrhal inflammation. Hundreds of perfect recoveries as a result of the inhalation of Catarrhozone are reported and on the highest authority we recommend this treatment to our readers. Catarrhozone quickly restores lost hearing, and its efficiency is placed beyond dispute by the case of Mr. [illegible] of St. Thomas, who recovered perfect hearing by using Catarrhozone, after years of deafness. Price $1. At Druggists or by mail from Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

THE FRENCH SEIZURE.

New York, Nov. 9.—The London correspondent of the Tribune cables:

A second meeting of the Cabinet, adjourned from the previous day, is the only sign of excitement in England over the French naval demonstration at Mitylene. Press comments are cautious and temperate, and leader writers are content with the expression of a hope that the Sultan will make timely concessions to the French Government, and enable the fleet to withdraw after protecting unimportant national interests. These bland reflections are filled out with pretty references to Sappho and to Antony's dalliance with Cleopatra.

There is an evident intention on the part of the English press to minimize the Mitylene affair as much as possible, and to class it with the recent efforts of the United States and of Austria-Hungary to obtain a settlement of private claims. If the Ministers take the same view, it is remarkable that they have been in session two successive days; although it is barely possible that they are holding prolonged consultations over the legislative programme and are paying little attention to Admiral Caillard's cruise with 2,000 troops. There may however, be more serious complications. There is no probability that the British Government considers itself liable under Lord Beaconsfield's Cyprus convention, to defend the Ottoman Empire against a French seizure of the revenues at Mitylene. It is, however, an open question, whether the Foreign Office may not be embarrassed by some secret arrangement with Germany respecting the near East. The German Emperor has been steadily developing the commercial interests of his Empire in Asia Minor, and strengthening his own influence at the Sultan's capital. It has been suspected for a long time by students of current diplomacy, that Germany's neutrality in South Africa was the result of a secret understanding with Great Britain respecting the near East. If these suspicions are well founded, the activity of despatch bearers flying between Lord Lansdowne's and Lord Salisbury's houses is a natural bit of by-play and the prolonged Cabinet conference is not an affair of minor importance like the flutter of Lesbian swallows.

EQUALITY FOR FRENCHMEN.

Paris, Nov. 9.—It is learned from a good source that one of the demands made on the Sultan by M. Bapst, the councellor of the French Embassy at Constantinople is that Frenchmen shall be placed on an equality with Englishmen before the Ottoman courts.

REINFORCEMENTS READY.

Paris, Nov. 9.—A Toulon despatch to the Matin says that the French Mediterranean squadron, which is at that port, is ready to start at the shortest notice.

STILL AT MITYLENE.

Paris, Nov. 9.—A despatch from Admiral Caillard, received here last night, but dated yesterday morning, announces that his squadron is still lying before the Island of Mitylene. No landing has yet been effected. A heavy sea is running.

RUSSIAN OPINION.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 9.—The newspapers here anticipate that, following the lead of France, other powers will discover claims against Turkey. The Russian newspapers generally welcome the French naval demonstration in Turkish waters as a setback to what the Rossiya terms "German pretensions in Turkey."

MITYLENE'S IMPORTANCE.

London, Nov. 9.—Smyrna, with its gulf, and the Island of Mitylene, now the scene of the activities of the French fleet in the Aegean Sea, is the most important town in Asia Minor, and the chief commercial centre of the Levant. For this reason it has always figured in schemes of Christian Governments to make the Turk "pay up." The export trade of Smyrna is quite large. It ships cotton, figs, raisins, opium, carpets, and other commodities which find their way into all parts of the world. The town itself consists of a Turkish and Frank quarter, and is the terminus of two railway lines. In ancient times Smyrna was an Aeolian settlement, and was afterward colonized from the City of Colophon, in Ionian, and became a member of the Ionian League. It was claimed as the birthplace of Homer. Destroyed in war and rebuilt by Lysimachus, it grew to be one of the chief cities of Asia. It was one of the seven cities mentioned by John in Revelations. In 178 A. D. it was leveled by an earthquake, and was restored by Marcus Aurelius. Since 1424 it has been under the rule of the Turk. The population consists of Turks, Armenians, Franks and Greeks and numbers about 200,000. Mitylene lies in the Agean Sea, west of Asia Minor, and not far from Smyrna. Its chief city is Mitylene. This island is not important in itself but from their station here the French can easily proceed to Smyrna and seize that place in case the French Government desires to do so. The island is only forty-three miles long. Its nearest coast is about fifty miles from the city of Smyrna and the mouth of the Smyrna Gulf is directly south of it.

News Items.

La Guaira, Venezuela, Nov. 11.—Senor Herbert, the Minister of Chili at Bogota, with the authorization of his government, has cabled to President Castro offering the good offices of Chili in order to arrange the differences between Venezuela and Colombia. President Castro's reply was as follows:

"I accept your proposition with pleasure on condition that Colombia gives full powers, and do not forget my answer to the [illegible] Mexico, stipulating reparation and the payment of damages for invasions and losses, bases which I consider just and reasonable."

Colon, Colombia, Nov. 11.—There is absolutely no truth in the report circulated in the United States that Panama has been captured by the liberals.

Boer Sympathies

London, Nov. 9.—The appointment of Rev. Charles Gore, Canon of Westminster, to be Bishop of Worcester, has raised both a political and ecclesiastic storm. Only a few days previous to the announcement of his appointment Mr. Gore came out in The Times with a strong letter condemning the concentration camps and other severe measures in South Africa. Several of the Government organs immediately stigmatized him as a pro-Boer, and deplored the fact that such a talented author should have been so hopelessly misled. Their astonishment over Lord Salisbury's almost immediately afterward elevating Mr. Gore to the Bishop's Bench was so great that it took away their breaths and so far appears to have stifled adverse press comment, though the matter continues to be the subject of keen private criticism among lay and clerical supporters of the Government. The evangelical party in the Church also bitterly upbraids Lord Salisbury for selecting a man so prominent in high church circles.

In less prejudiced quarters the affair is taken as once more exemplifying Lord Salisbury's extraordinary cynicism and utter lack of interest in current events, though others see in it another instance of nepotism, as the former head of Pusy House, Oxford, and editor of Lux Mundi, is a connection of the Premier's family.

BOOK NOTICE.

No words of praise are too strong to speak in commendation of this splendid book. It takes the subjects concerning which young women everywhere are so ignorant, and lifts them into the exalted place they must ever hold in the minds of the intelligent and pure. No other class are so entirely without information as most brides, young wives and young mothers. Three thousand years ago the inspired writer declared "the people are destroyed for lack of knowledge," and the statement is still true to-day. This book to young wives and mothers should have been written centuries ago, and no time should now be lost in bringing it into the hands of every young woman of marriageable age in the land. It tells every young wife just what she needs to know, and saves from the blind blundering and sad mistakes which have wrecked so many lives. It equips the young wife to discharge intelligently the duties of her responsible and sacred relation. Its chapters are ennobling and inspiring. It places the whole subject in the realm of pure and sacred thought and contemplation.

A series of books upon personal and social purity of which this is the concluding volume, constitutes the most marked advance ever made in what Frances E. Willard pronounced "the latest and greatest crusade." These books will do effective work in a field too long neglected. Men and women, young and old, everywhere, need the information and inspiration which these books impart. This book to young wives, by Mrs. Drake, is a precious jewel in a splendid setting. For its writing its author received a prize of One Thousand Dollars, but every young woman who reads the book will become the possessor of knowledge more valuable than rubies. These books are for sale in Canada by Wm. Briggs, 29 Richmond St., West, Toronto, Ontario.

MALT BREAKFAST FOOD

Is a Boon to Dyspeptics.

The weak, erratic stomach of the dyspeptic demands nourishment that can be retained and that affords strength. Malt Breakfast Food is the only grain food that perfectly fills the bill, because it agrees with the weakest stomach and is easily assimilated and ready to be taken up by the natural process of absorption.

Malt Breakfast Food gruel is acknowledged to be the most refreshing and appetizing dish for the poor suffering dyspeptic. Its use for a few days will tone and strengthen the stomach and digestive organs, after which the patient may commence with the regular Malt Breakfast Food porridge, which will soon banish all trouble and establish a healthy and natural appetite.

The best physicians instead of prescribing medicines, are strongly advocating the use of Malt Breakfast Food for impaired digestion. If your stomach is weak, try Malt Breakfast Food for a week; results will be so pleasing you will never give it up. Grocers everywhere.

—"Peat," the Toronto Telegram says, "is being produced in marketable shape at Beaverton, at the rate of thirty tons a day, is being sold in competition with anthracite coal, and is being burned with good results." The Telegram then proceeds to point out that the national wealth would be enormously increased by any development of peat fuel or peat gas as a substitute for the hard and soft coal which the United States exchanges for good Canadian money.

CHAINED FOR TEN YEARS
HAY FEVER
ASTHMA
EVERY BRINGS RELIEF.

There is nothing like Asthmalene. It brings instant relief, even in the worst cases. It cures when all else fails.

The Rev. C. F. WELLS, of Villa Ridge, Ill., says: "Your trial bottle of Asthmalene received in good condition I cannot tell you how thankful I feel for the good derived from it. I was a slave, chained with putrid sore throat and Asthma for ten years. I despaired of ever being cured. I saw your advertisement for the cure of this dreadful and tormenting disease, Asthma, and thought you had overspoken yourselves, but resolved to give it a trial. To my astonishment, the trial acted like a charm. Send me a full-size bottle."

DR. TAFT BROS.-MEDICINE CO.

Gentlemen: I write this testimonial from a sense of duty, having tested the wonderful effect of your Asthmalene, for the cure of Asthma. My wife has been afflicted with spasmodic asthma for the past 12 years. Having exhausted my own skill as well as many others, I chanced to see your sign upon your windows at 130th street, New York. I at once obtained a bottle of Asthmalene. My wife commenced taking it about the 1st of November. I very soon noticed a radical improvement. After using one bottle her asthma has disappeared and she is entirely free from all symptoms. I feel that I can consistently recommend the medicine to all who are afflicted with this distressing disease. Yours respectfully,

O. D. PHELPS, M. D.

DR. TAFT BROS. MEDICINE CO.

Gentlemen: I was troubled with Asthma for 22 years. I have tried numerous remedies but they have all failed. I ran across your advertisement and started with a trial bottle. I found relief at once. I have since purchased your full-size bottle and I am ever grateful. I have a family of four children and for six years was unable to work. I am now in the best of health and am doing business every day. This testimony you can make such use of as you see fit.

Cancer Sufferers Gain Strength

A great many people suffering from Cancers and Tumors, find their strength rapidly slipping away. These terrible diseases undermine the health and sap the vitality.

To operate or use plasters, simply means further exhaustion. The new Constitutional treatment, instead of weakening, actually builds up the strength and invigorates the entire system, not only this, but it arrests the progress of the disease and entirely eliminates every particle of the Cancer poison from the system. It is a pleasant treatment, an can be taken at home, without pain or inconvenience.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Events Under This Head Transpiring In and Around Peterborough.

NOTE.—The Times requests its readers to furnish it on paper with items of a personal and social nature either by phone or in writing.—Ed. Times.]

—Capt. Lane, of Bobcaygeon, gave The Times a friendly call yesterday.

—Mrs. S. M. Wallace, Port Hope, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Mellor, in town.

—Miss Edith Mason has returned from a visit to her cousin in Philadelphia.

—Mr. C. M. Paterson, of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, spent Sunday in St. Thomas.

—Mr. and Mrs. Daubes and daughters have returned to No. 539 Reid street, for the winter.

—Mr. Court Pousette has been up from the Montreal branch of the Bank of Toronto for the last few days. He returned last night.

—Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Pousette have returned from their wedding trip, and for the present are domiciled at Mrs. John Burnham's residence.

—Mr. Stanley Burton, of the Bank of Montreal, returned yesterday from a few days visit to Toronto and his old home at Port Hope.

—Lt.-Col. David Sutton, commanding officer of the 3rd Dragoons, and Capt. Syer, of Millbrook, were in town yesterday, on their way to Toronto. where they will take in the special six day course at the school of cavalry.

Spitting on the Walks

Toronto has set an example that Peterborough would do well to follow: The city has decided that there shall be no more spitting upon the walks in the streets. All ejected saliva must be deposited off the walks, to the contrary means a fine that can be raised to a pretty high limit. A similar law has been passed in many American cities, and in more than one instance fellows who persisted in using the walks as spittoons were quite severely dealt with. It is about time that steps were taken in this town to put a stop to the disgusting sights that one sees during a very short walk, particularly on the day following the Sabbath. In line with this matter comes the report that the Montreal Company, after a certain near at hand date, will not permit smoking on the street cars, for the simple reason that smokers were too exacting regarding their rights—if ladies in a crush were compelled to occupy their seats they puffed smoke in their faces, from both cigar and pipe. For this their privilege is to be stopped altogether.

A USEFUL LIFE ENDED.

Very Sudden Death of Mrs. Richard Morgan of Ashburnham

That Death has all seasons for its own was painfully exemplified on Saturday evening, when Mrs. Richard Morgan so suddenly passed away. She appeared in her usual good health, until the very moment she was stricken. At about 5 o'clock she was overtaken by paralysis, and a few hours later she passed away without having regained consciousness.

The late Mrs. Morgan's maiden name was Margaret J. Rutherford. She was 63 years of age and had lived in Ashburnham for 33 years. Her husband died about 34 years ago. She leaves a family of two, a son and a daughter. The son is Mr. Harry Morgan of Ashburnham, and the daughter is Miss Isabella Morgan, of Toronto. Besides these, she leaves two sisters, Mrs. John McWilliams, of Ashburnham, and Mrs. W. J. Rombough, of Toronto, and a brother, Mr. Wm. Rutherford, of Zion, Otonabee.

The death of Mrs. Morgan will cause a sense of personal loss in the hearts of nearly all old residents of Ashburnham. In visiting the sick, comforting the afflicted, helping the unfortunate few women were more truly Christian in spirit and in act. Her life was righteous and her end was peace.

The funeral will take place to-day at 1.30 p.m., to Zion Cemetery, Otonabee.

An Interesting Story

Some twelve or thirteen years ago, in the thriving City of London, Canada, a man named Cottam kept a bird store; and his birds were everywhere noted for their invariable health and song. "On what do you feed your birds?" was a question frequently asked. An explanation always resulted in the visitor taking away a pound or two of "the very same seed you feed to your own birds." Once tried, the mixture was always wanted. At length the trade for seed outgrew the trade for birds, and instead of the seed being an incident of the bird trade, the birds became an incident of the seed trade.

That consumers could be served more promptly it became necessary to tie up a great many parcels in advance, each containing one pound of the very same mixture which kept Cottam's birds in such perfect condition. After a while, to save string and time and to make a neater packet, cartons with self-fastening ends were substituted for paper bags, and enveloped in handsomely lythographed labels. The store soon ample for its trade, became too small, and additional rooms had to be secured and more hands employed. It was thought by some that one or two persons working constantly would supply the seed needed for all the birds in America; but first one and then another extra person had to be engaged, until the new quarters became too small. The business was then moved into another building, of which only one-fifth of the room was needed at that time, and it was thought part would have to be sub-let. But the trade expanded so rapidly that soon it became unnecessary to re-let, and before long the new warehouse, big as it appeared at first, was fully occupied. Nor was it long before still more room had to be obtained. a four story building next door was secured, doors were put in to connect the two, and to-day a total floor area is devoted to the preparation and packing of The Cottam Bird Foods the largest in the world used by any one firm for a like purpose.

From the Atlantic to the Pacific, from the Gulf of Mexico to the most northerly post of the Hudson Bay Company, The Cottam Bird Foods are to be obtained; but no matter where or from whom you buy it, you can always rely on getting the very same quality of goods which years ago made a name for itself by keeping Cottam's birds in such grand health and song, and upon the merits of which has since been built up a business covering the whole country.

BEET SUGAR

Increased Likelihood That Peterboro Will Have a Factory

The agitation began last spring for a beet sugar factory in Peterborough appears likely to bear fruit. It will be remembered that the farmers made the first move in the matter, and a meeting was held at which Ontario Government officials were present, and it was arranged to distribute seed for experiment in growing the sugar beet in various parts of the county. The Government analysis of the beets grown from this seed has not been made public, but it is understood that they show a very high percentage of sugar.

On Saturday a gentleman was here who operates a beet sugar factory in Michigan and another in Colorado. Mayor Deane and other representative men showed him the town, and he was very favorably impressed with it as a location for a beet-sugar factory. His company is willing to establish a factory here. The company would ask from the town thirty acres of land, and exemption from taxation for a certain number of years, and proper railway sidings. The concern would employ at the least about 180 men, being divided into night and day shifts. They would necessarily be men, no boys or women being employed. The factory would consume 4,500 tons of lime-stone in a year, 9,000 tons of coal in the same period of time, and would use two million and a half gallons of water. The company would invest 4.7 of the required capital, and would expect the remainder of the capital to be put up by local people.

A PATRIOTIC APPEAL

How Kingston Feels About Patronizing Toronto Papers

At a meeting of the City Council of Kingston, held a few days ago, one of the Aldermen said: "I believe in supporting the newspapers and our own local people. We can use our own local papers more effectively than by going outside. I say support your own industries and people. We have little enough money in Kingston without sending it outside of the city."

If there was more of this spirit abroad in Peterborough it would be better for the Town. The Times, for instance, would, if it had the support and patronage that it is entitled to from the merchants of the town, be in a position to give its readers a paper equal to the Toronto morning papers. No better advertisement could be had for the town than a paper that would be read in all parts of Eastern Ontario. West of Toronto the papers of the Queen City supply the needs of the people, but eastward it is different. There are no early mails eastward, to bring Toronto papers into competition with the Times, and the result is we have a large district to cater to. All we require is the patronage of our merchants, and this, we are pleased to say, is gradually but surely coming our way.

CORPORATION COAL YARD

Special Legislative to be Secured by Ottawa City

Ottawa is apparently in the hands of a local combine, by which prices of coal is kept up unduly. At a meeting of the Finance Committee of the City Council of Ottawa, it was decided to recommend the Council to secure special legislation to enable the corporation to establish a municipal wood yard.

Peterborough and other towns and cities will watch the experiment with interest. The idea of a corporation wood yard was one which was suggested by Mayor Morris some months ago to enable the manufacturers to overcome the effects of the alleged combine in coal.

A FEW HINTS ABOUT

DIAMOND DYES AND Diamond Dye Mat and Rug Patterns.

The noted and popular Diamond Dyes give beauty and new life to all kinds of materials and garments that have become dingy and faded—from the most commonplace articles of wearing apparel to the finest and most delicate lawns, cambrics, muslins, silks or feathers.

If you have a taste for homemade mats and rugs, ask your merchant to show you the Diamond Dye Mat and Rug Patterns now so very popular in Canada. These designs are the prettiest yet shown, and will give you a chance to use up your wool and cotton rags and yarns after dying them with Diamond Dyes to match colors on Rug Patterns. If you cannot get the Patterns in your town, send your address at once to The Wells & Richardson Co., Limited, 200 Mountain St., Montreal, P. Q. and they will send you postpaid, sheets of designs to choose from.

PAINES CELERY COMPOUND

Does a Wonderful Work.

It Saved Mr. Arthur's Life After the Failures of Doctors and Their Medicines.

The blood plays an important part in our physical economy. In twenty-seven heart-beats all the blood in the system has been pumped once through the heart and starts again on its round bearing nourishment and life to all parts of the body. If our blood be impure, disease instead of true life creeps to all parts, leaving the excretory organs so weak that they cannot remove the waste matters and noxious particles in the system that are such fruitful sources of disease.

Paine's Celery Compound is the only reliable and safe medicine for the curing of the most virulent blood diseases; it is the only purifier of the vital life stream. It saved Mr. Arthur, of Chelmsford Ont., when his life was in peril. He writes as follows:

"With great pleasure I write about your wondrous medicine, Paine's Celery Compound. I was laid up with sears all over my face and neck, the result of blood poisoning. While in that condition, I could not sleep at night, had no appetite, and could not attend to my work. The doctors in my district and their medicines did not benefit me. My aunt advised me to use Paine's Celery Compound. In two weeks I was so much better that I could go out, and in three weeks I was able to work again. I bless the day I commenced with Paine's Celery Compound."

Deafness is Curable

Sufferers from impaired hearing will be glad to know that their affliction is probably not due to any organic defect in the ear, but results primarily from a thickening of the lining of the middle ear caused by catarrhal inflammation. Hundreds of perfect recoveries as a result of the inhalation of Catarrhozone are reported and on the highest authority we recommend this treatment to our readers. Catarrhozone quickly restores lost hearing, and its efficiency is placed beyond dispute by the case of Mr. Fenall of St. Thomas, who recovered perfect hearing by using Catarrhozone, after years of deafness. Price $1. At Druggists or by mail, from Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

A MARVELLOUS MEDICINE

"No Cure, No Pay," is the Newest Proposal of the Proprietors of Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—We make the following proposal to the readers of the Times: To any one who is a subject of rheumatism (no matter how long standing) or any blood disease, as enumerated below, and will give Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills a fair trial and do not find a perfect cure, we will refund the money paid for the pills. If no substantial improvement is observed, we will in addition, pay $10 in cash on satisfactory evidence being supplied us to this affect.

We have yet to know of a single case where these wonderful pills have not been almost entirely successful in effecting a cure. CANADA CHEMICAL CO.

Ex-Ald. Bailey, St. John's, writes: I cannot speak too highly of Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills. They worked a miracle in my case, and cured me after many years of suffering. I do not think their equal is to be obtained.

Dr Clarke's Little Red Pills are a positive and certain cure for la grippe, rheumatism, asthma, paralysis, catarrh, eczema, coughs, backache, indigestion, all stomach and liver troubles, female complaints, even when the diseases having been standing for many years, the most stubborn cases will yield. Price 60 cents per box. For sale by Ormond & Walsh. The Canada Chemical Company will forfeit $10 for any case that these pills do not help.

Dr. Clarke's Sure Cure for Catarrh, and Dr. Clarke's Sure Cure for Eczema same price. $10 will be paid for any case they will not permanently cure.

THE BOER PRISONERS ON DARRELL'S ISLAND

They Have Local Government of Their Own and Are Well Treated.

Hardships Are Few and Many Amusements Are Afforded.

Their Skill in Making Toys to Sell as Souvenirs.

Hamilton, Bermuda, Nov. 13.—On Darrell's island, one of the loveliest islets of the beautiful Bermuda group, the British government has established a camp of 800 Boer prisoners of war.

Darrell's island is a low-lying splinter of land a mile away from Hamilton. It is about a mile long and less than a quarter as broad at its greatest expanse. Its shores are varied, the bright tropical waves washing, here a gentle beach, and there an abrupt group of rocks. Rich shaded woodlands alternate with open spaces. There is more variety in that bit of land than the South Africanders would find in many a hundred miles of their own country. Perhaps that was one of the reasons for their great depression when they first landed. The contrast between the broad sweep of their own veldts and the little wave-pent prison home, jewel as it was, was too much for their spirits. But soon it was borne in upon them that they were going to have a comfortable, if not a variegated life. What pleased them still more was the discovery that, within the limits of their island they were free to do as they pleased; that, except for certain broad restrictions, they could establish a government of their own. This they did, and at the time when I visited them their "laager" was an illustration of how happy prisoners of war can be.

"When I visited them" sounds very very simple, but it wasn't as easy as it sounds. The British prison authorities are very stringent in their conduct of the island settlement. A curious civilian who rowed past the line of guard buoys recently was shot in the hand by a watchful sentry. Another who gained access to the island by pretending to be a provision contractor was put under arrest after he had been there a quarter of an hour, and spent some time in the guard house. I believe I am the only civilian who has had free run of the island, and when the commanding officer who escorted me was called from my side for a moment a sentry promptly jammed his bayonet against the third button of my waistcoat and demanded my pedigree.

To the visitor there is little about Darrell's island that suggests a prison. But for the restrictions against visitors and the wire lattices that shut off the landing it would be taken for an ordinary encampment. The Boers live in big bell tents, seven to a tent, set in groves of cedar and mangrove.

From cock-crow to curfew life in the laager is one round of bustle and activity. As the day dawns the burghers turn out, and over their own camp fires boil hot coffee, which they drink black and strong enough to kill a man with sensitive nerves. Two hours later they answer to roll call, and the routine of the day begins. At 6.30 the contractor's boat streams to the dock and unloads the daily supplies of bread, meat and vegetables that are served out to the burghers for food. Each man in turn passes before the from gates that bar the enclosure—gates of the wire entanglement that serve to divide the Boer laager from the guards' camp—and there receives his rations for the day, then returns to quarters to prepare breakfast. This meal, eaten usually at 7, consists mainly of coffee and graham bread. Those of the prisoners who are fortunate enough to own chickens boil eggs; others, whose piscatorial ambitions have been rewarded by a fortunate catch, fry fish caught the previous day, and others yet, who are more fortunate with the world's goods than their comrades, purchase such delicacies as their appetites dictate from the canteen.

Breakfast over, camp fatigues are the order of the day. Tents are cleared of bedding and aired, and everything is put in good order. Then the men scatter to various exercises, amusements and duties—some wash their clothing or bedding, or bathe in the warm ocean. Others angle from the rocks for the gay-hued fish, some of which are more beautiful than edible. The mechanically inclined—and these are many—apply themselves to their lathes and turn out all sorts of toys, tools and implements. The Boer is as ingenious as a down East Yankee, and almost as fond of tinkering. Some of the little models of wagons, agricultural machines, artillery and railroad trains turned out by the prisoners are marvels of ingenuity and beauty. These, together with napkin rings, paper knives, walking sticks, penholders and other knickknacks, they send to the main land to be sold to tourists. The proceeds of these sales go to buy tobacco and dainties for the table. One burgher has succeeded with no other material than what he was able to get in the canteen, which is a sort of general country store, in producing a very fair billiard table, on which many hard contested games are played for such stakes as pocket knives, fishbones or eggs.

The younger men spend the morning at the camp school, where both English and Dutch are taught, and where they acquire a rough and ready tuition in the three R's. Here as many as fifty pupils form a class, which is held either out in the open or in a large marquee, where tables and forms and a blackboard are set.

The noon hour is the dinner hour, when the prisoners busy themselves cooking and consuming the meat and vegetables they have received as rations earlier in the day. Special facilities to cook food have been afforded those of the burghers who wish to avail themselves of the field kitchens, and here they carry so much of their allowance of coal and timber as will serve to cook their meals. The meal over, the men wash their pans in an adjoining stream of hot water, the waste that the condensers eject in the process of producing the fresh water, which, in times of drought is served, to the men.

Noonday meal over, the prisoners who care to volunteer to do work outside of the laager go under guard to the duty assigned them, and, during my trip, I found five or six laying the brick foundations for one of the big water condensers already referred to. Most of the burghers, however, prefer to spend the afternoon in sports. Some play cricket at low tide on the driedout mango swamps. Others play a sort of modified foot ball. Contests of strength and speed are popular, but the home made billiard table and the tennis court are the centers of amusement. The tennis court was made by the prisoners, after balls, racket and a net had been sent by the "Association for Providing Amusement to the Boer Prisoners of War." They have taken to the game with delight, and there is great rivalry among them. One of the best "double" teams is made up of little Piet Cronje, the 15-year-old cousin of the gallant defender of Paardeburg, and Lieutenant Vandeventer, the shortest and tallest prisoners in camp. The lieutenant stands six feet six and his partner is four feet six. On the anniversary of the birthday of Queen Wilhelmina of Holland a field day was held, with contests in running, jumping, obstacle racing, weight throwing, ball and tennis, besides an exhibit of the products of the laager.

When dusk sets in the prisoners gather once again around the field kitchens and their own campfires and make coffee to take the last meal of the day, graham bread, over which the more fortunate spread butter or such preserves as they can get from the canteen, and eggs or fish for the rich chicken owners and the lucky anglers. There is a singing class in the evening, and every night a church service in Dutch, conducted by a chaplain, who came voluntarily from South Africa to join his brothers in exile.

Every night before going to bed the laager rises its 800 voices in one of the hymns or psalms of their native veldts, and the cadence of their voices, bore across the quiet waters, silences the gayeties of the hotel dwellers on the mainland a mile away, who pause to listen to the solemn music. There are cards, checkers and chess for those who want them in the 'library' and the school tents. When 'taps' has sounded the burghers turn in either in their beds or in hammocks strung from the trees.

The government of the Boer laager is strictly a local government, conducted by burghers duly elected by the men, so that the British authorities in no way exercise control. In fact none of the sentries of the Warwickshire regiment, that is, acting as a guard, ever enters the inclosure. A few attempts at escape have been made, but the Boers themselves discourage these. The prisoners make few complaints; such as are made are presented by the chosen Boer officials. These come officially to the British authorities who give them prompt and careful consideration. The relations between the imprisoned Boers and their British jailers are inspired by respect and consideration on both sides.

NO INQUEST.

Body Found in Well Buried Without Identity Being Discovered

Coroner Gray decided yesterday that no inquest was necessary on the body found in a well in Otonabee and issued a certificate for burial. There appears no doubt that the man committed suicide. Who he was is not ascertained.

Mr. Timothy Coughlin of Ashburnham, who has been working in Otonabee, states that the body is that of a tramp whom he saw in the neighborhood about a month ago. There was an old man, John Hooper, called "Silent John" living a kind of hermit life in the neighborhood. He used to sleep and eat in barns and was weak-minded. This man has disappeared, and some of the neighbors thought the thought the body might be his, but the general impression is that it is that of a younger person.

MEDITERRANEAN FLEET

The Immense Fleets Which the Powers Maintain in the East

London, Nov. 13.—The British fleet in the Mediterranean has for many years had a strength of forty-three war vessels, exclusive of torpedo boats. The English have assumed that this fleet was equal to the squadron of the several Mediterranean Powers, but a year ago H. W. Wilson, the English naval expert, contended that the French Mediterranean squadron was in fighting power as strong as the British Mediterranean squadron. Last year the British squadron was strengthened at the request of Rear Admiral Lord Charles Beresford, and consists of seven first class battleships, seven first class cruisers, and forty-two other war vessels, including gunboats, torpedo boats and torpedo boat destroyers."

At the same date France had in the Mediterranean twenty-two war vessels, exclusive of gunboats, torpedo boats and torpedo boat destroyers. Austria had nearly as many, but of lower grade; Russia three, the United States three and Italy fourteen, not including coast defence vessels. But Russia has in the Black Sea a formidable fleet, which, in case of war, might be thrown against Constantinople. Germany could concentrate a powerful squadron in Mediterranean waters on short notice, and the British fleet might be reinforced from the reserve channel squadron or from the East Indies squadron, which would have access to the Mediterranean by way of the Red Sea and the Suez Canal.

Turkey has a navy of probably twenty effective war vessels, but none of a type to meet the modern battleships and cruisers of the French squadron. Greece has a small fleet, and Spain only a few effective warships.

Bride Thirteen Groom Seventeen

White Plains, N. Y., Nov. 12—The hamlet of Armonk in the northern part of West Chester county is excited over the announcement to-day of the marriage of Clara Londen, 13 years old, a school girl there, to Thomas Keeler, not yet 17, of Port Chester. The father of the bridegroom has begun proceedings to have the marriage annulled, because Thomas is under age.

The young man has left his father's home, and is living with his bride at her father's house. He declares he will not give up his wife. He was found sitting on a log with his bride playing a harmonica while she was singing: "I can't tell why I love you, but I do." Not far away the father-in-law was sawing wood.

AT THE MARRIAGE.

The couple were married at Armonk on Oct. 29 last by Justice of the Peace William Haviland. The witnesses were the Justice's wife and William B. Rogers. The marriage record shows that the girl gave her age as 15, while Thomas said he was eighteen. Young Mrs. Keeler admits, however, that she is not 14, but is not sorry she is married. The bride and bridegroom are cousins. Mr. Londen, the bride's father, is a farmer, and formerly lived near the Keelers. Justice Haviland declares that the couple gave the age under which the law allowed him to marry them, and that the bride's parents were present at the wedding, and made no objection to the ceremony.

Thomas, when told of his father's determination to annul the marriage, said: "My father shall not separate us unless it is over my dead body. I shall fight with my fists to protect her, as I love my wife dearly."

"Yes, and I love Tommy too," chimed in the girl, "and nobody shall part us."

Young Mrs. Keeler is a blonde and very short. Until Aug. 18 last she attended the village school. She wears short dresses and her hair hangs down her back. The bridegroom intends to make his home with his father-in-law until he finds something to do. He says he will probably be a farmer.

QUEEN ALEXANDER

To Wear a Diamond Worth $700,000—By Order of the King

London, Nov. 12.—Queen Alexandra will wear the famous Koh-I-Nor diamond at the coronation ceremony. King Edward has decided to have the jewel mounted in the Queen's crown for that occasion.

Koh-I-Nor, ("Mountain of Light), a diamond once called the "Great Mogul," was, according to Indian tradition, obtained before the Christian era, from one of the mines of Golconda. At the beginning of the Christian era it passed to the successive sovereigns of Central India and in the early part of the 14th century, it was added to the treasures of Delhi by the monarch Alauddin. It belonged in the seventeenth century to Aurungzebe, the Great. The Shah Jihair sent it to Hortensio Borjio to be cut, but the Venetian lapidary reduced it from 793-5-8 carats to 186, and left it dull and lustreless. It next passed into the hands of Aurungzebe's great-grandson, who hid it in his turban. Nadir Shah invited the possessor to a feast and insisted on exchanging turbans "to cement their love," and thus it fell into Nadir's hands, who gave it the name of "Koh-I-noor." After the assassination of Nadir it passed into the hands of Ahmed Shah, founder of the Cabul dynasty; it was then extorted from Shah Shujah, by his conqueror, Runjeet Singh, who wore it set in a bracelet. After the murder of Shu Singh, it was deposited in the Lahore treasury and after the annexation of the Punjaub, was presented by the East India Company, to Queen Victoria, July 3rd, 1850. The gem was recut in 1852 and though reduced to 106 carats, is supposed to be worth $7,000,000. There is another diamond of the same name belonging to the Shah of Persia.

It is a popular misconception to suppose that the Koh-I-noor is the most precious diamond in the world. The Pitt diamond, owned by Mr. Pitt, Governor of Madras, is worth $1,000,000. A splendid diamond found in Brazil is called "Star of the South." It weighs 254 1-2 carats. The King of Portugal also owns a famous diamond from Brazil. If genuine, its value should be $28,000,000, as it weighs 1,680 grains.

Portuguese Gunboat Takes Radical Step for Alleged Offence

London, Nov. 13.—The Exchange Telegraph Company has received a dispatch from Lisbon announcing that a Portuguese gunboat has seized the American schooner Nettie and Lottie at Horta, Island of Fayal, the Azores for clandestinely conveying six emigrants who were trying to avoid military service.

COLE YOUNGER GREAT DESPERADO

Has Been Offered a Police Captaincy but Refused.

REMAINS CLERK IN GROCERY

Life of Robber and Murderer Unsurpassed in Criminal Annals—A Life Story That Is Stranger Than Fiction.

Minneapolis, Minn., Nov. 13. — Cole Younger, the famous bandit and a paroled prisoner after serving twenty-six years of a life sentence in the Minnesota penitentiary, has been selected by the mayor of Minneapolis as a fit person to perform police duty. A few days ago Mayor Ames offered Cole Younger the position of a captain of police on the Minneapolis police force. This offer was made in earnest and has been considered in such a spirit by the man who with his brother James and others was convicted of the participation in the tragedy at Northfield, Minn., years ago.

The information in regard to the action of the mayor of Minneapolis in the matter was brought to public notice by the friends of the paroled prisoner. Upon receiving it he at once communicated with those in the twin cities who were largely instrumental in securing the passage of the bill at the session of the last legislature whereby it was possible for a lifer prisoner to be paroled.

WILL REFUSE THE POST

Following the advice of his friends, the famous criminal will refuse the position of captain of police offered him by the chief executive of Minneapolis. He says:

"While appreciating the kind intention of Mayor Ames, I believe that the position offered me would entail too much notoriety. I desire to lead a quiet life. I do not wish to bring myself before the public gaze. I fully realize my position and am desirous of doing that which will tend to uphold the contention of those who are responsible for obtaining freedom for me after many years of servitude. Therefore I cannot accept the position tendered me."

Just why the offer was made cannot be ascertained at the present time, as Mayor Ames is absent from the city. Warden Wolfer of the Stillwater prison is also away and apart from the fact that Cole Younger himself made the matter public to his friends in Minneapolis no further information can be had at the present time.

Since his release from prison Cole Younger has been far from well, but at the same time he has tried to perform the duty to which he was assigned when released on parole. Thus far his conduct has been beyond reproach.

CAREER ONE OF AUDACITY.

Cole Young is a man whose name is known from one shore of this country to the other as one of the most daring desperadoes America has produced. His criminal career, well under way before he was out of his teens, is a record of audacity and of a reckless disregard of the value of his own life and that of others. It is a record of the life of a man great in his own conceptions, even though those conceptions were distorted and malevolent.

Thomas Colleman Younger was a youth of 17 years when a band of "jayhawkers," as the semiorganised gangs were called who plundered friends and foes alike in the days of the civil war, burned his father's house in Missouri and reduced the family to ruin. That was the last day of peace for Cole Younger. The gang had come from Kansas—Kansas must suffer. Such was the logic, rough and crude, which dominated his first step along the path which led to his later crime and terrorisation. When Quantrell, the famous guerrilla, organised a retaliatory raid into Kansas this 17 year-old lad was his right-hand man, advising, working, fighting. That raid left the town of Lawrence a heap of smoking ruins and 200 peaceful citizens were left dead on the ashes of their homes to tell the tale of the vindictiveness of Quantrell and Younger.

BECOMES A DESPERADO.

Until the close of the civil war Younger divided his time between raids made by the remnants of Quantrell's band, scattered after the death of their leader in the famous Kentucky raid, and in commissions for the confederate army, which, although it regarded him as more of a bandit than a soldier, recognised his courage and his antipathy for the north. When Lee surrendered and he went back to his father's state he found father and mother slain and not a vestige left of the home in which he had spent his early years.

With no occupation to which he could turn his hand, with the natural lust for food and cruelty only whetted by his three years of guerrilla brutality and with a price on his life, Younger became a desperado. He hid with several of his old fellows, all men with names notorious from their connection with Quantrell, and became one of the leaders of the Jesse James band.

To detail the robberies, the murders, the midnight attacks and the immeasurable cruelty exhibited by the James Younger band would be to relate the history of crime for three decades in Missouri and adjacent states. In all this Cole Younger was a leader and one incident may show the nature of the man.

Younger went to Bartrap, La.; to race a fine horse he owned against an animal owned by a wealthy planter. The stakes were $1,000 a side. As the horses swung into the home stretch a woman threw a red shawl over her head. This frightened Younger's horse and the animal shied, thus losing the race. He claimed a foul, but it was denied. Younger immediately drew a revolver and shot the stakeholder dead in crowded paddock, faced the crowd and shooting five men dead before he reached his horse got away with the money in safety.

BANDITS FINALLY CAPTURED

The last robbery, as a result of which the gang was broken up, was in Northfield, Minn. The cashier refused to open the bank vault, although wounded and although he knew that he would be killed if he did not. This delay brought all the citizens upon them, for it was broad daylight and though they got away from the town a posse was in close pursuit. Over 2,000 men organized in posse in near-by-towns and villages and the gang was completely surrounded. It decided to separate. The James brothers broke through the cordon and made their way to Mexico. The Younger brothers also broke through, but were badly wounded. Two days later they were surrounded and captured. They were tried and sent to prison.

ANDERSON'S CAMPAIGN OPENED

Mr. Blezard was There to Explain How He Was Not "Thrown Down."

Mr. William Anderson, the Liberal candidate in East Peterborough, held his final meeting of the campaign in the Town Hall, Westwood, on Monday evening.

Mr. Anderson complained of illness and only spoke a short time. He briefly reviewed his own record as councillor, reeve and warden and claimed preference because, like Mr. Blezard, he was a farmer and East Peterborough was above everything an agricultural riding.

Mr. Thomas Blezard, M.P.P., was next introduced. He said that he felt a warm interest in Mr. Anderson's success. He had nominated him and was sure he would be elected. He would work hard to have him elected. It was not so that Mr. Stratton had used his influence to have him "turned down." The convention at Norwood was conducted just as he wanted it to be conducted. Ever since Mr. Stratton entered Parliament they had worked harmoniously together. If he had wanted the nomination he could have had it. It was well known eight years ago that he wanted to retire and four years ago the nomination was in a way forced upon him. Mr. Blezard repeated that he was not "turned down" and eulogized Mr. Anderson and Mr. Stratton.

Hon. J. R. Stratton followed Mr. Blezard and also denied the charge of "turning down." He spoke at some length defending the Government and attacking the Opposition with his usual vigor.

Owing to the bad weather the attendance was not so large as it might have been. Mr. John Harrison of Asphodel, occupied the chair.

NOVEMBER REPORT OF ONTARIO'S CROPS

Interesting Document from the Bureau of Industries.

GREAT DECREASE IN FALL WHEAT

The Extent of the Potato Rot—A Poor Season for Fruit—Pastures in Good Condition and Much Fine

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—Following is the report of the Ontario Bureau of Industries for the crops of the Province, under date of November 1st. It contains the final estimates of the yields of crops, based on actual threshing results returned by over 2,000 correspondents. Toronto, November 11th, 1901. C. C. James, secretary.

Fall Wheat: The crop is a good deal below the average from various causes. In the west the ravages of the Hessian fly did great injury, and much of the surviving grain was light in weight on account of the extreme heat and drouth of June and July. Rust, cockle and chess are also mentioned as among the season's drawbacks, and in some western localities the grain was spoiled by wet before it could be harvested. Reports from the eastern section—which is free from the Hessian fly—are somewhat more favorable, especially as regards the Ottawa valley and East Midland counties, where the crop was a fair one. The principal causes of injury being the excessive early rains and the drouth before harvest, owing to which much of the grain is shrunken. There has been no noticeable damage from frost but a devastating hail storm destroyed a large area of grain in Carleton county.

The New Fall Wheat: There has been a very considerable and well nigh universal decrease in the acreage devoted to fall wheat, owing to the ravages of the Hessian fly. In order to secure the new crop against the pest, sowing has been deferred by many farmers to a later period than usual. While the bulk of the seeding was done during the first three weeks of September, a large number postponed the work until the following month. The conditions of the ground was generally good, although dry in many localities, and where the young plants are visible they present as a rule a healthy appearance. Rain, however, is badly needed in some neighborhoods. In several western counties, more especially in those bordering on Lake Erie, the earlier sown wheat has been attacked by the Hessian fly which occasioned much injury. The principal varieties of fall wheat sown were Dawson's Golden Chaff, Red Clawson and Gennessee Giant.

Spring Wheat: But little spring wheat was grown this year in the western part of the Province, and where cultivated, the crop was a light one owing to the same causes as have injured other cereals. The yield in the eastern section was fair in most neighborhoods, but the grain was frequently small and shrivelled owing to the drouth.

Barley: Reports as to the barley crop are very variable. It suffered somewhat from the Hessian fly, and to a greater extent from the drouth which resulted in premature ripening rendering the grain light and the straw short. There is considerable difference in the sample which many describe as bright in color, while, in other neighborhoods, it is badly colored and of a low grade. The yield will be a good deal under the average.

Oats: The oat crop will be considerably below the average. It was unfavorably affected especially in low-lying ground by the heavy rains in the spring, and injured by the extreme heat of midsummer, and, as a consequence, much of it is light in the grain with short straw. The early sown crops as a rule yield much better than those sown late in the season. In some cases injury was caused by rust. This crop appears to have done slightly better in the Lake Erie and East Midland districts than elsewhere.

Rye: This crop is not extensively grown but appears to have done better than the other cereals, the yield being generally fair though somewhat light in grain in many localities owing to drouth.

Peas: Owing to the ravages of the Pea bug in past years, a much smaller area was devoted to this crop than usual, and the injury done by the pest, together with the damage done by dry weather, have resulted in a small yield. Reports vary little as to locality, being generally unsatisfactory as regards the ordinary varieties. Grass peas, however, which have been largely raised in many neighborhoods, have as a rule done well.

Corn: The season was, on the whole a favorable one for corn, notwithstanding the drawbacks of cold, wet weather in the spring and subsequent drouth. The yield has been large wherever this crop has grown and the quality generally good both for husking and fodder purposes. In but few localities are there any losses by frost reported, the crop having as a rule, been saved in good condition, though there are exceptional cases of damage by smut.

Beans: Beans are on the whole a fairly good crop, though owing to dry weather, the yield was a good deal decreased in many parts, the pods not being well filled.

Buckwheat: The yield and quality of buckwheat appears to have varied considerably, and the general result will be about an average. The crop has generally been well harvested though in some places injured by rains.

Clover Seed: Both red and alsike clover have done well, the yield of seed being unusually good. The stalks are generally short but the heads well filled and the seed plump. The drouth is responsible for a shortage in some quarters, while the midge has affected the crop injuriously in a small percentage of instances. Very little damage was occasioned by frost.

Tobacco: Tobacco growing appears to be on the decline, as only very few correspondents report any crop in their neighborhoods. Where mention is made of it, it appears to have matured well, and to have escaped serious injury, except in a few instances.

Potatoes: The reports of correspondents as to the potato crop are very variable. In the eastern section the yield is a light one, in more neighborhoods a great proportion having been destroyed by rot, especially on clay soils and low lying lands. More favorable accounts come from the west where this kind of disease is not nearly so prevalent. In this part of the Province, late sown potatoes have generally yielded well, while those put in early in the season

THE BOERS GATHERING IN EAST ORANGE COLONY

General De Wet Will Lead the Collecting Boer Force in the Orange Colony

THE BRITISH WILL MOVE TO ATTACK HIM

Anti-British Meetings in Germany Pass Resolutions of Protest—The Fate of the Rebel

London, Nov. 12.—Lord Kitchener, in a despatch from Pretoria, dated Monday, Nov. 11, presents his weekly report and incidentally locates Gen. De Wet in the northeastern part of the Orange River Colony. He says the Boers have recently been collecting under his leadership and that the British are now moving to disperse them. Lord Kitchener gives the Boer casualties since November 4th as 63 killed, 105 wounded, 104 captured, and 45 surrendered.

ANTI-BRITISH MEETINGS.

London, Nov. 12.—According to the correspondent of the Daily Mail at Cradock, Lord Kitchener has ordered the summary execution of all Boers wearing khaki uniforms. The action of Colonel Gorringe some days ago is thus duly explained.

INSTIGATING MEETINGS.

Berlin, Nov. 12.—The object of the visit of Dr. Leyds and other Transvaal delegates to this city is surmised to be the instigation of Anti-British meetings. Meetings to protest against the tenor of Mr. Chamberlain's speech at Edinburgh have been held at Leipzig and other towns recently, at which resolutions were adopted and forwarded to Chancellor Von Buelow.

ACCORDING TO SCRIPTURE

Kimberly, Nov. 11.—A Dutch Minister at Mafeking, the Rev. David Wilcocks, was recently convicted of inciting to rebellion in his preaching and sentenced to a year's imprisonment. The accused admitted that he had prayed for Cronje on the direction of the Scripture, which says, "Pray for your enemies."

THE FATE OF THE REBEL.

Vryburg, Nov. 12.—Twenty-one Cape rebels were sentenced by court martial for high treason. Two were sentenced to death, and were shot at daybreak yesterday morning. Of the rest six were sentenced to penal servitude for life, eight to twenty years' penal servitude, one to ten years, and two to five years. Another was sentenced to five years' imprisonment, and to pay a fine of £500.

BENSON'S COSTLY STAND.

London, Nov. 12—Additional casualty lists cabled from South Africa bring the totals in the attack on Colonel Benson's rearguard up to 63 officer and men killed, and 213 wounded. The list includes the name of Lieut.-Col Doran, who was severely wounded.

Would Invade England

Paris, Nov. 12.—Major McBride, who commanded the Irish Brigade in the Transvaal, was to-day made the recipient of a sword of honor and a congratulatory address. The presentation was made by Mr. O'Leary, on behalf of the Irishmen.

In reply to the several addresses read to him from the various gaelic societies, in London and elsewhere, the Mayor said that the next time he faced England he hoped to be on English soil. The greatest honor, he said, was the presence of Mr. O'Leary, who was fired by the spirit that animated Fitzgerald, Emmett, and Wolf Tone. "Now is the time for the Irish to act," he declared. "England was never weaker than she is now." The rottenness of the English army has been shown by the South African operations and the navy would be proven equally incapable when the time came. The emigration which was yearly exhausting Ireland must be stopped.

A toast was then enthusiastically honored to "France, ever Ireland's friend and refuge." Many Frenchmen were present, including Count Dalton and other descendants of French nobility.

The address presented to Major McBride is a splendid specimen of Irish illumination. In the corners are the arms of the four provinces of Ireland. It also bears a portrait of Major McBride and scenes at the Battles of Colenso, where the Irish captured British guns, Modderspruit, and Spion Kop. McBride was also given a copy of the Livre d'Or of the Transvaal he being the third recipient thereof.

Colombian War Ended

New York, Nov. 12.—A special to the Herald from Bogota, Colombia, says: "The Colombian Government has accepted the preferred mediation of Chili to settle the trouble between this republic and Venezuela. In behalf of his Government, Señor Herboso cabled to President Castro the same offer. Acting President Marroquin has replied to the resolution of the Pan-American Congress, which appealed to Colombia to have a peaceful settlement of the difficulties with President Castro's Government. Dr. Marroquin said in reply that Colombia desires to have an amicable settlement with Venezuela.

"The Colombian Government prefers to be on cordial terms with Venezuela, and its grievances are entirely against President Castro's Government. As a protection Colombia now has 10,000 newly armed soldiers on the Venezuelan frontier.

"The Colombian Minister of Foreign Affairs to-day said in an interview that the Ecuadorian Government has officially announced that it would preserve neutrality in reference to the internal conflict in Colombia, and would also adopt the same attitude in case of Colombia becoming involved in an international war."

PETERBOROUGH, NOVEMBER 13, 1901

THE NEXT GOVERNOR GENERAL

When Lord Minto finishes his term as Governor-General, it is not at all probable that he will desire any extension of it, and so discussion naturally comes about as to his successor.

While it is true that the Colonies have not a voice in the selection of their Governors, it is fair to suppose that the Imperial Government chooses men for these positions with a view to their acceptability to the Colonial people.

It is usual to choose for Colonial Governors men who have sat in the House of Lords, and who may thus be supposed to have practical knowledge of the relationship between the Colonies and the Throne and the Colonial policy of the Home Government.

Canada as a colony is peculiarly circumstanced in having in the Peerage men who have made their fortunes and spent most of their lives within its borders in touch with the people, close observers of the public opinion, and knowing the characteristics of its diversified population. If there could be found in the House of Lords a Canadian of independent means, lofty aims, a high sense of justice, firmness of purpose, strength of will, and with a diplomatic training, is it too much to say that the selection of such a man to represent the Sovereign in Canada would meet with universal approval?

The very contemplation of such a selection brings into view the name of Lord Strathcona, the greatest of all Canadians, an Imperialist of unyielding purpose, a man of generous views, conciliatory disposition, and having in the truest sense the instincts that are a prerequisite in ideal diplomacy, while he has not been in Canadian politics so ardent a partizan as to be anything but fair-minded.

That the selection of Lord Strathcona for the Governor-Generalship of Canada would be acclaimed by the people of all classes, of all creeds, and all shades of political opinion, there can be no shadow of doubt.

Canadians are more than proud of Lord Strathcona. He stands on a pinnacle amongst all the philanthropists of our country and our age. His patriotism is of so exalted a kind as to have attracted the attention of the whole world, and he is a man of the people, whose greatness and preferment have never spoiled that beautiful modesty which almost invariably adorns the character of truly great men, for truly great men are never spoiled, but rather improved by preferment.

If Lord Strathcona could be prevailed upon to accept the Governorship of Canada, it would round off a career among the most magnificent ever achieved by a Canadian; would bring satisfaction to all people in Canada, and reflect upon the wisdom of the King's advisers.—Montreal Star.

An Interesting Story

Some twelve or thirteen years ago, in the thriving City of London, Canada, a man named Cottam kept a bird store; and his birds were everywhere noted for their invariable health and song. "On what do you feed your birds?" was a question frequently asked. An explanation always resulted in the visitor taking away a pound or two of "the very same seed you feed to your own birds." Once tried, the mixture was always wanted. At length the trade for seed outgrew the trade for birds, and instead of the seed being an incident of the bird trade, the birds became an incident of the seed trade.

That consumers could be served more promptly it became necessary to tie up a great many parcels in advance, each containing one pound of the very same mixture which kept Cottam's birds in such perfect condition. After a while, to save string and time and to make a neater packet, cartons with self-fastening ends were substituted for paper bags, and enveloped in handsomely lithographed labels. The store once ample for its trade, became too small, and additional rooms had to be secured and more hands employed. It was thought by some that one or two persons working constantly could supply the seed needed for all the birds in America; but first one and then another extra person had to be engaged, until the new quarters became too small. The business was then moved into another building, of which only one-fifth of the room was needed at that time, and it was thought part would have to be sub-let. But the trade expanded so rapidly that soon it became unnecessary to re-let, and before long the new warehouse, big as it appeared at first, was fully occupied. Nor was it long before still more room had to be obtained. a four story building next door was secured, doors were put in to connect the two, and to-day a total floor area is devoted to the preparation and packing of The Cottam Bird Foods the largest in the world used by any one firm for a like purpose.

From the Atlantic to the Pacific, from the Gulf of Mexico to the most northerly post of the Hudson Bay Company, The Cottam Bird Foods are to be obtained; but no matter where or from whom you buy it, you can always rely on getting the very same quality of goods which years ago made a name for itself by keeping Cottam's birds in such grand health and song, and upon the merits of which has since been built up a business covering the whole country.

Deafness is Curable

Sufferers from impaired hearing will be glad to know that their affliction is probably not due to any organic defect in the ear, but results probably from a thickening of the lining of the middle ear caused by catarrhal inflammation. Hundreds of perfect recoveries as a result of the inhalation of Catarrhozone are reported and on the highest authority we recommend this treatment to our readers. Catarrhozone quickly restores lost hearing, and its efficiency is placed beyond dispute by the case of Mr. Fenall of St. Thomas, who recovered perfect hearing by using Catarrhozone, after years of deafness. Price $1. At Druggists or by mail, from Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

IT MAKES WOMEN HAPPY.

"I had been a sufferer for many years from nervousness with all its symptoms and complications," writes Mrs. O. N. Fisher, of 1861 Lexington Ave., New York, N. Y. "I was constantly going to see a physician or purchasing medicine. My husband at last induced me to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. After taking one bottle and following your advice I was so encouraged that I took five more bottles of 'Favorite Prescription.' I continued taking it and felt that I was improving faster than at first. I am not now cross and irritable, and I have a good color in my face; have also gained ten pounds in weight and one thousand pounds of comfort, for I am a new woman once more, and your advice and your 'Favorite Prescription' is the cause of it."

EVERYBODY READS THE TIMES

A Few Pointers That Advertisers Would Do Well to Remember.

Josh Billings: "I luv a rooster for two things—one is the crow that is in him and the other is the spurs that air on him to bak up his crow with."

The Times has become a popular paper, not only amongst the people of the town and Ashburnham, but also amongst the residents of the surrounding towns and villages.

Mr. G. B. Hilliard, of Lakefield, says the Times is regarded in Lakefield as the brightest paper that comes to that burg, and is read by very many in the village.

Wm. O'Brien, the genial clerk of Douro, who has long been a subscriber to the daily edition, says that the Times is the popular paper in that township, 95 per cent. of the people being readers. He hopes that it may long keep up its onward pace.

Mr. Wm. Gallen, Reeve of Burleigh and Anstruther, states that the whole back country reads the Times, and regard the paper as one of the very best. He says that it is always full of good things.

Mr. P. P. Young, Young's Point, says everybody reads the Times in that locality. It is admirably conducted.

Mr. James Stevenson, ex-M.P., says the Times is the brightest and best newspaper published in Peterborough.

Commodore Calcutt says he would sooner miss his breakfast than miss getting the Times. It is a famous appetizer only equalled by Calcutt's celebrated ale.

Mr. J. B. Thornton, Omemee, says the Times is very popular in that village and is widely read.

Rev. Mr. Bastow thinks the Times deserves great credit for its progressive spirit. It is up-to-date, giving all the news up to four o'clock each morning. North Smith, brought us in a couple of Recently Mr. Sage and another of clubs for the Weekly Times of 30 names. Here are 30 names from one section of Smith, that are constant readers of the Times.

Mr. Harry Garbutt, Reeve of Smith, says that the Times is the popular paper in that locality.

Mr. James Baptie, Springville, gives similar evidence, and says you can hardly go into a house in his locality that the Times is not present.

Mr. Pearson, the great horse buyer, of Montreal, told the Times the other day that he has better results from the advertisement in the Times than from any other paper. He says he finds the Times is read by almost everybody in the district. He knows this, for almost every horse he buys is the product of the Times advertisement.

Mr. T. Donaldson, Cavan, member of the Counties' Council of Northumberland and Durham, says that the Times is very popular in Cavan.

Mr. James Chambers, Manvers, bears similar testimony in regard to Manvers Township.

David Healy says that in Asphodel, Hastings and Norwood, everybody literally reads the Times.

Dr. Bingham, the popular city Medical Health Officer, missed his Times the other morning, and came to the office for a copy. He said he was not feeling well, and wondered what was the matter, until he remembered he had not had his Times.

The above are a few of the many evidences we have in our possession of the high regard in which this great family journal is held by the people. Merchants and other advertisers should remember that hundreds upon hundreds of families throughout the town and country cannot be reached by any other way except through the Times.

Lindsay Post.—Mr. Dougall Robertson, of the Scotch Line, Verulam, recently sold eight hogs to Mr. J. Ball, drover of Dunsford, and realized $134.50 on the lot. The animals were monsters, being only six months old.

SECOND COUSINS AND SWIMMING

SHORT STORY FOR THE DAY.

It is rather interesting about John and June. They met for the first time in July, and now June is the mistress of John's house and from their demeanor you'd think they were ready to celebrate a wooden wedding at least. But it all came about in the most natural manner possible.

John had once looked like a young Zulu, aged 7. His skin was tanned to the proper Zulu color because while attending the district school in the country in one of the northern states he had been in swimming on an average of about three times a day. The swimming privileges, though utilised to the utmost by him and his companions, were far, very far, from the best. They consisted of deep "holes" in a half dried up creek which ran near the schoolhouse and became instantly muddied as the boys went in, and on great occasions of the somewhat deeper but hardly less muddy streams a mile or two away on either side, which, black and stagnant, drifted themselves into the great river to mingle with the blue.

Neither in pool, pond nor river was there anything upholding to the swimmer. He was sustained by mere boyish pluck and muscularity. Sometimes he sank exhausted and became entangled among the weeds at the bottom; then his comrades pulled him out and laid him upon the bank and he got better. Boys generally get better.

Later, because of family conditions, he was taken to a town beside the great blue river, the St. Clair, and there among another set of companions he learned another style of performance in the water. He learned to climb to the yardarms of the hundreds of lake sailing vessels moored for the moment and thence dive fifty feet downward into water swirling in fierce eddies, to be sucked below and then appear again tossed upward away but joyous and triumphant in his rioting with one of the three elements. He learned to swim the sheer mile across to the Canadian shore. He was one of the many thousands of country boys who had learned to swim almost as a duck does in the non-bearing soft water of the interior of the country.

And so he grew and swam until he attained to manhood, materially successful manhood, too, and until he became suddenly, by accident, the guest of a relation to one of the famous seaside resorts of the Massachusetts coast. There was much surf bathing going on and, looking upon the incoming and roaring surf wherein were disporting fair women and fine men, he flinched a little and wondered much.

I wish I could swim in such water as that, he thought, and swim as do those fellows out beyond the life raft or whatever they call it. There are girls among them too. They are like mermaids.

He was tempted, but there was a sea on and the waves were rolling higher than any he had ever looked upon before and he concluded that the ocean would be too much for him. Anyhow, he would wait awhile before he ventured in.

While walking along the beach with his aunt that afternoon she, who knew of his aquatic feats at home, asked him why he didn't go in.

"Well, it isn't quite like the old St. Clair river. The waves were not so high there, there is no tide to suck you in or out, and the shore isn't all on beamside. I'll go in, though, pretty soon, coming down early in the morning when the old thing is more level."

But morning after morning passed and he did not enter the water. He had found something more attractive than the sea. His aunt had learned that a guest at the same big seaside resort was a little citified lady, a second cousin whom he had never seen and who at their first meeting enthralled the young man from the middle west village so completely that the general tenor of his situation was simply abject. Funston's exploit in the Philippines wasn't in it for neatness and completeness. He was her slave in shackles, not heavy shackles, for him, it is true, but strong as any ever forged by any smith, from Tubal-Cain or Vulcan down.

This fascinating young lady of 22 was distinctly a belle at the hotel, owing to a variegated collection of admirers, but she did not take part in the bathing, and so her big western cousin of 25 found no little time to be in her charming company. He was easy prey for such as she, but, to tell the truth, she rather liked him. He was different from the other men. He was as well educated as most of them and there was a certain innocent and straightforward, but for undignified way about him, which was pleasing to her. It is the clever woman who can appreciate this sort of man. Despite his bigness he was not ungraceful and she did not object to idling with one whose distant relationship with her gave excuse for the comradeship.

John had learned from other guests that this fair cousin June of his was an excellent swimmer, and he wondered much that she did not disport herself with others who were in the water about half the time. Little did he imagine that the reason lay in the nonarrival of a bathing suit so exquisite, so wonderful, so all-compelling and so ravishing that upon her first appearance in the surf all the other women there who had strength enough left after a first glance at her would simply attain the beach as best they could and there lie down upon the sands and die, while all the men would go insane! The bathing dress arrived.

It was the next morning that June said to her cousin:

"Why don't you go in the water, John? Do you not swim?"

"A little," he assented.

"Well, you must go in with me today."

John hesitated, but how could he resist her? There was a rollicking sort of sea coming in when they visited the beach together in the afternoon and separated to assume the water garb. The man was slow in dressing. As John emerged he was startled to see flash by him the most beautiful object he had ever looked upon. The object turned her head and laughed then darted into the water and swam like an otter to the distant float, upon which she climbed to be greeted by a host of friends.

The big waves were getting bigger, but John was not to be daunted now. He plunged in and swam with swift strokes after his elusive cousin. Something about the water struck him as most singular. "I've a great mind to stand up and walk," he said to himself. He reached the float and climbed upon it just in time to see June standing poised upon the other side, with a mocking face turned toward him. Then she dived and swam out to sea, headed apparently for some

John stood puzzled as to his cousin. He was not sure of his Atlantic yet. Meanwhile farther and farther out went the fair swimmer. She had passed beyond what was deemed a safe distance from the boat when there rose a cry from those who had been noting her swift progress. One white arm was suddenly uplifted and then head and arm both disappeared. The professional life saver stationed on the float was in the water in a moment and swimming lustily, but not before John Milbank! What was the Atlantic to him when June was drowning! The lifesaver was a noted swimmer, but those upon the float that day saw greater swimming than he could do. The big fellow from the west fairly tore through the water; he upreared himself once and saw a head arise and disappear again. A hundred powerful strokes and he was there just as, once more, the head came to the surface. His hand was in her hair, the white face was lifted from the water, and then, swimming as easily almost as if unburdened, the young man reached the raft again.

The young woman after restoratives recovered very soon.

"I believe it must have been some sort of cramp, John," she managed to say, sitting upon the raft somewhat dejectedly half an hour later; "I think you had better swim back to the beach with me."

That evening John remarked casually to his aunt: "Talk about swimming! Why, fresh water isn't in it. You can go to sleep on this stuff!"

It was noted that during the remainder of the season the second cousins were together more than ever and it was before they separated that John found occasion to suggest to June that a second cousinship was not a sufficiently close relationship. That accounts for the opening paragraph of this true story.

BOERS FOR BRITAIN

Pretoria, Nov. 12.—A corps of National Scouts was recently organized of surrendered Boers, with General Celliers commanding. The first squadron is now in the field, and is doing good work.

A second squadron is now being formed by General Andreas Cronje. The corps also has British officers, under Captain Blakemore. This development will probably prove an important factor in the speedy termination of the war, and an effective settlement thereafter.

ITEMS OF INTEREST

Moscow, Nov. 11.—One more door has been carefully closed against the Jews in Russia. There are a large number of Jews upon the Russian stage, and many are in the imperial service in that department. On the strength of this connection with the imperial theatres, Jewish actors, actresses, and minor members of the stage army have been in the habit of travelling freely about Russia in the pursuit of their calling. It has now been ordained that such persons shall not be considered as having any rights not belonging to them apart from their connection with the imperial theatres. In other words, they will have to reside only in the towns where they are officially employed, and may not travel during the months when the imperial theatres are closed.

SERMON BY ELECTROPHONE.

London, Nov. 11.—When the Archbishop of Canterbury preached at St. James's Church, Tunbridge Wells, the manager of the municipal telephones, recognizing that many would be unable to obtain admission, installed an electrophone in the church. Subscribers who desired were connected with the instrument, and hundreds sat at home and listened to the Archbishop's discourse. Residents at Crowborough and Wadhurst, ten miles off, heard as perfectly as though they were actually present, and in one case a gentleman took shorthand notes of the Primate's utterances.

TYPEWRITING BY TELEGRAPH.

London, Nov. 11.—The first of a series of experiments has just been concluded on the wires of the General Post Office by Mr. Douglas Murray with his long-distance high-speed page-printing telegraph system. The trunk line from London to Glasgow was used. A speed of 120 words a minute was maintained, although the atmospheric conditions were frequently unfavorable. Transcription by automatic typewriter was carried on at the rate of seventy words a minute. Mr. Murray claims that the trials have demonstrated that the system is simpler, more durable, and more easy to keep in order that any system now in use. There is a likelihood that the Post Office will make terms with Mr. Murray to acquire his system, which would mean a reduction of skilled labor at the General Post Office.

THE DEFENCE OF LONDON.

London, Nov. 11.—During the past few weeks a careful survey has been made of the districts surrounding the metropolis with a view to strengthening the batteries and fortifications commanding the main London roads. Lord Roberts has personally inspected several of the positions, and as the result of his recommendations heavy modern guns are to be mounted in the place of the now obsolete muzzle-loading weapons, along the entire range of the Surrey hills and in several commanding positions on the outskirts of North London.

PROTESTANTS ALARMED.

London, Nov. 11.—Lord Salisbury has acknowledged the receipt of a letter sent to him by the Protestant Alliance calling attention to "an invasion of Jesuits and members of the Roman Catholic religious orders into this country." The object of the invasion, says the letter, is "to place the British Sovereign, the British people, and the British churches once again beneath the cruel heel of the Papacy."

16,000 NEW RIFLEMEN.

London, Nov. 11.—Since the inauguration of the rifle club scheme, which was entrusted to the National Rifle Association, no less than 16,000 members have been enrolled, and the clubs affiliated to the association number 205. The suggestion put forward by those who opposed the movement from the first that clubs would interfere with the strengthening of the volunteer force has proved groundless, for the latter body has in many districts placed its ranges at the disposal of the clubs, and not infrequently has drawn recruits from a class of men who but for the clubs would never have become acquainted with the use of arms.

AN EIGHT-YEAR-OLD HERO.

London, Nov. 11.—Herbert Wain, only eight years old, the son of a Midland railway goods guard, has been awarded the Royal Humane Society's certificate for bravery at Rowsley, near Chatsworth, Derbyshire, the plucky boy, going to the rescue of two little girls, aged three and four, saved from drowning. He had previously saved a boy. The Marchioness of Granby presented the Humane Society's certificate to the hero of eight.

Unable to Kill the Elephant

Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 11.—After nearly 3,000 persons had paid 50 cents each to see the electrocution of Bostock's alleged vicious elephant, Jumbo II in the pan-American exposition stadium this afternoon several prominent citizens of Buffalo requested that Mr. Bostock, in the name of decency, prevent a public electrocution. Bostock immediately refunded the gate receipts and announced that the elephant would be electrocuted privately.

At 5 o'clock Jumbo II was placed in the "death harness" and slightly tickled by 2,200 volts of electricity. Jumbo never winced.

The announcement was later made that the elephant had withstood 11,000 volts and had not been affected. Mr. Bostock now says that he will exhibit Jumbo II at the Charleston exposition.

Uncle Sam to Have His Own Way

London, Nov. 11.—The Pall Mall Gazette this afternoon, referring to the speech made by Senator Lodge at Boston on Saturday last, says:

"If, as believed, Mr. Lodge's speech reveals the mind of President Roosevelt, this country will have nothing to complain of. The Isthmian business will be settled next year in a manner honorable and satisfactory to both countries, which means, we presume, that America will get her own way in the matter. The Monroe doctrine is to be sternly upheld by a great navy, if need be. This is in the interests of peace. As the Monroe doctrine does not affect that part of the American continent which belongs to the British Empire the announcement will cause no friction."

—Messrs. O'Leary and Dennis, carrying on business as general merchants ing on business as general merchants at Hastings and Roseneath, have made an assignment for the benefit of their creditors.

A MARVELLOUS MEDICINE

"No Cure, No Pay," is the Newest Progress of the Proprietors of Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—We make the following proposal to the readers of the Times: To any one who is a subject of rheumatism (no matter how long standing) or any blood disease, as enumerated below, and will give Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills a fair trial and do not find a perfect cure we will refund the money paid for the pills. If no substantial improvement is observed, we will in addition, pay $10 in cash on satisfactory evidence being supplied us to this effect.

We have yet to know of a single case where these wonderful pills have not been almost entirely successful in affecting a cure. CANADA CHEMICAL CO.

Ex-Ald. Bailey, St. John's, writes: "I cannot speak too highly of Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills. They worked a miracle in my case, and cured me after many years of suffering. I do not think their equal is to be obtained.

Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills are a positive and certain cure for la grippe, rheumatism, asthma, paralysis, catarrh, eczema, coughs, backache, indigestion, all stomach and liver troubles, female complaints, even when the disease having been standing for many years, the most stubborn cases will yield. Price 50 cents per box. For sale by Ormond & Walsh. The Canada Chemical Company will forfeit $10 for any case that these pills do not help.

Dr. Clarke's Sure Cure for Catarrh, and Dr. Clarke's Sure Cure for Eczema same price. $10 will be paid for any case they will not permanently cure.

Two Days on Keel of a Boat

Thessalon, Nov. 11.—Mr. W. J. Harper, a pioneer resident of Cockburn Island, now residing at Thessalon, had a terrible experience last week. He was crossing from Thessalon to Little Cockburn in his sailboat, when a squall capsized the craft. He succeeded in getting upon the bottom of the boat and for two days and two nights drifted helplessly, the water at times washing over him and once he fell asleep, and fell overboard, losing his hat.

After more than fifty hours the boat touched Grant's Island, and Mr. Harper crawled ashore. He lived on wintergreen berries, strawberry leaves, birch buds, etc., for several days, when a party of Indians coming from John's Island, camped on Grant's Island, adn found Mr. Harper almost exhausted. They carefully aroused him, poulticed his feet, which were blue and numb, and after 24 hours brought him to Thessalon, just one week from the day of his departure.

Mr. Harper carried the mail between Cockburn and Thessalon for some years, a most perilous undertaking, and on two former occasions nearly lost his life. He has come through this terrible experience very well, and will soon be around as usual.

The ONLY MORNING DAILY

BETWEEN TORONTO AND OTTAWA.

Tenders for Supplies, 1902

The undersigned will receive tenders up to noon on MONDAY, 25th inst., for supplies of butchers' meat, creamery butter, flour, oatmeal, potatoes, cordwood, etc., etc., for the following institutions during the year 1902, viz.:—

At the Asylums for the Insane in Toronto, London, Kingston, Hamilton, Mimico, Brockville, Cobourg and Orillia; the Central Prison and Mercer Reformatory, Toronto; the Reformatory for Boys, Penetanguishene; the Institutions for Deaf and Dumb, Belleville, and the Blind at Brantford.

Exception—Tenders are not required for the supply of meat to the asylums in Toronto, London, Kingston, Hamilton and Brockville, nor for the Central Prison and Mercer Reformatory, Toronto.

A marked cheque for five per cent. of the estimated amount of the contract, payable to the order of the Honorable the Provincial Secretary, must be furnished by each tenderer as a guarantee of his bona fides. Two sufficient sureties will be required for the due fulfillment of each contract, and should any tender be withdrawn before the contract is awarded, or should the tenderer fail to furnish such security, the amount of the deposit will be forfeited.

Specifications and forms of tender may be had on application to the Department of the Provincial Secretary, Toronto, or to the Bursars of the respective institutions.

The lowest or any tender not necessarily accepted.

Newspapers inserting this advertisement without authority from the Department will not be paid for it.

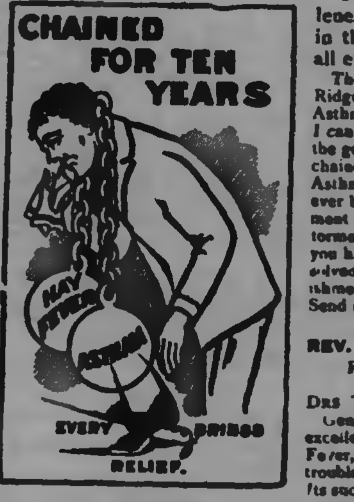
Asthma Cure Free!

Asthmalene Brings Instant Relief and Permanent Cure in All Cases,

Sent ABSOLUTELY FREE on receipt of postal. Write your name and address plainly.



There is nothing like Asthmalene. It brings instant relief, even in the worst cases. It cures when all else fails.

The Rev. C. F. WELLS, of Villa Ridge, Ill., says: "Your trial bottle of Asthmalene received in good condition. I cannot tell you how thankful I feel for the good derived from it. I was a slave, chained with putrid sore throat and Asthma for ten years. I despaired of ever being cured. I saw your advertisement for the cure of this dreadful and tormenting disease, Asthma, and thought you had overspoken yourselves, but resolved to give it a trial. To my astonishment, the trial acted like a charm. Send me a full-size bottle."

REV. DR. MORRIS WECHSLER

Rabbi of the Cong. Bnai Israel.

New York, Jan. 3, 1901.

Drs Taft Bros' Medicine Co.:

Gentlemen: Your Asthmalene is an excellent remedy for Asthma and Hay Fever, and its composition alleviates all troubles which combine with asthma. Its success is astonishing and wonderful.

After having it carefully analyzed, we can state that Asthmalene contains no opium, morphine, chloroform or ether. Very truly yours,

REV. DR. MORRIS WECHSLER.

Avon Springs, N. Y., Feb. 1, 1901.

Dr. Taft Bros. Medicine Co.

Gentlemen: I write this testimonial from a sense of duty, having tested the wonderful effect of your Asthmalene, for the cure of Asthma. My wife has been afflicted with spasmodic asthma for the past 12 years. Having exhausted my own skill as well as many others, I chanced to see your sign upon your windows at 130th street, New York. I at once obtained a bottle of Asthmalene. My wife commenced taking it about the 1st of November. I very soon noticed a radical improvement. After using one bottle her asthma has disappeared and she is entirely free from all symptoms. I feel that I can consistently recommend the medicine to all who are afflicted with this distressing disease. Yours respectfully,

O. D. PHELPS, M. D.

Dr. Taft Bros. Medicine Co.

Gentlemen: I was troubled with Asthma for 22 years. I have tried numerous remedies but they have all failed. I ran across your advertisement and started with a trial bottle. I found relief at once. I have since purchased your full-size bottle and I am ever grateful. I have a family of four children and for six years was unable to work. I am now in the best of health and am doing business every day. This testimony you can make such use of as you see fit.

Cancer Sufferers Gain Strength

A great many people suffering from Cancers and Tumors, find their strength rapidly slipping away. These horrible diseases undermine the health and sap the vitality.

To operate or use plasters, simply means further exhaustion. The new Constitutional treatment, instead of weakening, actually builds up the strength and invigorates the entire system, not only this, but it arrests the progress of the disease and entirely eliminates every particle of the Cancer poison from the system. It is a pleasant treatment, an dcan be taken at home, without pain or inconvenience.

A PRETTY HOME WEDDING

Nuptials of Mr. G. L. Hay and Miss Rosemond A. Fox.

A very pretty wedding took place yesterday morning at ten o'clock, at the residence of Mr. James Fox, No. 58 Harvey street, when his eldest daughter, Miss Rosemond A., was united in marriage to Mr. Gus L. Hay, accountant at the Stanley Piano Company. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. C. Davidson, Rector of St. John's Church, in the presence of a few of the intimate relatives of the contracting parties. The bride wore her travelling costume of blue broad cloth with hat to match, and was attended by her sister, Miss Lizzie Fox, who was attired in blue ladies' cloth. The groom was supported by Dr. T. H. Bell, of Warsaw. After the wedding ceremony, the happy couple and the assembled guests sat down to a sumptuous wedding dejeuner, after which Mr. and Mrs. Hay left for Montreal and points east by G.T.R. On their return they will take up their residence on Harvey street.

Long Bros. caterers, served the wedding breakfast.

The Times joins in extending hearty congratulations.

Football

This great family journal has been requested to prepare a "yell" that will knock the legs from under the London Football team when it arrives here on Saturday. Our junior reporter was accordingly put to work, with the following result: (N. B.—Be careful that none of it gets away.)

Who are! Who are! Who are we!
We are! We are! We are wo!
Can't you guess? Yes! Yes! Yes!
We are the boys of Peterboro Moss!
We are in it! Well I guess!
Razzle! Dazzle! Gobble! Sis Boom! Bah!
Peterboro Club! Rah! Rah! Rah!

In Saturday's game against Peterborough, the London club played Peel, whose application for reinstatement is now pending. Peel was professionalized last winter by the Ontario Hockey Association for having played with the London club, knowing that a "ringer" was on the team. London will likely be professionalized and Peterborough given the championship.

London News: It is no reflection on any member of the London team nor on any member of the Peterborough team to say that McPherson, the Peterborough half played the cleverest game on the field. His work was phenomenal, his runs were perhaps the best ever seen in London.

"THE PARSON'S NEPHEW"

The Parable of the Prodigal Illustrated by Marks Bros' Play Last Night

The five-act comedy-drama "The Parson's Nephew" was presented by Marks Bros. at the Opera House last night and was greatly enjoyed by a large audience. The specialties between the acts, making a continuous performance for all the evening are an exceedingly taking feature. There are sixteen artists in the company and they are all gifted with the power of moving to smiles or tears that makes the successful actor. Marks Bros. continue not only to hold a high place but to grow in popular favor year after year and their success is deserved because they are not satisfied with visiting on their reputation but aim always to improve.

BAD DREAMS

Caused by Coffee.

"I have been a coffee drinker, more or less, ever since I can remember, until a few months ago I became more and more nervous and irritable, and finally I could not sleep at night for I was horribly disturbed by dreams of all sorts and a species of distressing nightmare.

Finally, after hearing the experience of numbers of friends who had quit coffee and gone to drinking Postum Food Coffee, and learning of the great benefits they had derived, I concluded coffee must be the cause of my trouble, so I got some Postum Food Coffee and had it made strictly according to directions.

I was astonished at the flavor and taste. It entirely took the place of coffee, and to my very great satisfaction, I began to sleep peacefully and sweetly. My nerves improved, and I wish I could warn every man, woman and child from the unwholesome drug, ordinary coffee.

People really do not appreciate or realize what a powerful drug it is and what terrible effect it has on the human system. If they did, hardly a pound of it would be sold. I would never think of going back to coffee again. I would almost as soon think of putting my hand in a fire after I had once been burned.

A young lady friend of ours had stomach trouble for a long time, and could not get well as long as she used coffee. She finally quit coffee and began the use of Postum Food Coffee and is now perfectly well. Yours for health. Don't publish my name."—Herington, Kan. FATAL BOILER EXPLOSION

CHEESE FACTORY AT NORWOOD BLOWN UP.

T. Moffatt was Fatally Hurt—The Building in Ruins

The boiler in the cheese and butter factory at Norwood exploded yesterday morning and completely demolished the building. Mr. T. Moffat was working near at the time and was struck by some of the debris and fatally injured. The owner of the factory, Mr. Oakley, was hit on the head by a falling brick but was only a little hurt. Pieces of the boiler were thrown several hundred feet and many windows were smashed in the surrounding houses. The cause of the explosion is unknown, but it is supposed that the boiler was allowed to run dry.

It is expected that the cheese in the curing room will be saved. Thomas Moffat, who was fatally injured, was the assistant cheese maker was the only person in the building when the explosion occurred. He is 18 years of age and is the son of Mr. Bristow Moffat of Norwood.

Eight or ten windows in the Presbyterian Church were shattered by the explosion.

Roseberry May Become Leader

London, Nov. 12.—There is a persistent rumor to the effect that Lord Rosebery will become the leader of the Liberal party. The basis for it would seem to be a platitude which Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, the present Liberal leader, indulged in at a private luncheon in Haddo House. After making a reference to Lord Rosebery's furrow, Sir Henry is reputed to have said that the lowly ploughman would be welcome, provided he prepared to do what was acceptable to the Liberal party.

ITEMS OF INTEREST

London, Nov. 12.—Violent winds, rain and snow storms are reported from all the coasts of the United Kingdom. A fierce gale is blowing in the channel and mountainous seas are running. No less than half a dozen small vessels within sight of Dover are flying signals of distress and the life boats are vainly attempting to go to their rescue. A rocket apparatus has been sent to the South Foreland where an Admiralty vessel is on the rocks, with the crew clinging to the rigging. Several vessels have been dismasted and tugs are rescuing craft which were driving ashore. At other channel ports there have been similar exciting scenes. Ships everywhere are running for shelter.

The steamer Cato collided with the British ship Loch Vennachar, Captain Bennet, at the mouth of the Thames. The latter foundered, but the crew were saved. Wild weather prevails over the lake district. The first snow is falling on the Westmoreland hills. The seas are so high off the Tyne that shipping has been stopped. Even river traffic is partially suspended and hundreds of men are idle. There have been a number of wrecks on the Sunderland coast.

HORSES THAT EAT FLESH.

London, Nov. 12.—Ex-Senator Thurston has a consignment of wild animals on its way from the interior of Asia for his Nebraska farm, which be will also exhibit at the St. Louis Exposition. A friend in Turkestan secured for him two vicious, wild Thibetan horses whose appetite is satisfied only by sheep chickens and small game. They devour flesh like a tiger or a lion, and Mr. Thurston will have to feed them porterhouse steaks as well as baled hay.

WEIRD TALE OF THE SEA.

Paris, Nov. 12.—A weird tale of the sea comes from the Mediterranean. The French brig Tourney was dismasted and waterlogged by a storm. The crew were taken off with the exception of one sailor, Denis, who refused to leave the vessel in the hope of getting the salvage. The wreck was hailed by a British steamer, the Syrian Prince. Denis, although he was in a high fever and had slept only six hours in nine days, still refused to leave the vessel, but accepted the steamer's offer to tow the brig, and she was taken to Algiers. Denis claims half her value as salvage, but the captain of the British steamer claims the whole brig as derelict. The Maritime Commissioner at Algiers accuses the crew of the steamer of pillaging the brig.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 12.—Russia will spend next year only 21 copecks (about 10 cents) per capita for educational purposes. Yet, in addition to the enormous drain caused by the Siberian Railway, $50,000,000 is to be spent on new strategic railways to the Prussian and Austrian frontiers, railways that have only a military purpose and aim.

Ottawa, Nov. 12.—A Montreal deputation, including Messrs. Redford, Torrance, Allan and Harting, waited on Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his colleagues at half past twelve to-day. Their object was to press forward the Montreal harbor and St. Lawrence improvements between Montreal and Quebec. After the case had been fully presented Mr. Tarte made a statement of what was being done, and said only thirty miles of dredging remained to be completed, when the entire distance would be thirty feet in depth at the lowest state of the river. As to lighting, it could be done by electricity and would only cost half a million, and what was half a million to secure safe navigation. Hon. James Sutherland, Acting Minister of Marine, said he would look closely into all the papers and report to the Cabinet.

Holland and Transvaal War

Toronto, Nov. 12.—"There is not much concern in Holland now over the Transvaal war," said Mr. B. Vandewaal, who arrived in the city last evening from Rotterdam and registered at the Iroquois. Mr. Vandewaal has come to Canada in search of a market for hides, of which there is an unusually large supply in Holland this year. He states that the people in Holland regard the real issue of the Transvaal war at a close, and do not interest themselves in it now. Even the newspapers do not give it any prominence beyond publishing the official despatches. There was not as much attention paid to the war by Hollanders as a great many people seemed to think. Throughout Rotterdam, while there was a certain amount of sympathy for the Boers in some sections, there was a decided indifference manifested by the masses as to the outcome of the war.

November Report of the Crops of Ontario Continued

have suffered from dry weather or frost, and the bug has been in evidence as usual. The crop has practically all been removed.

Turnips: This crop has generally yielded well throughout the Province, though somewhat affected by drouth, owing to which the roots in many places are small in size. This appears to be the latest of the root crops to be housed, but most of it was secured by the 1st November in good condition.

Carrots: This has been a good season for carrots, and the crop has been housed in excellent condition. The area devoted to this vegetable is comparatively small.

Sugar Beets: In only a few localities are sugar beets grown, but if the results continue to be as favorable as those of the present season they are certain to be more extensively sown. The output has been good as regards both bulk and quality in almost every case.

Mangels: The mangel is growing in favor as a root able to withstand the effects of drouth better than the turnip. It has yielded particularly well this season in all sections, and the weather has been favorable to its being harvested without drawbacks.

Fall Plowing: The dry weather which has characterized this fall in most parts of the Province has considerably interfered with the progress of fall plowing rendering the soil hard and dry, more especially in the Lake Erie counties where the work is reported as backward. In other localities, greater advances have been made, many farmers having nearly or quite completed their plowing at the time our correspondents wrote. Apart from the prevalent drouth, the weather has been highly favorable for the work.

Fruit and Fruit Trees: Fruit trees are in general in good condition, and there has been an unusually heavy growth of wood. The season has been a poor one for fruit, more especially for apples, the staple orchard crop, of which there is a shortage everywhere. This appears to be due to a combination of causes, the principal enumerated being wet weather during the blossoming season, heavy winds, and the attacks of the tent caterpillar, codling moth, borer and other insect pests. Shipments have consequently been light, many localities not having enough for local consumption. Insects also have proved injurious to the other fruits, but many correspondents note a plentiful supply of plums and pears, and peaches. Cherries and small fruits did fairly well in many places, though the quality was very variable. Grapes were in the main a good crop. The reports emphasize the need of spraying, as, where ever this process was followed, the losses by insect pests were considerably lessened.

Pastures and Live Stock: Pastures were in good condition during the early fall in the eastern portion of the Province although in the more western counties comparatively bare fields were common. Live stock of all kinds are in an unusually healthy state, an odd case of cholera in hogs being the only disease reported. While a few correspondents describe cattle as being rather thin, most of those reporting consider them to be in good average condition. In some localities the horn-fly was annoying. Some correspondents state that the sheep are not kept in as large numbers as formerly, but they appear to be in good shape where raised. Swine are being fed in large numbers, and are being turned off more or less steadily the year around at weights ranging from 180 to 220 pounds. One correspondent characteristically refers to the hog as the "farmer's Klondyke." The supply of fodder is said to be ample for the winter, hay corn and roots being abundant, although there has been a general shortage of straw. The silo is still growing in favor, an unusual number having been built in the West Midland district this year. Several correspondents speak approvingly of the husker and shredder as a means of preparing corn for fodder. Taking them altogether, reports concerning live stock may be considered as satisfactory.

Dairy: The season of 1901 has been a fair one for dairying, although some correspondents complain of the low price prevailing for cheese. Creamery plants have been put into a number of cheese factories, cheese being made from May to October and butter during the winter months. The cream separator is said to be of great assistance to those making home-made butter. Both creamery and home-made butter is described as having been of good quality as a whole, and prices as a rule have been satisfactory. Many farmers engaged in dairying are now systematically putting in ice in order to meet conditions of temperature during mid-summer. Shorthorn grades are still most commonly found in Ontario dairies, although Holstein and Jerseys are coming into favor; while Ayrshires rest in supremacy in the cheese producing counties along St. Lawrence.

Threshing and Marketing: Threshing has been carried on actively, and in many sections the work has practically been completed. Peas were marketed early on account of the bug, and a large quantity of oats have been disposed of; but wheat has not been moving very lively, and much of the barley is now fed on the farm.

Bees and Honey: Very little disease of any kind has been reported among bees. The average yield of honey will be about fifty pounds per colony, a considerable addition of buckwheat honey having been made in some sections of the Province to the clover and basswood stock already on hand. Bees will go into winter quarters with a fair amount of stores, and as prices have been good, owing to the scarcity of fruit, the season of 1901 may be regarded as having been a good average one for the apiary.

Poultry: Judging by the remarks of correspondents it would seem that farmers are taking much more interest in poultry raising once more. More care is now being taken in the selecting, feeding, housing and the general handling of fowl, and the question of profit and loss is being more carefully studied. The Plymouth Rock appears to be the most popular breed of hens. Turkeys are being raised in larger numbers than ever. Several correspondents point to the fact that more poultry is being disposed of than in former years. The general condition of all classes of fowl may be described as good, although a correspondent in Wellington refers to a disease resembling blind staggers, and another correspondent in Prince Edward describes a disease, which he says is not hen cholera, where the fowl are attacked, get "dumpish," and die within forty-eight hours.

Farm Improvements: Good progress has been made in underdraining, more especially in the west, and some of the Ottawa River counties. In many localities where little advance is noted, many of the farms have been previously drained. In nearly all neighborhoods, the supply of tile was sufficient. The supply of skilled labor was generally adequate to the requirements, as in most cases the work was done without engaging special help. The draining machines are very little used and are not considered as satisfactory as hand labor. Almost everywhere wiring fencing is rapidly taking the place of rail and other wooden fences, and in most localities, considerable improvements in the character of houses and barns are noted.

Labor and Wages: The great majority of correspondents report that the supply of farm labor was inadequate to meet the demand. The reason given are temporary or permanent departures for Manitoba and the Northwest, the high wages paid in the lumbering industry, and the migration to the cities and larger towns. Those correspondents who consider any change in the rate of wages likely nearly all predict an increase, but a large number express the opinion that the farmers cannot afford to pay more than present rates. Domestic hope continues exceedingly scarce, the variety of other callings and employments now open to women attracting girls away from the farms. Immigration is the remedy generally suggested," often coupled with the proviso that the new arrivals must be of the "right sort" and disparaging criticisms on the immigrants who have been brought out.

PEACE REPORTS SAID TO BE UNFOUNDED

Boer Envoy Says Peace Negotiations are Not Impending

IMPORTANT CHANGE IN ARMING BRITISH TROOPS

Attitude of Chamberlain and Salisbury Shut Out the Question of Peace—Goldfields Story

Berlin, Nov. 13.—The Frankfurter Zeitung to-day publishes an interview Zwith A. D. W. Wolmarans, the Boer envoy, now at Amsterdam, in which the latter is quoted as declaring that the alleged impending peace negotiations between the Boers and British are unfounded. "So long," says Wolmarans, "as the British Ministry maintains the attitude outlined by Mr. Chamberlain's and Lord Salisbury's last speeches, the question of peace cannot be entertained. The idea of the cession of the gold fields is absurd."

"Owing to Lord Roberts' conviction that the sabre and lance have seen their best days, the Small Arms Committee was instructed some months ago to find a modified form of the Lee Enfield suitable for all arms. As a result the committee has decided in favor of shortening the barrel five inches and increasing the twist of the rifling in order to compensate for the loss of range and accuracy, adding a ten cartridge clip action. An experimental issue of a thousand will be made soon."

NEW MANCHURIAN SCHEME

Japanese Version of the China-Russian Agreement.

Victoria, B. C., Nov. 14.—The terms of the proposed new Manchurian agreement between Russia and China are published by Japanese papers as follows:

1. That Russia is to enjoy the exclusive title to all mining and railway privileges in Manchuria.

2. That all the Chinese troops in Manchuria are to be placed under Russian command.

3. That two years after peace and good order have been restored Russia will withdraw one-half of her forces, and three years after that date the remainder; and.

4. That the Shanhaikwan-Newchwang railway shall be restored to China on condition that it is never used for the conveyance of British troops.

China to Sell Gunboats

Victoria, B. C., Nov 14.—The Chinese cruisers Kien Wei and Kienan, the construction of which near Foochow is now nearly finished, were built by the Chinese Government on the advice of some Frenchmen, all the materials coming from France. But being unable to pay wages or for the material, China is arranging to sell the warships to France.

The Kien Wei and the Kienan are steel twin-screw 870-ton torpedo gunboats of the first class, drawing 10 1-2 feet and calculated to have 23-knot speed.

CHINESE RESCUE THE SUN.

The Usual Ceremony Attending a Partial Eclipse.

Pekin, Nov. 14.—The high officials here took part today, at the Court's command, in the ceremony of rescuing the sun, which was partially eclipsed. The belief of the Chinese was that a dragon was devouring the sun. Drums were beaten, gongs were pounded and a general hullabaloo created which had the effect of frightening away the monster, thus saving the sun from its impending destruction.

According to the agreement between Prince Ching and the foreign Ministers, the Pekin octroi taxes became effective against foreign merchants today, this being the date for the official assumption of the native customs for the payment of the war indemnity.

Horse racing will begin here tomorrow. The sport will last three days.

Election Riot in Spain

Madrid, Nov. 14.—The municipal elections in Barcelona to-day were attended by bloodshed and excitement. Revolver shots were exchanged, and one person was killed and forty others were wounded.

The theatres there were closed tonight on account of the disturbances.

The municipal elections throughout Spain have resulted in a large majority for the supporters of the Government.

Disorder is expected in Bilbao.

TO STAY UNDER 12 HOURS

The Submarine Torpedo Boat Fulton Will Undergo That Test.

Greenport, L. I., Nov. 14.—A test of the ability of submarine torpedo boats of the Holland type to spend long periods safely under water is being arranged for. At the fitting-up plant of the Holland Company at New Suffolk the Fulton is to be sealed up in the early evening some time this week and remain sealed up from twelve to fifteen hours.

Beside her regular crew, in command of Capt. Frank Cable, there will be in her Lieut. MacArthur, who is to command the submarine boat Adder, and Rear-Admiral John Lowe of the United States Navy. The compressed air tanks will be filled to their capacity, the men furnished with food for the day and with cottons with which to make themselves comfortable during their long watch below. There will be those on shore who may easily see that all conditions of the test are fulfilled. The Russian naval attache, Capt. Baron Ferson, and the Japanese representative, Lieutenant-Commander Ide, are expected here next week to witness runs by the Fulton.

SCHLEY COURT TO MEET

The Members in Secret Session to Consider the Testimony.

Washington, Nov. 14.—Admiral Dewey and Rear Admirals Benham and Ramsay, constituting the Schley Court of Inquiry, met today in secret session for the purpose of discussing the character of their report of the findings and opinions. The meeting was in the John R. McLean building, where several rooms for the use of the court have been secured. All the sessions will be secret. A stenographer, two marine orderlies, a messenger and some other assistants have been assigned the court. The custom of having the Judge Advocate sit with a court of inquiry and give it the benefit of his advice and assistance will not be followed in this case, principally for the reason that the court does not intend to afford any chance for adverse criticism from those who have contended that Judge Advocate Lemly appeared at the investigation in the role of prosecutor of Admiral Schley. Capt. Lemly is in Kansas City attending the National Prison Congress.

The Defaulting Maccabee

Port Huron, Mich., November 14.—Major Boynton, commander of the Great Camp of Maccabees of Michigan, says that in view of the past good record of C. D. Thompson, the defaulting finance keeper of the Supreme Tent, that the Maccabees generally should contribute towards a fund to help Thompson out of difficulty. He offers, as commander of the Michigan Great Camp, to join with D. P. Markey, Commander of the Supreme Tent, in an endeavor to raise a sum, by popular subscription among Maccabees sufficient to make good Thompson's shortage.

Thompson is still at liberty, and rumours are going about that a settlement is pending. Supreme Commander Markey, and Record Keeper Boyle denied the rumour.

FILIPINO FORCE SURPRISED

Tactics Employed in Samar Fail and Insurgents Are Routed.

Manila, Nov. 14 Major William L. Pitcher of the English regiment of infantry, commanding the Mindoro expedition, reports that the garrison of Abra de Hog was attacked yesterday by a force of insurgents commanded by Lenocos. The Fillipinos apparently attempted to repeat the Samar tactics, but the Americans, who were breakfasting fully armed, completely routed the insurgents, who left five men dead on the field, each having a rifle and ammunition. One American was seriously wounded.

Captain Noyes of the Thirtieth infantry, commanding a detachment of fifty men, has captured a deserter named Richter of the Sixth artillery, wearing the uniform of an insurgent lieutenant.

Major Pitcher says he recently captured three officers and a large part of an insurgent company, all fully armed. It is believed the insurgents recently received an illicit supply of munitions of war.

Catbalogan, Island of Samar, Nov. 14.—The insurgents are flocking northward. They are suffering greatly from famine. Many isolated Bolomen have surrendered. Only fear caused by Lukban's proclamation threatening with death those who surrender prevents a general submission of the insurgents, but it is expected that this will be secured in a few days.

Why Catarrhozone Cures Catarrh

It goes to every affected part and kills the germs that keep up the diseased condition. Catarrhozone never irritates, but stimulates the mucous lining of the nose, throat and lungs to normal action, and keeps the nasal passages free from offensive discharges. Catarrhozone contains no dangerous drugs or opiates, and is delightfully pleasant and simple to use. Catarrhozone is an absolutely certain cure for any form of Catarrh and sells for dollars at druggists, small size 25c. By mail from Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

TO GO ON THE STAGE

Frank James, the Noted Bandit, to Join a Dramatic Company.

St. Louis, Nov. 14.—Frank James, the once notorious bandit and brother of Jesse James, has announced his intention of going on the stage, and will make his bow to the public on Nov. 25 in Zanesville, O., in a play entitled "Across the Desert."

Since Frank James reformed he has turned his hand to many honest methods of making a living, but up to a few days ago declined all offers to exhibit himself in public. He has been a clerk, a ticket seller, a jack-of-all-trades, and once attempted to procure the position of doorkeeper of the Missouri House of Representatives.

The "Across the Desert" company will tour Ohio and several Eastern States and Canada. James will appear in the character of a prosperous Westerner, and, if he has his own wish, will be given few lines.

He will appear in a Prince Albert coat, creased trousers and a Fedora hat, and when the curtain goes down in the last act he will occupy the centre of the stage.

"The part I am going to play will be inconspicuous," said James to-night "I have frequently said that I would not go on the stage, but I have recently made radical changes in my plans and shall appear with the company during a brief tour.

"I can do now what I could not have done some time ago without offending the public. I think I have given proof by my conduct that the apprehensions of those who had no faith in me were groundless.

"I do not expect to become an actor in the true sense of the word, but I am confident that I shall be able to play a small part acceptably. I do not delude myself into thinking that I have dramatic talent, and I am equally sure that the many men who have offered me opportunities had no such delusions."

DENMARK BALKS ISLAND SALE

Change of Ministry Makes New Treaty Necessary.

Washington, Nov. 14.—The projected treaty of cession of the Danish West Indies to the United States is not so well advanced as it was hoped it would be and it is now doubtful whether the treaty will be completed in time to submit to congress next month. The delay has arisen through the last change in the ministry at Copenhagen, the state department practically having reached an agreement with the former Danish government. The entry into power of a new ministry not well-disposed toward the treaty made it necessary to begin over again. The issues do not touch the price to be paid so much as the conditions as to the future of the citizens of the islands. The United States wish to avoid all restrictions.

MISS STONE STILL HOPEFUL

Reported to be Enduring Her Trials With Fortitude.

Sofia, Bulgaria, Nov. 14.—From another letter that has been received from Miss Ellen M. Stone, the abducted American missionary, it appears, that she is enduring the trials of her hard experience with fortitude, forgetting herself in her anxiety for her companion, Mme. Tsilka.

Miss Stone does not dare to complain of the treatment to which they are subjected, but she finds the confinement irksome and the weather extremely trying.

The tone of the latest letter received from her is hopeful. The brigands, by dating the letters at places in Macedonia and delaying their delivery, seek to create the appearance of being far distant.

The Bulgarian government continues to interfere in the negotiations with the object of forcing a transference of them across the frontier.

London, Nov. 14.—Friends of Miss Stone here are criticising Minister Leishman for his seeming indifference in her behalf. He sailed for the United States on Saturday after several weeks of idleness in London and Paris and has shown no interest in the serious state of affairs in Turkey. The efforts to rescue Miss Stone have been left in the hands of Spencer Eddy, who has shown his willingness to do all in his power, but he is looked upon as rather lacking in experience to deal with such questions as might have resulted from the clash between Turkey and France.

PUTTING ON THE BRAKES

GOVERNMENT OPPOSED TO SENDING A CONTINGENT

Le Soleil Says it Has Been Asked to Aid in Stopping the Flood of Applications Now Flowing In.

Ottawa, Nov. 14.—Yesterday's mail brought to the militia department another batch of offers of service in South Africa with a third Canadian contingent in the event of one being sent out. Many of those volunteering were members of the first and second contingents and would be just the sort of men needed in a distinctively Canadian force capable of acting as a unit in the field and rendering invaluable service in the method of warfare now adopted by the Boers. These offers are, however, merely filed away, as the department does not seem to contemplate seriously the sending of another contingent from Canada.

Quebec, Nov. 14.—Le Soleil publishes the following: At the moment of going to press an Ottawa despatch informs us that the government has decided to refuse to all Canadian officers and soldiers permission to leave their posts for the purpose of going to Africa. We have been asked to give all the publicity possible to this decision, so as to stop the flood of applications which are flowing in upon the minister of militia. Only yesterday the department received no less than sixty applications from Canadian officers anxious to join the English army upon the battlefield.

How to Get Up an Appetite

Distaste for food often follows Grippe, and fevers, and is associated with a general weakness of the system. To impart a real zest for food, and give power to the stomach to digest and assimilate, no remedy can equal Ferrozone. This is a new and startling discovery. It strikes at the foot of disease and by removing the cause, cures quickly and permanently. Ferrozone will quickly enable you to eat and digest anything. DID FRANCE ACT AS CONFEDERATE?

Suggestion by Goldwin Smith That She is Acting with Russia

WHY RUSSIA DID NOT MOVE

An Aggressive Act Against Turkey Would Have Brought About a Collision with Great Britain

Goldwin Smith, writing in The Weekly Sun, says:

Turkey, having yielded to the French demands, France withdrew from Mitylene. Yet it is not perfectly certain that this is the end of the incident. French influence at all events has been established, and what understanding there may have been between France and Russia in the affair is unknown. That their alliance has been renewed is a patent fact. The ill-starred convention of 1878 binds Great Britain to lend the assistance of her arms to Turkey in case of Russian aggression on Turkey's Eastern possessions; Great Britain for so doing receiving Cyprus as a fee. An aggressive movement on the part of Russia would thus, as Turkey would have appealed to this convention, have brought on a collision with Great Britain. France runs no such risk, and whether she has acted as a confederate in Russian interest, only her Foreign Office and that of Russia can tell.

Four centuries and a half have passed since the Turk stormed Constantinople, and planted the Crescent in place of the Cross on the dome of St. Sophia. A military barbarian he came; a military he remained. Industry and everything connected with it he left to the enslaved population. War was his life. Year after year he sallied forth on expeditions of devastation and conquest, and for two centuries and a half he was the scourge of Christendom. He pushed his rapine to the walls of Vienna. Christendom owes more than it knows to Spain for her defence of it against Islam. She may plead the victory of Lepanto as at least something of a set-off against the Inquisition. Fear of the Turk bound together the Austrian Empire, which also did memorable service as a bulwark of Europe against him. The Ottoman's period of military vigor was artificially prolonged by the institution of the Janissaries, the pick of Christian boys taken as tribute from their homes and trained as soldiers for the service of the Mahometan power. At last, however, sensuality prevailed over the lust of war, and the Turkish Empire sank into a foul decrepitude, sensuality prevailed over the regions once populous and fruitful which it has unpopulated and turned into a vast expanse of decay. That Turkish bloodthirsty savagery has not decreased with the decrease of its vigor the Chios, Bulgarian, and Armenian massacres bear murderous witness. For some time past the corrupt and mouldering mass has been kept in existence mainly by England, who feared the advance of Russia to the Mediterranean as a danger to her connection with the East. The fact is hard, it owe to fill an Englishman's breast with pride; but morality is not the handmaid of Empire.

ITEMS OF INTEREST

London, Nov. 13.—Lively scenes in the Emanuel Free Church of England, Great Harwood, occupied the attention of the Blackburn magistrates recently. Rev. Henry Francis Gordon, the pastor, charged seven members of his congregation with brawling. The dispute arose over an alteration in the service objected to by a large majority of the congregation. When the new service was introduced last Sunday week there were loud protests. The solicitor for the trustees mounted a bench and tried to speak, and there was great uproar and much unseemly bustling. One account describes the scene as a "free fight." Last Sunday the clergyman was barred out of the church altogether. The Rev. Mr. Gordon in conducting prosecution yesterday used strong language towards those he had summoned. "They had," he said, "resorted to force, and low, vulgar and indecent behavior, in God's house." Some of the cases were dismissed by the magistrates. In others fines were imposed.

DRINK AND LUNACY.

London, Nov. 13.—Some of the persons committed to the inebriate reformatories established under the Acts of 1898-99 proved to be certifiable lunatics. This remarkable fact is mentioned in the second annual report on the working of the Acts, which was issued yesterday. Over 25 per cent of them were mentally deficient. So long as they were drinking their eccentricity and violence were ascribed to habits, but after liquor was removed the real state of affairs became evident. The inebriate reformatories are five in number, with 120 beds. To these, sixteen male and 128 female cases were committed last year. Four girls, under the age of twenty-one were among the committals.

WELSH VILLAGE SUBSIDING.

London, Nov. 13.—At the small colliery village of Hollybush, near Tredegar, at midnight on Thursday, a serious subsidence occurred. It was accompanied by loud reports. The inhabitants were terrified, and many rushed partly clad into the streets. The foundations of two houses were dislodged, and the walls cracked. An archway carrying the London and North-Western Railway and some contiguous colliery sidings were badly damaged, and fissures appeared in the roadway. There are colliery workings beneath the village, and to these the subsidence is attributed.

London, Nov. 13.—London's food supply is being closely watched by the health authorities of the port. The last report of their operations covers three weeks. In that time ten tons of fruit and fish, fourteen tons of condensed milk, and fifteen vanloads of grapes were condemned and destroyed. The quantity of meat condemned and destroyed in the same period was very large, amounting to 115 tons. Twenty-three tons of this quantity had been imported in the frozen state. A together the seizures of food samples unfit for human consumption were 3,827 in the three weeks.

SCOTCH GIRLS ARE THE BEST.

Yarmouth, England, Nov. 13.—Over 2,000 Scottish girls have come to Yarmouth for the herring fishing, and at a meeting of the Board of Guardians Mr. J. M. Headley declared that owing to their being engaged instead of Yarmouth women the latter would be driven to apply for relief.

Mr. George Angell, a Yarmouth curer, said Yarmouth women had only themselves to thank for being displaced, as the Scottish women were infinitely superior, and more and more would be required every year. They not only worked better and faster than the Yarmouth women, but the latter spent too much of their time in public houses. He predicted that another year curers would procure all their hands from Scotland.

The board resolved to take no action.

MYSTERY NOT CLEARED UP.

London, Nov. 13.—The mystery attaching to the death of Lizzie Crowther, of Wilke, near Leeds, was not cleared up by the inquest, which closed yesterday. The girl lived in a lonely part of the country and one night she rushed into her grandmother's house, and said a man had put some nasty stuff into her mouth. She died a few minutes later, but the cause of death could not then be ascertained. Subsequently an analysis showed the stomach to contain 11.6 grains of strychnine. One grain, said the analyst yesterday, was enough to cause death. The poison was probably contained in a vermin-killer, which was sold with great carelessness. The jury found that death was due to strychnine poisoning, but that there was no evidence to show how it was administered.

ELEVATOR FOR THE KING.

London, Nov. 13.—At a meeting of the Epsom Urban Council last night it was reported that the Epsom Grand Stand Association had written asking upon what terms the council would connect the grand stand with the council electricity supply works. The association is desirous of obtaining power to work a lift for the use of the King and Queen at the races next year and power also for lighting rooms for the grand stand for which 200 lights would be required. It was stated that negotiations were being proceeded with for supplying the electric power required.

TO OBSERVE "CARNEGIE DAY."

Edinburgh, Nov. 12.—The proposal is made and warmly taken up in Scotland that Andrew Carnegie's munificent benefactions should be recognised by Scotsmen by instituting "Carnegie Day," when in Glasgow, Edinburgh, Aberdeen and St. Andrew's, the four university towns, combined civil and academic celebrations should be annually held on the lines of "Colston Day," now established for a century at Bristol.

WONDERFUL SINGING VALLEY.

Berlin, Nov. 12.—One of the most extraordinary natural phenomena in the world has been discovered in a valley watered by a tributary of the river Moselle. The air at different points of this valley vibrates with three distinct musical notes—C major at the entrance, E toward the middle, F at the upper end. The sounds are like those of bells, but as there is no bell within miles of the valley, this cannot be the cause of the sounds. Prof. Gunther, an expert in acoustics, has started for the valley to investigate the phenomenon. Other scientists who have been there favor the theory that the aerial bell-like notes arises from the fall of a stream in the middle of the valley. But why should the sound assume a musical form in this particular valley? The "Singing Valley," is already attracting crowds of curious visitors.

SAW MISS STONE IN MACEDONIA.

Bulgarian Clergyman Returns from Interview with Missionary

SHE MAY BECOME INSANE

Has Had Presentiment That Evil Will Befall Her—Brigand Chief an Albanian—Wants Full Ransom

New York, Nov. 13.—Ivan Mijosheff, a Bulgarian clergyman from Uscub, in Macedonia, has just arrived from visiting Miss Stone, and is now in consultation with Mr. Dickinson, says a Sofia, Bulgaria, despatch to the Journal and Advertiser.

"Miss Stone," he said, "is in the house of Bekir in the town of Cerea, Macedonia. I left her two days ago, coming direct to Mr. Dickinson to try to arrange for her release. Miss Stone and Mme. Tsilka are well, but the strain is terrific, and there is danger that Miss Stone may lose her mind. To be always in the same surroundings is likely to drive her crazy; constantly looking at the same objects has semi-mesmerised her, and she has had a presentiment that evil will befall her.

"The brigand chief informs me that he will now insist on the full ransom, as the length of time Miss Stone has been left on his hands leaves no margin for bargaining. The name of the brigand chief is Dervich Yotsmouns, and he is an Albanian. Bekir Bey, in whose house Miss Stone is confined, is hand in glove with the brigand chief. Bekir Bey assisted the brigands by keeping Miss Stone for thirty days in the mountains before taking her to his house.

"There are about 150 Macedonians imprisoned in connection with the Stone affair by the Turkish officials. I want no personal compensation, but I want the Macedonians released. If the American, the English and the French consuls at Salonica insist upon Bekir Bey releasing Miss Stone it will not be necessary to deal with the brigands, and we can get her released without paying ransom."

WRECKS WORK GREAT HAVOC IN GREAT BRITAIN

Revenue Cutter Active Wrecked in the Firth of Forth, and 23 Drowned

THE DEATH LIST NEARS ONE HUNDRED PERSONS

French Bark Goes Down off Hendon with a Loss of 19—Welsh Lowlands Flooded.

London, Nov. 13.—The gale which has been sweeping over Great Britain and Ireland for the past two days continued unabated at many coast points. Over the Welsh lowlands the torrential rains are increasing, causing disastrous floods. Reports of wrecks and casualties continue to come in. The death list, made up of threes and fours has an aggregate approaching one hundred.

The mail boat Nord has succeeded in returning to Dover. The mails and passengers are safe. The crew of the lightship was also landed this morning after passing a terrible night at sea in a small boat.

The British steamer Stelvio has been beached at Rover. She is high and dry across the Parade.

Early to-day a French bark struck off Hendon. Nineteen of the crew were drowned.

Numerous other wrecks are reported, but the weather in most cases prevents the identification of the craft. Two vessels in distress were sighted yesterday off Dungeness, but the weather was so severe that the lifeboat was unable to put out to their assistance. This morning one of them sank. The other, a steamer, reached West Bay, where a tug is now standing by her.

The revenue cutter Active has been wrecked in the Firth of Forth. Twenty-three of her crew were drowned and three were saved.

Port Townsend, Wn., Nov. 13.—The coast of southeastern Alaska continues to be swept by storms, according to reports brought by the steamer Alki, which has just arrived from Skagway. Strong winds and snowstorms have prevailed almost continually during the past two weeks, and there is much floating ice in the channels. Pilot Bradley, who has been continually on the Alaskan route during the past thirteen years, says the ice floe is larger than ever known before, and he accounts for it as being the result of a severe earthquake of two years ago, which shattered the various glaciers. Since that time the sloughing of icebergs from the glaciers has been very great.

FRENCH CREW PICKED UP.

Buenos Ayres, Nov. 13.—The transport Chaco, which has arrived at this port, reports having picked up at Staten Island, Terra Del Fuego, the captain, the first and the second officers and twenty-one of the crew of the French ship Astree, Captain Juanjean. The Astee had been abandoned Oct. 8, off Cape St. John. Six other members of the crew, who had left the ship in small boats, are missing.

Chaco also picked up the first officer, and two of the crew of the British bark Glencaird, Captain English. The Glencaird was lost off Port Margaret, Staten Island. The captain, the second officer, the third officer and the rest of the crew were drowned.

The Ballot Law

London, Nov. 14.—The question of enforcing the old ballot law or conscription was discussed in the long cabinet conference this week. Many of the Ministers were strongly in favor of putting it in practice, and thus avoiding new legislation.

War Secretary Brodrick has already caused sent out guarded feelers on this matter through the press, for it appears to be almost impossible to keep the home forces up to adequate strength and supply the necessary reinforcements for South African on the volunteer system of enlistment alone, which is about exhausted.

STORM OF PROTEST PROBABLE

Such a drastic measure doubtless will cause a storm of disapproval in Great Britain, and it will not be adopted unless the war situation becomes graver.

What changes have come over the state of the country in two years can be judged from the fact that the War Office has closely examined the old Ballot law and has prepared an elaborate plan by which it can be sprung upon the public at a moment's notice.

The Government's naval policy is soon likely to be brought prominently, and perhaps unpleasantly to public notice, as Admiral Charles Beresford will be relieved soon of his post as second in command of the Mediterranean fleet, and is coming home to enter Parliament.

THE OLD BALLOT LAW.

The old ballot law which may be enforced in Britain provides:

"The Secretary of State is to declare the number of militiamen required, whereupon the Lord Lieutenant is to cause meetings to be held of the lieutenancy for each sub-division. To these meetings the householders of each parish are to send in lists of all male persons between the ages of eighteen and thirty, dwelling in their respective houses. Before the ballot, however, the parish may supply volunteers to fill up its quota,—If a deficiency exists the persons on the list shall be balloted for and double the number of those required to supply the deficiency shall be drawn out.— From the corrected list those who are of the requisite physique (the height is 5 feet 2 inches) are enrolled—until the quota is completed."

Substitutes may be furnished and many classes are exempt—peers, resident members of universities, clergymen, parish schoolmasters, articled clerks, apprentices, seafaring men, crown employees, in England, any poor man with more than one child, in Scotland any man with more than two children if he has less than $250 in property; in Ireland any man not worth $50 who has more than three children under fourteen years.

Carnegie's OFFER

Kingston, Ont., Nov. 13.—Wm. Robinson, ex-M.P.P., writing a letter to the press, says that Dr. Grant of Queen's asked Andrew Carnegie for a donation, and "was promised a handsome gift," but, like all of Mr. Carnegie's gifts, it was safeguarded by conditions. The gift was promised on the understanding that Principal Grant would advocate the annexation of Canada to the United States.

"Do you know what the Principal's answer was? He said, 'I will die first and Queen's shall cease to be ere I accept such conditions.'

"The reply was quite characteristic of the man. He is a loyal British subject, loyal to the Crown, to Canada, to Queen's and to Kingston. Ought we not all to feel proud of him?"

Legislature to Meet

Toronto, Nov. 14.—It is understood that the Legislature will be called together as early as is practicable after the New Year. The 8th of January is spoken of as the possible date of the opening ceremonies.

The writ for the West Huron bye-election was issued yesterday afternoon, the dates being the same as formerly announced, November 27th for nominations and December 4th for polling.

Sixty Hours in an Old Well

Utica, Nov. 13.—Michael Stepanick, a Polish laborer, employed on the farm of John Owens, at New York Mills, spent three days in an old well and lives to tell his experience. Mr. Owens sent Stepanick to Cook for some stray cattle on Tuesday. When he failed to return a search was made for the man, but no trace of him was discovered until Friday afternoon. A boy searching for nuts heard moans coming from an opening in a brush heap. Then came curses, and the boy went to a nearby farmhouse for help. Ira Betts, John Crossman, and George Younger, accompanied the boy to the spot and found the missing Stepanick in the bottom of a 15-foot well. Stepanick was too weak to adjust a rope about himself and Betts and Crossman lowered Younger into the well. Stepanick almost unconscious, was hauled out, and taken to Mr. Owens' home, where he is slowly recovering from his terrible experience.

Stepanick said that in searching for the cattle he started to walk over the brush pile. Then he fell into the deserted well and for several minutes he was stunned. There was about two feet of water in the bottom of the well and there he stood for over sixty hours. His cries for help brought no assistance, and he was unable to climb up the slimy rocks. Stepanick's hands were badly lacerated, and his mind was on the verge of tottering. His good physical condition alone caused him to hold out as long as he did.

FRANCE'S GREAT PROBLEM

Paris, Nov. 14.—The rapid falling off in the birth rate of France has provoked a discussion which has filled the medical and sociological journals, and has even invaded the Chamber of Deputies. In 1874 the birth rate in France was 27.1 per 1,000 population. In 1900 was 21.7. The death rate has not varied so much during the period named, but has kept steadily near 22 per 1,000, and in several years has exceeded the birth rate. The average has been in favor of the death rate, and the last census shows that the population of France has increased only 330,000 during the ten years from 1891 to 1901. Of this increase 292,000 is in the cities and 38,000 in the country, and as the comparison of the birth and death rates show, it must have been entirely from immigration. Indeed, one would think that 330,000 in ten years, or an average of 33,000 a year, would be a very small estimate of the number of immigrants entering the French Republic, and particularly the city of Paris.

During the last fifty years France has gained only 3,000,000 in population, while Italy has gained 12,000,000, Austria 15,000,000, Great Britain 14,000,000, Germany 21,000,000, the United States 54,000,000, and Russia 62,000,000.

There is now a bill pending in the French Chamber of Deputies providing for a graduated tax upon unmarried persons, increasing rapidly in amount upon both women and men between twenty-one and forty years of age.

Weather Notes

Probs: To-day—Fresh to strong southwesterly to northwesterly winds; fair and cold; a few local snowflurries.

The storm has now reached the Maritime Provinces, very stormy conditions being indicated for the Gulf of St. Lawrence and the Atlantic coast. Snow has fallen heavily in some parts of Quebec, colder weather has again set in over the Northwest, promising continued low temperature for Ontario and Quebec.

PETERBOROUGH, NOVEMBER 14, 1901

A NEW MOVEMENT

The old saying that necessity is the mother of invention has once again proved its truth. A new movement has been inaugurated in Toronto by which the various denominations hope to hold their young men. Heretofore athletic Christians have thrown in their active effort with the Y.M.C.A. which has owed its success to its supplying young men with an opportunity to develop physically. There is a craving in the youth of all countries for physical exercise, and taking advantage of this the Y.M.C.A. has brought vast numbers into its fold. To the church these young men yielded still a nominal allegiance, but in many cases it is even less than that. It has been a patent fact for many a day that churches, as Christian Organizations, were losing their vitality: At last it has been brought home to them where the leak is, and henceforth the young of each denomination will be expected to cast in their superfluous physical energy with their own people. Each church will have its own physical nursery in the shape of a gymnasium and physical training school, and the churches will once more resume their natural and proper function of being the centre of religious and physical effort on the part of their own congregations. By so much will the Y.M.C.A. lose, and rightly so, and we may expect in the near future when this movement has taken root, that Y.M.C.A. will become mere registry offices for boarding houses, if even that. There is not now, and there never was, any real necessity for such a surplus of religious effort. Waste of energy is a mild term to use in this connection, and we shall hope to see the various denominations regain their lost vitality and go ahead with some hope of success. It will do away also with many objectionable features such as glaring selfishness and namby-pambyism. Bands of young men were never intended to expend their sweetness and power upon themselves. It is a degrading—not an ennobling life. The thousands of dollars it costs to run a big Y.M.C.A. will now be put into church work. The day of the superfluous Sunday School, with bath and basketball attachment as a separate institution, is gone by.

A WOMAN'S FIGHT FOR LIFE

Nurse Jane Toppan to Answer for Nearly Twenty Deaths

Boston, Mass. Nov. 14.—The hearing in the case of Jane Toppan, the trained nurse, who is charged with poisoning Mrs. Mary E. Gibbs and who is alleged to have poisoned nearly a score of people, which was called at Barnstable this morning, was postponed to November 15. Miss Toppan was neatly dressed in a tailor-made gown of black cloth and wore a large black picture hat.

It is only a stone's throw to the Court house from the jail, and the prisoner walked with her usual jaunty step. Many people were in the Court room, including a dozen newspaper men, who tried unsuccessfully to talk with the prisoner. She was too closely guarded by her counsel.

The Court proceedings did not take five minutes. As soon as they ended Miss Toppan was one of the first to leave the Court room, accompanied by her counsel and the jailer.

SECRET INQUEST HELD.

While this proceeding was taking place at Barnstable the inquest into the deaths of Mrs. Gibbs and of Mrs. Annie G. Gordon, of Chicago, alleged to have been poisoned by Miss Toppan, was begun before Judge Swift, of the First District Court, of Barnstable County, sitting at Buzzard's Bay.

The inquest was conducted behind closed doors, and only one witness at a time was admitted to the Court room, and each was strictly enjoined to maintain secrecy as to the nature of the evidence disclosed. The witnesses who were present were Professor Whitney, of Massachusetts General Hospital, Boston, who assisted at the autopsy held on the bodies of the two women at Cataumet; Dr. R. H. Faunce, of Sandwich, medical examiner for this district, who performed the autopsy; State Officer J. H. Whitney, O. A. Brigham, of Lowell; Mrs. Beulah Jacobs, of Somerville, who was staying at the cottage when Mrs. Gibbs died. Professor Wood, of Harvard University, who chemically analyzed the stomach of the deceased woman, was called, but was not present when the inquest began.

EXPORTATION OF GAS

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 14.—The fight between Canadian officers and employees of the Natural Gas Company over the gas mains under the Detroit River between Detroit and Windsor, did not take place to-day as expected. Sheriff Fler of Essex county, Ontario, has been ordered by Attorney-General Gibson to disconnect the pipes on the Canadian side, but hesitates because he cannot shut off the flow of gas or find any one with authority to do it. The Canadian company says it would be violating its contract with the American company to stop the supply, and the American company says it has no power in the matter.

Meantime Detroiters are consuming gas from the Kingsville, Ontario, wells, which the Government asserts are being rapidly exhausted. The Gas Company have men guarding their mains day and night and the Sheriff will wait for further orders.

Tumor Cured.

"By their fruits ye shall know them." The way to judge of the value of any medicine is by its cures. Apply that test to Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and it is at once lifted high above all other put-up medicines designed for the cure of womanly diseases. Chronic forms of disease which local physicians have failed to cure, and which have yielded to no other treatment, have been perfectly and permanently cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It establishes monthly regularity. It dries debilitating drains. It heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness.

Mrs. Shepshire, of Ballou, Shelby Co., Ohio, writes: "My mother had an ovarian tumor which we thought would result in her death, but we had read your advertisements and we commenced using your 'Favorite Prescription.' We got one dozen bottles to commence with, and before she had taken three bottles she began to improve; she is living to-day and we have given your medicine the credit. My mother was sixty-six years old when the tumor commenced to grow; she is seventy-six now and the tumor is all gone. She had gotten awfully large, and her limbs began to swell before we began to use your 'Favorite Prescription.'"

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure biliousness.

EVERYBODY READS THE TIMES

A Few Pointers That Advertisers Would Do Well to Remember.

Josh Billings: "I luv a rooster for two things—one iz the crow that is in him and the other iz the spurs that air on him to bak up his crow with."

The Times has become a popular paper, not only amongst the people of the town and Ashburnham, but also amongst the residents of the surrounding towns and villages.

Mr. G. B. Hilliard, of Lakefield, says the Times is regarded in Lakefield as the brightest paper that comes to that burg, and is read by very many in the village.

Wm. O'Brien, the genial clerk of Douro, who has long been a subscriber to the daily edition, says that the Times is the popular paper in that township, [illegible] per cent. of the people being readers. He hopes that it may long keep up its onward pace.

Mr. Wm. Gallon, Reeve of Burleigh and Anstruther, states that the whole back country reads the Times, and regard the paper as one of the very best. He says that it is always full of good things.

Mr. P. P. Young, Young's Point, says everybody reads the Times in that locality. It is admirably conducted.

Mr. James Stevenson, ex-M.P., says the Times is the brightest and best newspaper published in Peterborough.

Commodore Calcutt says he would sooner miss his breakfast than miss getting the Times. It is a famous appetizer only equalled by Calcutt's celebrated ale.

Mr. J. B. Thornton, Otonabee, says the Times is very popular in that village and is widely read.

Rev. Mr. Boston thinks the Times deserves great credit for its progressive spirit. It is up-to-date, giving all the news up to four o'clock each morning. North Smith, brought us in a couple of Recently Mr. Sage and another of clubs for the Weekly Times of [illegible] names. There are [illegible] names from one section of Smith, that are constant readers of the Times.

Mr. Harry Garbett, Reeve of Smith, says that the Times is the popular paper in that locality.

Mr. James Baptie, Springville, gives similar evidence, and says you can hardly go into a house in his locality that the Times is not present.

Mr. Pearson, the great horse buyer, of Montreal, told the Times the other day that he has better results from the advertisement in the Times than from any other paper. He says he finds the Times is read by almost everybody in the district. He knows this, for almost every horse he buys is the product of the Times advertisement.

Mr. T. Donaldson, Cavan, member of the Counties' Council of Northumberland and Durham, says that the Times is very popular in Cavan.

Mr. James Chambers, Monaghan, bears similar testimony in regard to Monaghan Township.

Dr. Bingham, the popular city Medical Health Officer, missed his Times the other morning, and came to the office for a copy. He said he was not feeling well, and wondered what was the matter, until he remembered he had not had his Times.

The above and a few of the many evidences we have in our possession of the high regard in which this great family journal is held by the people. Merchants and other advertisers should remember that hundreds upon hundreds of families throughout the town and country cannot be reached by any other way except through the Times.

A TALE OF A CARAVAN

CHAPTER I.

First Glimpse of the Caravan.

The afternoon was still very warm but a gray mist drifting from the Irish Channel, and sailing eastward over the low-lying Island of Anglesea, was beginning to scatter a thin penetrating drizzle on the driver of the Caravan.

To right and left of the highway stretched a bleak and bare prospect of marshland and moorland, closed to the west by a sky of ever-deepening redness, and relieved here and there by black clumps of stunted woodland. The road was as desolate as the prospect, with not a living soul upon it, far as the eye could see. To all this, however, the driver of the caravan paid little attention, owing to the simple fact that he was fast asleep.

He was roused by a sudden jolting and swaying of the clumsy vehicle combined with a sound of splashing water; and, opening his eyes sleepily he perceived that the gray mare had turned aside from the centre of the road, and, having placidly entered a stagnant pond on the road-side, was floundering and struggling in the mud thereof, with the caravan rocking behind her. At the same moment a head was thrust round the back part of the vehicle, and an angry voice exclaimed:

"Tim, you scoundrel, where are you driving to? Wake up, or I'll break every bone in your skin."

Thus addressed, Tim woke himself with an effort, and, looking round with an insinuating smile, replied:

"Begorra, Master Charles, I thought it was an earthquake entirely—Come out of that now! Is it wanting to drownd yourself you are? G-r-r-r! Sh! Aisy now, aisy!"

The latter portion of the above sentence was addressed to the mare which was at last persuaded to wade out of the cool mud, and return to the dusty track, where she stood quivering and panting. No sooner was the return to terra firma accomplished than a light, agile figure descended the steps at the back of the caravan, and ran round to the front. An excited colloquy, angry on the one side, and apologetic on the other, ensued, and did not cease, even when the driver, with a flick of his whip, put the caravan again in motion, while the other strode alongside on foot.

It was just such a caravan as may be seen any summer day forming part of the camp on an English common with the swart face of a gypsy woman looking out at the door, and half a dozen ragged imps and elves rolling on the grass beneath, as may be observed, smothered in wickerwork of all descriptions, or glittering pots and pans, moving from door to door in some sleepy country town, guided by a gloomy gentleman in a velveteen coat and hair-skin cap, and attended by a brawny hussy, also smothered in wickerwork or pots and pans; as, furthermore, may be descried forming part of the procession of a traveling circus, and drawn by a piebald horse, which, whenever a good "pitch" is found, will complete its day's labor by performances in the ring. A caravan of the good old English kind; in short, a house on wheels.

The driver though rough enough, and red with sun and wind, had nothing in common with the ordinary drivers of such vehicles, and, in point of fact, he was neither a gypsy nor a traveling tinker, nor a circus performer. Though it was summer time he wore a large frieze coat, descending almost to his heels, and on his head a wideawake hat —underneath which his lazy, beardless, and somewhat sheepish face shone with indolent good humor. His companion, Master Charles, as he was called, bore still less resemblance to the Bohemians of English lanes and woodlands. He was a slight, handsome, fair-haired young fellow, of two or three and twenty, in the tweed attire of an ordinary summer tourist; and every movement he made, every word he spoke, implied the "gentleman born."

Presently, at a signal from his master, such he was, Tim drew rein again. By this time the sun was setting fiery red, far away to the west, and the thin drizzle was becoming more persistent.

"How far did they say it was to Penerose?"

"Ten miles, sor."

"The mare is tired out, I think. We shall have to camp by the road-side."

"All right, Master Charles. There's a handy shelter beyant there where you see the trees," Tim added, pointing up the road with his whip. The young man looked in that direction, and saw, about a quarter of a mile away, that the highway entered a dark clump of woodland. He nodded assent, and walked rapidly forward, while the caravan followed slowly in his rear.

Reaching the point where the wood began, and entering the shadow of the trees, he soon found a spot well fitted for his purpose. To the left, the road widened out into a grassy patch of common, adorned with one or two bushes of stunted broom, and stretched out a dusty arm, to touch a large white gate, which opened on a gloomy grass-grown avenue winding right through the heart of the wood. The caravan, coming slowly up, was soon placed in a snug position, not far from the gate, the horse was taken out and suffered to graze, while Tim, searching about found some dry sticks, and began to light a fire. Diving into the caravan, the young man re-emerged with a camp-stool, on which he sat down, lighted a meerschaum pipe, and began to smoke. They could hear the rain faintly pattering in the boughs above them, but the spot they had chosen was quite sheltered and dry.

The fire soon blazed up. Entering the caravan in his turn, Tim brought out a tin kettle full of water, and placed it on the fire, preparatory to making tea. He was thus engaged when the sound of a horse's hoof was heard along the highway, and presently the figure of a horseman appeared, approaching at a rapid trot. As it came near the group on the wayside, the horse shied violently, springing from one side of the road to the other, so that its rider, a dark middle-aged man, in an old-fashioned cloak, was almost thrown from the saddle. Uttering a fierce oath, he recovered himself, and, reining in the frightened animal, looked angrily round; then, seeing the cause of the mischance, he forced his horse, with no small difficulty, to approach the figures by the fire.

"Who are you?" he demanded, in harsh, peremptory tones. "What are you doing here?"

The young man, pipe in mouth, looked up at him with a smile, but made no [illegible]

"What are you? Vagrants? Do you know this place is private?"

And he pointed with his riding whip to a printed "Notice!" fixed close to the gate upon the stem of a large fir-tree.

"I beg your pardon," said the young man, with the utmost sang-froid, "we are, I imagine, on the queen's highway, and there, with your permission we purpose to remain for the night."

Struck by the superior manner of the speaker, the new-comer looked at him in some surprise, but with no abatement of his haughty manner. He then glanced at Tim, who was busy with the kettle, from Tim to the gray mare, and from the gray mare to the house on wheels. The scowl on his dark face deepened, and he turned his fierce eyes again on the young man.

"Let me warn you that these grounds are private. I suffer no wandering vagabonds to pass the gate."

"May I ask your name?" said the young man, in the same cool tone, and with the same quiet smile.

"What is my name to you?"

"Well, not much, only I should like to know the title of so very amiable a person."

The other condescended to no reply but walked his horse toward the gate.

"Here, fellow!" he cried, addressing Tim. "Open this gate for me!"

"Don't stir!" said his master. "Let our amiable friend open the gate for himself."

With an angry exclamation the rider leaped from his saddle, and, still holding his horse's reins, threw the gate wide open. Then, still leading his horse, he strode over toward the young man, who, looking up, saw that he was nearly six feet high, and very powerfully built.

"My name is Monk, of Monkshurst," he said. "I've a good mind to teach you to remember it."

"Don't be afraid," was the reply. "Monk, of Monkshurst! I shall be certain not to forget it, Mr. Monk, of Monkshurst! Tim, is the water boiling?"

For a moment Mr. Monk, as he called himself, seemed ready to draw his riding-whip across the young man's face, but, conquering himself, he surveyed him from head to foot with savage anger. Nothing daunted, the young man returned his stare with something very like supreme contempt. At last, muttering beneath his breath, Mr. Monk turned away, and, leading his horse into the avenue, closed the gate, and remounted; but, even then he did not immediately depart, but remained for some minutes, seated in the saddle, scowling over at the encampment.

At last, as if satisfied with his scrutiny, Mr. Monk turned his horse round with a fierce jerk of the rein and rode rapidly away in the shadow of the wood.

CHAPTER II.

"Before setting forth on this memorable pilgrimage to nowhere, I promised a certain friend of mine, in literary Bohemia, to keep notes of my adventures, with a view of future publication, illustrated by my own brilliant sketches. I fear the promise was a rash one, —firstly, because I am constitutionally lazy and adverse to literary exertion, and, secondly, because I have, as yet, met with no adventures worth writing about. Not that I have altogether lost my first enthusiasm for the idea. There would be novelty in the title, at any rate, 'Cruises in a Caravan,' by Charles Brinkley, with illustrations by the author; photographic frontispiece, the Caravan, with Tim as large as life, smirking self-consciously in delight at having his pictur' taken. My friend B—— has promised to find me a publisher, if I will only persevere. Well, we shall see. If the book does not progress, it will be entirely my own fault; for I have any amount of time on my hands. Paint as hard as I may all day, I have always the long evenings, when I must either write, read, or do nothing.

"So I am beginning this evening exactly a fortnight after my first start from Chester. I purchased the caravan there from a morose individual, with one eye, who had it built with a view to the exhibition of a Wild Man of Patagonia; but said Wild Man having taken it into his head to return to County Cork where he was born, and the morose individual having no definite idea of a novelty to take his place, the caravan came into the market. Having secured this traveling palace, duly furnished with window-blinds, a piece of carpet, a chair bedstead, a table, a stove, cooking utensils, not to speak of my own artistic paraphernalia, I sent over to Mulranny, County Mayo, for my old servant, Tim-na-Chalnig, or Tim o' the Ferry —otherwise Tim Linney; and with his assistance, when he arrived, I purchased a strong mare at Chester fair. All these preliminaries being settled, we started one fine morning soon after daybreak, duly bound for explorations along the macadamized highways and byways of North Wales.

"I am pleased to say that Tim, after he had recovered the first shock of seeing a peripatetic dwelling house, took to the idea wonderfully. 'Sure it's just the old cabin at home,' he averred, 'barrin' the wheels, and the windies, and the chimley, and the haste to pull it along'; and I think the resemblance would have been complete in his eyes, if there had only been two or three pigs to trot merrily behind the back door. As for myself, I took to the nomad life as naturally as if I had never in my life been in a civilized habitation. To be able to go where one pleases, to dawdle as one pleases, to stop and sleep where one pleases, was certainly a new sensation. My friends, observing my sluggish ways, had often compared me to that interesting creature the snail; now, the resemblance was complete, for I was a snail, indeed, with my house comfortably fixed up on my shoulders, crawling tranquilly along.

"Of course, the caravan has its inconveniences. Inside, to quote the elegant simile of our progenitors, there is scarcely room enough to swing a

ITEMS OF INTEREST

London, Nov. 12.—Violent winds, rain and snow storms are reported from all the coasts of the United Kingdom. A fierce gale is blowing in the channel and mountainous seas are running. No less than half a dozen small vessels within sight of Dover are flying signals of distress and the life boats are vainly attempting to go to their rescue. A rocket apparatus has been sent to the South Foreland where an Admiralty vessel is on the rocks, with the crew clinging to the rigging. Several vessels have been dismasted and tugs are running craft which were driving ashore. At other channel ports there have been similar exciting scenes. Ships everywhere are running for shelter.

The steamer Cato collided with the British ship Loch Vennachar, Captain Sunnet, at the mouth of the Thames. The latter foundered, but the crew were saved. Wild weather prevails over the lake district. The first snow is falling on the Westmoreland hills. The seas are so high off the Tyne that shipping has been stopped. Even river traffic is partially suspended and hundreds of men are idle. There have been a number of wrecks on the Sunderland coast.

HORSES THAT EAT FLESH.

London, Nov. 12.—Ex-Senator Thurston has a consignment of wild animals on its way from the interior of Asia for his Nebraska farm, which he will also exhibit at the St. Louis Exposition. A friend in Turkestan secured for him two vicious, wild Thibetan horses whose appetite is satisfied only by sheep chickens and small game. They devour flesh like a tiger or a lion, and Mr. Thurston will have to feed them porterhouse steaks as well as baled hay.

WEIRD TALE OF THE SEA.

Paris, Nov. 12.—A weird tale of the sea comes from the Mediterranean. The French brig Tourney was dismasted and waterlogged by a storm. The crew were taken off with the exception of one sailor, Denis, who refused to leave the vessel in the hope of getting the salvage. The wreck was hailed by a British steamer, the Syrian Prince. Denis, although he was in a high fever and had slept only six hours in nine days, still refused to leave the vessel, but accepted the steamer's offer to tow the brig, and she was taken to Algiers. Denis claims half her value as salvage, but the captain of the British steamer claims the whole brig as derelict. The Maritime Commissioner at Algiers accuses the crew of the steamer of pillaging the brig.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 12.—Russia will spend next year only 21 copecks (about 10 cents) per capita for educational purposes. Yet, in addition to the enormous drain caused by the Siberian Railway, $56,000,000 is to be spent on new strategic railways to the Prussian and Austrian frontiers, railways that have only a military purpose and aim.

Ottawa, Nov. 12.—A Montreal deputation, including Messrs. Bedford, Ternance, Allan and Harling, waited on Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his colleagues at half past twelve to-day. Their object was to press forward the Montreal harbor and St. Lawrence improvements between Montreal and Quebec. After the case had been fully presented Mr. Tarte made a statement of what was being done, and said only thirty miles of dredging remained to be completed, when the entire distance would be thirty feet in depth at the lowest state of the river. As to lighting, it could be done by electricity and would only cost half a million, and what was half a million to ensure safe navigation. Hon. James Sutherland, Acting Minister of Marine, said he would look closely into all the papers and report to the Cabinet.

QUEEN ALEXANDRA

To Wear a Diamond Worth $700,000—By Order of the King

London, Nov. 12.—Queen Alexandra will wear the famous Koh-I-Noor diamond at the coronation ceremony. King Edward has decided to have the jewel mounted in the Queen's crown for that occasion.

Koh-I-Nor, ("Mountain of Light), a diamond once called the "Great Mogul," was, according to Indian tradition, obtained before the Christian era, from one of the mines of Golconda. At the beginning of the Christian era it passed to the successive sovereigns of Central India and in the early part of the 14th century, it was added to the treasures of Delhi by the monarch Aladdin. It belonged in the seventeenth century to Aurungzebe, the Great. The Shah Jihair sent it to Hortensio Borjio to be cut, but the Venetian lapidary reduced it from 793 5-8 carats to 186, and left it dull and lustreless. It next passed into the hands of Aurungzebe's great-grandson, who hid it in his turban. Nadir Shah invited the possessor to a feast and insisted on exchanging turbans "to cement their love," and thus it fell into Nadir's hands, who gave it the name of "Koh-I-noor." After the assassination of Nadir it passed into the hands of Ahmed Shah, founder of the Cabul dynasty; it was then extorted from Shah Shujah, by his conqueror, Runjeet Singh, who wore it set in a bracelet. After the murder of Shu Singh, it was deposited in the Lahore treasury and after the annexation of the Punjaub, was presented by the East India Company, to Queen Victoria, July 3rd, 1850. The gem was recut in 1852 and though reduced to 106 carats, is supposed to be worth $7,000,000. There is another diamond of the same name belonging to the Shah of Persia.

It is a popular misconception to suppose that the Koh-I-noor is the most precious diamond in the world. The Pitt diamond, owned by Mr. Pitt, Governor of Madras, is worth $1,000,000. A splendid diamond found in Brazil is called "Star of the South." It weighs 254 1-2 carats. The King of Portugal also owns a famous diamond from Brazil. If genuine, its value should be $28,000,000, as it weighs 1,680 grains.

A MARVELLOUS MEDICINE

"No Cure, No Pay," is the Newest Proposal of the Proprietors of Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—We make the following proposal to the readers of the Times: To any one who is a subject of rheumatism (no matter how long standing) or any blood disease, as enumerated below, and will give Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills a fair trial and do not find a perfect cure, we will refund the money paid for the pills. If no substantial improvement is observed, we will in addition, pay $10 in cash on satisfactory evidence being supplied us to this effect.

We have yet to know of a single case where these wonderful pills have not been almost entirely successful in effecting a cure. CANADA CHEMICAL CO.

Ex-Ald. Bailey, St. John's, writes: I cannot speak too highly of Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills. They worked a miracle in my case, and cured me after many years of suffering. I do not think their equal is to be obtained.

Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills are a positive and certain cure for la grippe, rheumatism, asthma, paralysis, catarrh, eczema, coughs, backache, indigestion, all stomach and liver troubles, female complaints, even when the diseases having been standing for many years, the most stubborn cases will yield. Price 50 cents per box. For sale by Ormond & Walsh. The Canada Chemical Company will forfeit $10 for any case that these pills do not help.

Dr. Clarke's Sure Cure for Catarrh, and Dr. Clarke's Sure Cure for Eczema same price. $10 will be paid for any case they will not permanently cure.

South African Affairs.

London, Nov. 12.—Lord Kitchener, in a despatch, from Pretoria, dated Monday, Nov. 11, presents his weekly report and incidentally locates Gen. De Wet in the northeastern part of the Orange River Colony. He says the Boers have recently been collecting under his leadership and that the British are now moving to disperse them. Lord Kitchener gives the Boer casualties since November 4th as 65 killed, 105 wounded, 104 captured, and 45 surrendered.

ANTI-BRITISH MEETINGS.

London, Nov. 12.—According to the correspondent of the Daily Mail at Cradock, Lord Kitchener has ordered the summary execution of all Boers wearing khaki uniforms. The action of Colonel Gorringe some days ago is thus duly explained.

INSTIGATING MEETINGS.

Berlin, Nov. 12.—The object of the visit of Dr. Leyds and other Transvaal delegates to this city is surmised to be the instigation of Anti-British meetings. Meetings to protest against the tenor of Mr. Chamberlain's speech at Edinburgh have been held at Leipzig and other towns recently, at which resolutions were adopted and forwarded to Chancellor Von Bulow.

BENSON'S COSTLY STAND.

London, Nov. 12.—Additional casualty lists cabled from South Africa bring the totals in the attack on Colonel Benson's rearguard up to 22 officers and men killed, and 213 wounded. The list includes the name of Lieut-Col Doran, who was severely wounded.

RELIEF.

There is nothing like Asthmalene. It brings instant relief, even in the worst cases. It cures when all else fails.

The Rev. C. F. WELLS, of Villa Ridge, Ill., says: "Your trial bottle of Asthmalene received in good condition. I cannot tell you how thankful I feel for the good derived from it. I was a slave, chained with putrid sore throat and Asthma for ten years. I despaired of ever being cured. I saw your advertisement for the cure of this dreadful and tormenting disease, Asthma, and thought you had overspoken yourselves, but resolved to give it a trial. To my astonishment, the trial acted like a charm. Send me a full-size bottle."

REV. DR. MORRIS WECHSLER
Rabbi of the Cong. Bnai Israel.
NEW YORK, Jan. 3, 1901.

DRS. TAFT BROS.' MEDICINE CO.:

Gentlemen: Your Asthmalene is an excellent remedy for Asthma and Hay Fever, and its composition alleviates all troubles which combine with asthma. Its success is astonishing and wonderful.

After having it carefully analyzed, we can state that Asthmalene contains no opium, morphine, chloroform or ether. Very truly yours,

REV. DR. MORRIS WECHSLER.

AVON SPRINGS, N. Y., Feb. 1, 1901.

DR. TAFT BROS. MEDICINE CO.

Gentlemen: I write this testimonial from a sense of duty, having tested the wonderful effect of your Asthmalene, for the cure of Asthma. My wife has been afflicted with spasmodic asthma for the past 12 years. Having exhausted my own skill as well as many others, I chanced to see your sign upon your windows on 130th street, New York. I at once obtained a bottle of Asthmalene. My wife commenced taking it about the 1st of November. I very soon noticed a radical improvement. After using one bottle her asthma has disappeared and she is entirely free from all symptoms. I feel that I can consistently recommend the medicine to all who are afflicted with this distressing disease. Yours respectfully,

O. D. PHELPS, M. D.

DR. TAFT BROS. MEDICINE CO.

Gentlemen: I was troubled with Asthma for 22 years. I have tried numerous remedies but they have all failed. I ran across your advertisement and started with a trial bottle. I found relief at once. I have since purchased your full-size bottle and I am ever grateful. I have a family of four children and for six years was unable to work. I am now in the best of health and am doing business every day. This testimony you can make such use of as you see fit.

The new Constitutional treatment not only eradicates the disease, but restores the exhausted strength.

A great many people suffering from Cancers and Tumors, find their strength rapidly slipping away. These horrible diseases undermine the health and sap the vitality.

To operate or use plasters, simply means further exhaustion. The new Constitutional treatment, instead of weakening, actually builds up the strength and invigorates the entire system, not only this, but it arrests the progress of the disease and entirely eliminates every particle of the Cancer poison from the system. It is a pleasant treatment, can done be taken at home, without pain or inconvenience.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

Local Happenings Picked Up Here and There by The Times.

NOTE.—The Times requests its readers to contribute items of news to its columns. Anything that is phoned or sent in writing to the office, of a nature suitable for publication, will be received and published.—Ed. Times.

—A burning chimney at the residence of ex-Mayor Yelland, McDonnell street, yesterday afternoon caused no damage, but gave the fire team a run.

—There is no news in regard to the street railway deal. On Monday there was an enquiry by telephone from the syndicate in regard to a certain matter. But the deal is not yet concluded.

—A man named George A. Weschter, a native of Caldwell, Ohio, a glass blower by occupation, had a blow out of another kind, and was gathered in by the police. He was fined $10 and costs.

—The Royal chorus is being photographed at Whiten's. The photo will be a valuable souvenir to remember when the Royal chorus sang before the future King and Queen of England.

—Mr. Tad Cavanagh has gone to Ottawa to take another gang of men to the North Shore for the McArthur Lumber Co. This will be the fifth trip of a similar character for Mr. Cavanagh to take this season.

—Lindsay is building a new fire hall.

—Steamers on the upper waters are busily engaged in towing wood to Lindsay. A large part of this business will come to Peterborough next year, when the canal is opened to Warsaw road.

—Among the many elegant and costly presents received by Mr. Gus Hay and his bride, Miss Rosamond Fox, on Tuesday last, was a beautiful porcelain clock and a pretty chafing dish from the employees of the Stanley Piano Co., of which Mr. Hay is accountant. The beautiful present was accompanied by expressions of warm congratulations and good wishes.

—Lindsay Post: Our town hunters appear to be having great luck this season. The Reeves-Nixon party at Long Lake, Harvey, had ten deer last Friday, the Sinclair-Sadler party, at Anson, had a tally of 13 on Thursday morning, and the McConnell-Miller at Kennisis Lake, north of Haliburton, had captured 17 up till Saturday. Venison will be a drug in the market when the hunters return.

—This is the practical age. The Cannington Gleaner notes that on the occasion of a recent "hop" on one of the concession lines in that vicinity a large number of young people wished to attend, but horses could not be secured. Acting on a bright thought, the traction engine of a threshing machine was steamed up and presently steamed off with a long line of waggons filled with a jolly crowd of lads and lasses.

—The fruit table at the coming meeting of the Ontario Fruit Growers' Association in Cobourg ought to be of considerable interest. In addition to fruit contributed by fruit growers about Cobourg and other parts of Ontario, Mr. W. H. Bunting, the superintendent of the Ontario fruit exhibit at the Pan-American, writes that he will bring a fine collection from the tables, including a bushel of cold storage apples now over a year harvested.

TO CURE A COLD IN ONE DAY

Take Laxative Bromo Quinine Tablets. All druggists refund the money if it fails to cure. E. W. Grove's signature is on each box. 25c

Ranton Again

Rev. A. H. Ranton, who conducted revival meetings in Peterborough some few years ago, and who became notorious on account of his violent language in regard to dancing, is holding revival meetings at Owen Sound. Mr. Ranton, it is said, is working east, and may show up again in Peterborough before the winter is over.

New Insurance Man

Mr. V. E. Austen, formerly with the Bank of Toronto, here, has accepted the position of General Agent for Peterborough, Victoria, Haliburton and North Ontario, for the popular and progressive London Life Assurance Company. Mr. Austen may be found at the office of the Company, Water street.

The Opera House Last Night

There was another large audience at the Opera House last night to witness the famed drama of "A Woman Wronged," which was presented with marked success by the Marks Bros.' Dramatic Company. The Company has become very popular with theatre-goers.

A Missionary Meeting

A missionary meeting under the auspices of St. Paul's and St. Andrew's congregations will be held in St. Paul's church on Wednesday evening next, Nov. 20, at eight p.m. Addresses will be delivered by the Rev. Dr. Robertson, Superintendent of the missions of the Northwest; Rev. J. A. McDonald, editor of the Westminster, and Mr. John Penman, of Paris. This will be a favorable opportunity for the public of Peterborough to hear the many phases of missionary work from such able speakers. Special singing by St. Paul's choir. A hearty invitation is extended to all.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Events Under This Head Transpiring in and Around Peterborough.

NOTE.—The Times requests its readers to furnish the paper with items of a personal and social nature either by phone or in writing.—Ed. Times.

—Mr. Fred Dover, town, was in Lindsay on Monday.

—Mr. M. S. Kennedy has gone to New York on business.

—Mr. Wm. Anderson, the Liberal candidate in East Peterborough, was in town yesterday.

—Messrs. F. Bailey, of Toronto, and W. G. Morrow have returned from a few days' deer hunting as members of the Morrow-Winch party, at Lake Kasshabog.

—The Times was pleased to have a call yesterday from Mr. George McBroom, the genial Superintendent of Agencies of the London Life Assurance Company, who is in town on business connected with this popular concern. Mr. McBroom was accompanied by Mr. George Lee, the popular district superintendent and Mr. V. E. Austin.

The County Assessment

Messrs. Hawthorne and Edmison, the two valuators appointed by the county to make a new valuation of the county for the assessment have completed their work in the townships. They are finishing in Otonabee on the northwest corner. They have to do their work in the villages yet.

Laid at Rest

The funeral of the late Mrs. Morgan, who died on Saturday last, was attended by a large number of sympathizing and sorrowing friends. Rev. Dr. Torrance conducted an impressive funeral service at Marks Street Church, from whence the cortege proceeded to St. Mark's, Otonabee, where the interment took place. The pallbearers were Messrs. Peter Glover, Wm. Scott, J. C. Sullivan, F. Adams, E. A. Peck and A. Fitzgerald. Mrs. Morgan was beloved by all who knew her, and her death is generally deplored.

G. T. R. Revenue Increasing

The earnings of the Grand Trunk Railway System for the week ending November 7, 1901, were $552,912. During the corresponding week of 1900 they were $539,714, the increase being $13,198.

Royal Train Coming

The royal train which carried the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and York on their tour through Canada will be exhibited by the Canadian Pacific Railway at a number of the principal cities and towns throughout Ontario during this month. While the date is not absolutely arranged, it is expected that the train will reach Toronto about the 28th. Among the places that will probably be visited are: Tweed, Norwood, Peterborough, Toronto, Hamilton, Guelph, Galt, Woodstock, St. Thomas, London, Chatham, Windsor, Detroit, Brampton, Fergus, Elora, Orangeville, Mount Forest, Wingham, Teeswater, Shelburne, Flesherton, Markdale and Owen Sound. The Canadian Pacific Railway is charging 25 cents to see and inspect the train, but the revenue derived from this is not retained by the company, being divided equally among the different Protestant and Catholic charitable institutions in those places where the train is exhibited.

Dismissed With Costs

The following paragraph is in regard to a case of local interest which came up in the Trial Court at Osgoode Hall, Toronto, before Chief Justice Falconbridge, Monday:

Dunlop vs. Perth Mutual Fire Insurance Co.—Judgment (G.A.B.) in action tried at Peterborough, brought to recover amount of loss by fire to certain goods insured under a policy issued by defendants. The Chief Justice finds that the plaintiff in his application misrepresented the cash value of the goods, which was a misrepresentation of a fact material to be made known to defendants, preferring to accept the evidence of the local agent; and further finds that the circumstances of the case were sufficiently suspicious to justify defendants in setting up any and every technical defense. The certificate of the notary public acting for plaintiff is not a compliance with demand of defendants, and they may amend their defense, if necessary. Action dismissed with costs. D. W. Dumble (Peterborough) and L. P. de Lapienne (Peterborough) for plaintiff. J. P. Mabee, K.C., and G. G. McPherson, K.C., for defendants.

KEEN COLLEGE MEN

The Food of Harvard Brain Workers and Athletes.

Memorial Hall at Harvard where some twelve hundred of the men eat, is particularly interesting. The dining-room is an enormous gothic hall finished in old English oak with wide, stained-glass windows on the sides. The walls are hung with portraits of illustrious graduates and benefactors of past generations.

The students have good food to eat and plenty of it. The hall is run on a co-operative plan so that it costs something less than four dollars a week for board. To this place three times a day come men, whose lives for the time being are given to serious intellectual work, and to accomplish this, they are keen enough to realize that proper food is absolutely necessary.

One is particularly struck by the yellow packages of Grape-Nuts standing on nearly every table, which the men purchase at grocery stores and bring in for their personal use. They quickly find out by practical demonstration that brain work exhausts the phosphates, and that nature demands that this loss be made up, and made up from food.

Grape-Nuts is ready to be used without cooking, it is a scientific food which nourishes and builds up the brain, and is particularly suited to the needs of students.

The 'Varsity athletes also eat it to keep their digestive organs in perfect working order so that they can stand the great strain of both body and head-work when important contests shall come.

WRECKED CHEESE FACTORY

Further Particulars Regarding the Boiler Explosion at Norwood

Mr. Buck, the salesman for the Norwood cheese factory, was in town yesterday and gave particulars regarding the boiler explosion. The four walls of the factory were blown outward and the roof came down on the wreck. Part of the boiler was carried 300 yards.

The young man Moffatt was terribly injured and died in about three hours. Mr. Oakley, the owner of the factory, escaped death only by mere chance, as he had just gone to the north door of the building. Had he been inside he would certainly have been killed. As it is he was severely shaken up, but his injuries will not be serious.

Mr. Thomas Robson and his son had just finished loading their wagon with cheese when the explosion came. They escaped injury, but their horses ran away with the load of cheese. They were caught in the swamp.

The loss will be over $1,000, and there will be no insurance. The curing room escaped serious damage, and so did the cheese that were stored there.

The boiler was larger than that usually used in a cheese factory. Mr. Oakley and the young man who was killed looked after it.

The factory was owned by Mr. Wm. Oakley and will no doubt be rebuilt at once.

OUR NEW SERIAL

Be Sure and Read the Opening Chapters of Our New Story!

To-day we begin the thrilling story, entitled "Matt." It is a story full of interest and adventures, and is well worth reading.

The Times, in future, will cater more to this class of reading than it has done in the past. We have for some time been using a "Short Story of the Day." This will be continued as often as possible, but a continued story will be a feature hereafter.

IT WAS "SILENT" JOHN

Body Found in a Well in Otonabee Has Been Identified

Since the body found in the well in Otonabee has been embalmed and prepared for burial, it has been viewed by a number of persons who quite positively identify it as that of "Silent John" Cooper. Chief Rozell and Officer Adams are satisfied the body is that of the man Cooper. The Chief says that in 1895 he was arrested for frightening some children who were picking berries and was committed to the Central Prison for six months on the charge of vagrancy. Another time he was arrested for loitering about a barn in town. He lived in barns in Otonabee all last summer. He was regarded as of unsound mind. It is not certain whether the death was suicidal or accidental. The deceased was an Englishman and as far as known had no friends in this country. The body will remain at Belleghem's to-day, in case a claimant should appear.

GORED TO DEATH BY BULL

FRANK LEE MEETS A HORRIBLE DEATH IN ASHPODEL

Not Known How the Accident Occurred—The Deceased Was an Englishman.

News comes from Asphodel of the shocking death of an old man named Frank Lee on the farm of Mr. F. Birdsall last Saturday.

Just how the accident occurred will never be known. Capt. Birdsall went to the barn, and on opening the door found that a two-year-old Jersey bull had broken loose. He closed this door and went to another to call the old man, who he knew had gone to the barn ahead of him. He received no answer to his call and then became alarmed. He entered the stable and drove the bull into its stall. Then he made a ghastly discovery. On the floor, with life extinct, was the body of the hired man lying in a pool of blood. The unfortunate man had been most brutally gored by the bull and had lived only a few minutes. Jerseys bulls are proverbially treacherous and it is supposed that the old man was somehow taken unawares.

The deceased was an Englishman past middle age. He had no relatives about here and little is known about him. For four years past he has worked for Mr. Birdsall in the winter. In the spring he would go away and remain all summer, no one seems to know where.

The remains were buried on Monday.

Needed No Nerve Tonic

He had called on a local physician and reported that he was "knocked out generally." As he took the prescription, he said:

"Well, doctor, what do I owe you?"

"Two dollars."

"I'm sorry I can't pay you to-day. You won't mind waiting a while, will you?"

"No; that's all right."

"And, doctor, how much will this prescription cost?"

"About $1."

"Say, doc, you couldn't lend me a dollar to get it with, could you? I'm dead broke."

"Let me look at that prescription again," said the physician. He took it, examined it, and erased a line.

"I had prescribed something for your nerve," he said, "but I see you don't need it."

STARVING OUT REBELS

Catbalogan, Island of Samar, Nov. 14.—The native peace commissioners are insisting that the insurgent leaders who have surrendered shall return from the interior.

It is reported that the insurgents have been concentrating in northern and central Samar since Tuesday in obedience to Lukban's proclamation. It is said that they are considering making a complete surrender, but this is very doubtful. The peace commissioners have made no arrangements for the acceptance of surrenders from scattered commands owing to Lukban's threat to kill all who communicate with the Americans.

The blockade is causing a terrible famine in the interior. It is impossible for the natives there to get rice, and they are subsisting on herbs.

Gens. Hughes and Smith have arrested 200 head men in Samar and Leyte on complaint that they were conspiring against the Americans.

What makes you Despondent?—Has the stomach gone wrong? Have the nerve centres grown tired and listless? Are you threatened with nervous prostration? South American Nervine is nature's corrector, makes the stomach right, gives a world of nerve force, keeps the circulation perfect. A regular constitution builder for rundown people. PETERBORO CHEESE BOARD

THE WHOLE OCTOBER MAKE BOARDED AND SOLD

The Board Totalled 6,340 Boxes at the Ruling Price Was 8 13 16c

The Cheese Board met for the last sale this season yesterday morning, in the Council Chamber, when the whole of the October make was boarded, there being no sale at the last meeting, when the first half was boarded. The buyers present were Messrs. Fitzgerald, Whitton, Wrighton, Rollins, Cook and Kerr.

The factories boarded as follows, the total boxes being 6,340:

Keene	150
Warminster	215
Shearer	75
Central Smith	300
North Smith	105
Villiers	90
Warsaw	240
Westwood	150
Oakdale	130
Missing Link	105
[illegible]	80
Melrose Abbey	111
Lakefield	270
Pine Grove	155
Peterborough	107
Otonabee Union	50
Maple Leaf	230
Myrtle	221
Ormonde	230
Young's Point	115
Lang	350
Fraserville	155
Indian River	90
North Dummer	100
Ballyduff	70
East Emily	215
Trewern	225
Bensfort	155
Cedardale	128
Stony Lake	83
Cavanville	340
Mt. Pleasant	171
Norwood	150
Fleetwood	300
Oak Leaf	73
Buckhorn	200
South Burleigh	87
Brickley	60
Shamrock	80
Total	6,340

Mr. Whitton bids $1.4c as a starter, and Mr. Rollins made it $ 2.4c, which was raised by Mr. Cook to $1.2c. Mr. Whitton made it $ 2.4c, and Mr. Fitzgerald raised to $12.16c, and Central Smith, Myrtle, Fraserville, Trewern, East Emily, Cavanville, Fleetwood, Mt. Pleasant and Missing Link accepted.

Mr. Fitzgerald bid $2.4c for further selections. Mr. Whitton raised this to $12.16, and secured Westwood, Villiers, Keene and Bensfort. Ormonde refused.

Mr. Whitton then bid $2.4c for further selections, and Mr. Cochrane for Mr. Mauss jumped it to $2.4c, and Brickley, Melrose Abbey, Shamrock and Ormonde sold.

Mr. Whitton again bid $2.4c, but Mr. Cook raised it to $12.16c, and Lakefield and Lang accepted.

Mr. Cook then bid $2.4c for further selections, and Norwood, Otonabee Union and Warsaw accepted, but Indian River, Peterborough, Pine Grove and Maple Leaf refused.

Mr. Cook bid [illegible] for further selections, Mr. Fitzgerald raised to [illegible] and Mr. Kerr to [illegible]. At this figure he secured North Smith, Pine Grove, Young's Point and Peterborough.

Mr. Kerr bid $2.4c, which Mr. Rollins raised to $12.16c, and Oakdale, Dummer, Maple Leaf and North Dummer sold.

Mr. Rollins bid [illegible] for further selections, and Cedardale, Stony Lake, South Burleigh, Oak Leaf, Buckhorn and Indian River sold.

Mr. Fitzgerald took Ballyduff at $2.4 subject to Montreal inspection.

Mr. Cook thought some of the factories had sold the first half of October make off the Board, and he wanted somebody fined, but no action was taken.

Mr. Riddell suggested that a committee, composed of the Executive, Mr. Anderson, and the makers of Lakefield and Warsaw factories, be appointed to revise the rules of the Board.

Mr. Cook did not think the Board rules required any revision. The rules were all right as they were, and were sought all over the Province as a guide. He thought the rules against selling off the Board might be more stringently enforced.

Mr. Anderson claimed that he had not sold his factory's cheese off the Board. He had written the maker, and told him what Mr. Whitton had offered him, and told the maker he could sell or not, as he liked.

Mr. Galvin thought there should be a remedy for this sort of thing, and the rules left as they were and observed.

Mr. Riddell's motion was not pressed, and he followed it up with a suggestion that the buyers entertain the salesmen at an oyster supper. This was received with evidences of approbation.

The thanks of the Board were tendered to the Mayor and Council for the use of the Chamber.

The Board then adjourned for the season.

SOME POSITIVE PROOFS

What is Being Told of Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills—No Cure No Pay.

Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills cured me of kidney trouble of many years' standing, and after I had tried every other known remedy. Joseph Begley, Caledonia ave., Rochester, N.Y.

I was afflicted with rheumatism so badly at times that I could not walk. Nothing I took did me much good, until I tried Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills. Five boxes cured me entirely.

I had the misfortune to have suffered some years ago from paralysis, sustaining no less than three strokes. I could get nothing to do me any good until I was induced to try Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills. I took nine boxes, and although not by any means well, I think I am in a fair way to recovery. I can now walk with the aid of a stick and feel myself getting better every day. M. F. Mann, Merlin, N.Y.

Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills permanently cured me of Backache, I suffered for years, and took two boxes. That is a year ago. I have not had a symptom since. James R. Jackson, Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.

I do not believe there is a medicine to compare with Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills. They cured me of indigestion and catarrh of the stomach, after nine years' suffering. A. S. Macdonald, G.T.R. Shops, Montreal.

Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills are a positive and certain cure for la grippe, rheumatism, asthma, paralysis, catarrh, eczema, coughs, headache, indigestion, all stomach and liver troubles, female complaints, even when the diseases have been standing for many years the most stubborn cases will yield. Price 50 cents per box. For sale by Ormond & Walsh. The Canada Chemical Company will forfeit $10 for any case that these pills do not help.

Dr. Clarke's Sure Cure for Catarrh, and Dr. Clarke's Sure Cure for Eczema, same price. $10 will be paid for any case they will not permanently cure.

Germans to Erect Monument for De Wet---Col. Steel's Command

MANY NATIVES SLAUGHTERED BY BOERS.

The Boers Said to Have 10,000 Men in the Field—Lord Kitchener to be Provided With Fresh Troops

London, Nov. 14.—In a speech at the City Carlton Club last night, British War Secretary Brodrick made a declaration that the Boers were hiding their tracks by slaughtering the natives as they moved about the country. Among the recent atrocities committed by the Boers among the blacks and reported by Lord Kitchener, Mr. Brodrick stated that two dead blacks with their hands bound behind them had been found on November 10 last at the bottom of a mine shaft.

Mr. Brodrick stated that he believed the number of Boers still in the field was about ten thousand. Forty-two thousand were now in custody in the concentration camps and eleven thousand had either been killed or wounded or had left the country on parole.

"The country has set its teeth and intends to go through the process of wearing down," he exclaimed. "We intend to provide Lord Kitchener with fresh troops to replace the tired ones. Only to-day a certain colony made an offer to help."

The Secretary expressed his sorrow for Sir Redvers Buller. The Duke of Connaught had given him authority to state that his nearness to the throne would not affect his service on the field, if such services were desired. Sir Evelyn Wood's deafness would not affect his work as commander of an army corps.

Mr. Brodrick claimed that 14,700 square miles of the Transvaal and 17,000 square miles of the Orange River Colony were secure from the Boers by the blockhouse system. He instanced the increased security of the railways, which were cut 22 times in October, 1900, and not once in October, 1901.

The statement made ten days ago, in regard to the despatch of more troops from home, and the relief of units that had borne more than their share of the heat and burden of the day by reinforcements from India, was corroborated by Mr. Brodrick.

DID BRODRICK MEAN CANADA?

Ottawa, Nov. 14.—Mr. Brodrick's reference in London to the offer of a contingent for Africa by one of the colonies is understood to refer to Canada. No confirmation can be obtained in official quarters, but there is reason to believe an unofficial reminder has reached Mr. Brodrick that whilst the offer made by Canada last spring has not been accepted, it still remains open. There is considerable disappointment that the War Office has not yet taken advantage of Canada's offer, and it is hoped Brodrick's speech may be the fore-runner of an acceptance.

GERMANS ERECT MONUMENT.

Berlin, Nov. 14.—On Sunday next Germans will unveil with appropriate ceremonies in the village of Schierstein, a monument erected to the memory of Christian DeWet, the Boer guerilla chieftain. The monument which was designed by Prof. Pfretzschner, of Berlin, is inscribed: "In Pride and Honor, to our Valiant Brother in Blood, Captain in the East Prussian Army." Accompanying this inscription is the following sentiment: "Why the intrepid DeWet, the Blucher of the Boers, achieve what every man whose heart is in the right spot hopes for—a free and eternal Boer Empire."

London, Nov. 14.—Dr. Leigh Canney, a noted physician, has evolved a scheme by the operation of which he hopes to abolish typhoid, dysentry and cholera in future campaigns. He proposes to equip a trained water corps with cylindrical portable water boilers, to be heated by petroleum, the apparatus weighing in all about thirty-eight pounds. This corps will perform the exclusive service of providing the troops with approved water. Dr. Conan Doyle, the well known author, who accompanied the troops through South Africa, considers the plan absolutely impracticable. He says: "The real obstacle to the success of Dr. Canney's plan is the hopelessness of attempting to induce thirsty soldiers to examine water before drinking and to reject it if it is bad. By the time such an educational feat has been accomplished the nations will no longer practice war."

London, Nov. 14.—A Times' correspondent says that considerable progress has been made in the operations against the Boers and Cape Rebels in Cape Colony. The work of clearing the districts is necessarily slow, owing to the extensive sympathy manifested by the residents. Requirements of the British are more horses and greater mobility.

Montreal, Nov. 14.—In a letter written to a friend in Montreal, Lieut.-Col. Steele says he is now in command of two divisions of South African Constabulary, aggregating 5,000 men, with headquarters in Pretoria. The men are English enlisted, but there are two Canadian officers under his command. A portion of his division did the scouting for Kekewich on a recent successful expedition. The colonel is quartered in former President Kruger's official residence.

A BIG RAILWAY DEAL

THE KINGSTON AND PEMBROKE TAKEN OVER BY C. P. R.

The Big Railway Is Making a Bid for the Tourists' Trade.

Montreal, Nov. 115.—Mr. Charles Drinkwater, secretary and assistant to the president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, has gone to Kingston to attend the annual meeting of the Kingston and Pembroke Railway Company, which takes place to-day.

It is understood that the board will be reorganized in the interest of the Canadian Pacific, and will either be leased or purchased by it.

Whatever arrangements are made, it seems certain that it will be operated by the Canadian Pacific Railway after the first of the year.

There is some talk of the Canadian Pacific acquiring the road in order to give it an outlet for passenger traffic at the head of the Thousand Islands, and it is even hinted that next season the Richelieu and Ontario Navigation Company may have opposition boats on the St. Lawrence, between Clayton, N. Y., Kingston and Montreal, running in the interests of the Canadian Pacific and of the Vanderbilts.

"There is one thing sure," said a railroad man to-day, "the Canadian Pacific are after the road for passenger business, not for freight. They would never think of breaking bulk at Kingston, and as for American ferry connection, they have it at Brockville. I believe you will see them with a line of steamers on the St Lawrence next season, as the tourist business in that direction is getting too profitable to be long enjoyed by one company alone. Then, again, the Richelieu and Ontario is too closely allied to the Grand Trunk Railway to be entirely pleasant for the Canadian Pacific Railway.

"When I was in New York last month I heard the Canadian tourist travel spoken of as one of the big possibilities of next summer, and I was told then that both the Canadian Pacific and the Vanderbilts had their eye on the St. Lawrence and would probably have a line of steamers before long.

"I also heard at the same time that the Richelieu and Ontario Navigation Company intended purchasing the Toronto-Niagara Company to keep it out of the hands of the proposed Vanderbilt-Canadian Pacific combination."

The Canadian Pacific connects with the Kingston and Pembroke at Sharbot Lake.

KITCHENER'S CLOSE CALL

HOW HE WAS SAVED FROM BEING BLOWN UP

Privates Boyd and King, Heroes of the Adventure, Tell the Story—The Train in Advance Was Blown Up.

London, Nov. 116.—The story of how Lord Kitchener was saved from being blown up in his special train is told in the St. James' Gazette. The heroes of the adventure were Pte. J. Boyd, Second battalion Royal Irish rifles, and Pte. J. King, Eighty-Seventh company Imperial Yeomanry, and the account is written from a letter written by King to his father. The two men were on railway patrol from Natal Spruit to see that the line was clear. All went well until they were half way home. Then the Boers broke out on them. King says:

"They opened fire upon us like fury. Talk about a hailstorm, it wasn't in it. Ping, ping, ping—above, beneath, in front, and behind us. The horses, I thought would go mad. They jumped and screamed, and after collecting our scattered senses just didn't we go! A bullet hit my horse in the neck (slight), and another hit a telegraph pole (iron) and scattered in his face—then he bolted for home. My chum and his horse didn't get a scratch, but wasn't old Boyd's face a picture. I wonder what mine was like? I must say I wasn't frightened, but I think I was 'off my head,' for Boyd says I was grinning like a maniac, and shouting at the top of my voice, 'Not 'arf, not 'arf!' Of course they drove us off the line, but we, thinking we were out of range, made for it again at a little bridge over a stream. Here we 'copped' it again, and Boyd got one through his saddle which smashed his wallets to fury. In the distance, about three miles off, we saw a train coming from Klip River, and then we saw that we must save that train or go under in the attempt.

"On we rode, the Boers riding or tearing along behind us, shooting from their saddles, when, finding that they could not turn us back or bring us over, they disappeared over the kopjes and down the stream. On the line again we dashed for the train, which, unconscious of danger (not having heard the firing), was making for Natal Spruit. It seemed an age before they saw the frantic waving of our hats. When at last the driver did pull up we gave him a full account, and advised him to get back at once. 'Is the line blown up?' he said. 'No,' I replied; 'not as I know of.' 'Well,' he said 'Kitchener's train, with the commander-in-chief on board, is behind me, and Kitchener is even now fuming at the delay. I must go on, but will take care.' I entreated him not to, but on he would go. 'If the line's there I'm going over it,' he said. The goods train went on, but Boyd, however, stopped the pilot engine preceding Kitchener's train, which King himself arrested.

As King was telling his tale he heard "such an explosion as I never heard and never wanted to hear again." The goods train was blown up by a dynamite mine. Lord Kitchener commended the men for their pluck, and as a reward they were promoted to be corporals.

11,000,000 Visitors

London, Nov. 15.—The Glasgow Exhibition which has been open 163 days is now closed. There have been over 11,000,000 visitors. The daily attendance was 66,625, and the daily receipts £1,000. It is expected that there will be a surplus of £80,000.

The aggregate attendance has been nearly double that of the previous exhibition, and the gross receipts were largely in excess of those of 1888. There will be a handsome surplus at the disposal of the Town Corporation when all the expenses have been met. There has been no sacrifice of Scotch principles, for the gates have been closed every Sunday. The business management has been excellent, and the most progressive municipality of the United Kingdom has profited in many ways by its enterprise. One secret of its financial success has been the pains taken to make Glasgow the meeting-place of scores of conventions and representative bodies during the summer and autumn.

KING EDWARD ARRESTED

When Prince of Wales He was Fined in Illinois.

Washington, Nov. 115.—The visit to Canada of the present heir apparent to the British throne has served to recall many incidents connected with the American tour of the father of the Duke of Cornwall and York, King Edward VII. One of the most striking of these incidents was the arrest and fining of the young Prince of Wales, as he was then, for a violation of a Sunday law while on a hunting trip in Will county, near the village of Wilmington, Ill. He was arrested by Col. C. M. Hammond, an attorney, now in Salt Lake City, taken before Justice James L. Young, and fined $3.

The Prince was under the guardianship of Lord Lyons, and the two made a hunting and fishing trip to Washington, some fifty miles south of Chicago, on the Kankakee River, a locality then visited by numerous hunters from Chicago and Canada on account of the plentifulness of the game and fish. Colonel Hammond was proprietor of a livery stable at Wilmington, and in such capacity took the royal party into the surrounding country several days on quail shooting expeditions.

The young Prince enjoyed the sport hugely, and when Sunday came he went to the station and said to Col. Hammond: "I would like to go out today. I want to get at those quails again." When told that violations of the law for hunting on Sunday were sometimes prosecuted in that locality the Prince asked the extent of the punishment. The Prince was informed that it would probably be a fine of from $3 to $5, whereupon he said to Mr. Hammond: "Well, hitch up, and I'll take the chances." The trip was made, and resulted in a pleasant and successful day, with a good-sized bag of game.

On the following morning Elias Kimball, who was somewhat of a hunter himself, probably through jealousy, feeling that the heir-apparent was robbing him of his rights to the game of the country, swore to the complaint before Justice James L. Young.

Robert Thompson was constable, but on account of the acquaintance between Col. Hammond and the Prince, he deputized Colonel Hammond to make the arrest. Young Albert Edward appeared to enjoy the affair, and went willingly before the court in the town hall, which was filled with anxious sightseers to witness the proceedings. Justice Young read the complaint and asked the prisoner what he had to say.

"Well," said the Prince, "I guess I'd better not deny it—and how much is the damage?"

A fine of $3 was imposed, but the costs were remitted. The Prince handed the Justice $5 but refused to take the preferred change, and after the court was dismissed he invited the crowd to the Exchange saloon, where all drank to the health and at the expense of England's future King.

"The affair was a pleasant one," said Colonel Hammond, "and was enjoyed by no one more than the young Prince himself, but Lord Lyons was exceedingly angry, and seemed to consider that the dignity of the nation had been trifled with. This was over forty years ago," continued Colonel Hammond, "and most of the parties who took part in it are dead. The Prince, as I remember him, was a well-built, good-looking young man, and an excellent shot. He enjoyed the trip to the fullest extent, was affable and agreeable to all whom he met, and made many friends and admirers during his short and eventful stay in Wilmington."

Denmark and Uncle Sam

Copenhagen, Nov. 14.—The Government of Denmark is considering the most effective method of retaliating against the United States should the diplomatic representations now being made in behalf of the Danish chocolate exporters fail. The exporters allege over-valuation of chocolate by the New York customs officials. The exporters deny that Denmark pays a bounty on chocolate and hold that Copenhagen should be accorded the same treatment as America gives to other free ports. It is pointed out that Denmark will suffer little loss in the case of retaliatory duties, since her exports to the United States are only $200,000 against America's $20,000,000.

GUERRILLA WORK NOT CHRISTIAN

General Robert E. Lee Refused to Adopt It in Civil War.

HE WAS RESPECTED BY HIS MEN

All Americans Grateful to the Gallant Confederate Leader for This Decision.

Worcester, Mass., Nov. 115.—Mr. Charles Francis Adams, addressing the American Antiquarian Society, narrated some unpublished facts regarding the last stages of the Rebellion. After the battle of Appomattox, General E. P. Alexander advised General Lee to adopt guerilla tactics, suggesting plans for their indefinite maintenance. Lee replied. "No. We are Christians. We have fought as hard and as well as we know. We are beaten. For us, as Christians, there is now but one thing to do—surrender, go home, plant our crops, and build up the country on a new basis." That incident, Mr. Adams continued, accounted for the United States not having suffered as South Africa now does. Not one man, North or South, now doubts that Lee decided wisely. The future must decide whether a contrary course of events in South Africa has been wise or justifiable. As Americans contemplate the situation there not a single American fails to feel gratitude to the Confederate leader whose decision saved the United States from similar conditions, or doubts the wisdom of Lee's action, under facts which imposed upon him, as a Christian, the duty of ending a hopeless war, and beginning a new national life, which the result of the war had imposed upon his people. Mr. Adams quoted contemporary accounts proving that Lee's decision had left unimpaired the love and respect of followers whom he had ordered to surrender.

SOME TORONTO STATISTICS

The City's Many Miles of Permanent Pavement.

Toronto, Nov. 15.—There are 250 miles of streets and 34 miles of lanes in Toronto, according to City Engineer Rust's annual report. Nearly 122 miles of streets are permanently paved, 21 in asphalt, 38 in cedar block, 11 in brick, and 48 in macadam. There are 51.3 miles of gravel roadways.

Of stone flagging the city has nearly two miles; of concrete sidewalks, 25 miles; of brick, 21.2 miles; and of wood, 400 miles. There are 221.2 miles of sewers.

THE WATERWORKS.

The waterworks system, which has cost $4,500,000, includes 284 1-2 miles of mains, 43,243 water services, 1,988 street hydrants, 2,470 valves, and 1,700 meters. The average schedule rates are 11.2 cents per 1,000 gallons. There are 38,000 water takers, consuming an average of 21,934,304 gallons daily, or 7,005,000,000 gallons a year. The cost of fuel for pumping water last year was $38,003. The city's revenue from the waterworks system in 1900 was $377,161, while the operating and maintenance expenses were $421,000, showing a deficit of $94,000.

THE LIGHT COMPANIES.

The Gas Company has 251 miles of mains and 24,982 consumers. The Electric Light Company has 960 miles of overhead and 10 of underground wire. The Incandescent Light Company has 1000 private business lights. There are 6,740 telephones, with 10,894 miles of overhead and 9,438 of underground wires. The G.N.W. Telegraph Company has 78 tickers and 248 miles of wire in the city.

The 21 public parks of Toronto have an aggregate area of 1,153 acres.

The G.T.R. has 25 and the C.P.R. has 21 miles of tracks in the city, while 82 passenger and 176 freight trains enter and leave daily. The Street Railway Company has 85 1-4 miles of tracks and over 300 cars in operation.

The Works Department spent $1,065,302 in 1900, not including waterworks. In local improvement work, $540,618 was spent in the construction of 24 1-2 miles of new pavements and roadways and and 15 1-4 miles of concrete and brick sidewalks during the year.

ALWAYS NOISY.

"The asphalt pavement appears to be the favorite," says the City Engineer, "I think, however, that brick for residential streets will last quite as long and will not cost as much for maintenance as asphalt, but the great objection to this class of pavement is the noise. We have so far as possible taken steps to remedy this, but there is still considerable rumbling, and I am afraid it is absolutely impossible to entirely prevent it."

Macadam roadways, he adds, are the most expensive to maintain; they are also dirty in wet and dusty in dry weather. He does not find gravel roadways satisfactory for city traffic and recommends that their construction be entirely discontinued. Lanes in the central section of the city should be paved with brick.

It cost the city 30 cents a load to get rid of 45,000 loads of snow last winter.

The City Engineer shows a saving of $1,086 in the construction of 30 concrete sidewalks and $5,300 in the construction of 11 pavements by day labor during the year.

The city's average sewage flow is 19,847,000 gallons a day. Toronto Junction's is 300,000 gallons.

It costs 16 1-4 cents a mile for street watering, in which 26,304,000 gallons of water were used.

The scavengers removed 138,827 loads, of which 25,962 were garbage and 100,400 ashes.

BRUTAL JOKERS IN AWFUL FIX

Tied Dynamite to a Dog and the Animal Wouldn't Go Away.

Scranton, Pa., Nov. 15.—James Sealey and George Wilson, of Throop, tied a dog to a tree yesterday and fastened a dynamite stick and a four foot fuse to his back. This they ignited and ran away. Frightened by the sizzling the animal broke his fastening, and before the men had got a half mile away caught up with them.

Paralysed by fear, the men stood still, knowing they would never outrun the dog. By getting 300 yards apart and making the dog run from one to the other by each one taking his turn in whistling, they managed to keep the dog away. When the explosion occurred the dog was midway between them, and both escaped.

United Factories, Limited

The $300,000 7 per cent. first preference stock of this company, Mr. Emil C. Boeckh, President, advertised in The Times recently, has all been taken up. The well-known high character of the three firms united, together with the fact that the dividends were payable quarterly, doubtless interested investors. The company is to be congratulated on its success.

MOST DISASTROUS GALE FOR MANY YEARS PAST

Loss of a Lifeboat and Eleven Lives the Last Catastrophe in Britain

London, Nov. 14.—The loss of a lifeboat and eleven lives near Yarmouth heads the list of to-day's wrecks by the continued gale. The life-boat was on its way to the rescue of a distressed vessel, when it was struck by a great wave and capsized. The crew were imprisoned and only three of them succeeded in making their escape. Innumerable minor casualties continue to be reported on all the coasts of the United Kingdom, marking the storm as the most disastrous that has occurred in many years. Snow is falling in many parts of the country.

It is now estimated that 227 lives have been lost on the British coasts as a result of the gales. The Norwegian barque Inga was wrecked at Shields and fifteen of her crew drowned. A three-masted schooner disappeared outside Sunderland. All on board are believed to have been lost. The steamer Whitesbey stranded on the coast of County Down, Ireland, and nine persons are still unaccounted for. All but three of the crew of the Swedish barque Trio met death in the wreck of the vessel off West Hartlepool, Durham.

It has rained for forty hours in Ireland and floods threaten the lives and commerce of the people in certain districts. Belfast is partly under water, and the leading theatre of the city has been closed. There are severe floods in the Isle of Man, and the mills in the Yorkshire Valley, of Wales have been closed down.

A Boer Prisoner Paroled

Philadelphia, Nov. 15.—Among the passengers on board the American Line steamer Rhynland, which arrived at her dock, foot of Washington Avenue, last night, from Liverpool, via Queenstown, was Capt. John Lanyon, a Boer officer captured by the British in the Transvaal war. Captain Lanyon, who was released on parole by the British War Office, was on his way to New York, and said he would remain in the United States until the close of the war in South Africa.

Captain Lanyon said his parents were natives of Germany, but he had lived in South Africa many years, and had taken part in four wars in which the Transvaal Republic participated. He said he fought in the two Matabele wars of 1880 and 1893, the war in 1897 and the present struggle against Great Britain. At the outbreak of the present war Captain Lanyon served in the army under command of General Joubert. He was taken prisoner at the battle of Tugela and sent to Ceylon as a prisoner of war. While doing hospital service at Ceylon an Italian nobleman, who was also there, was taken ill, and the surgeon in charge requested the Governor to release Captain Lanyon on parole, so that he could accompany the sick man to his home in Naples. After leaving Naples Captain Lanyon went to Great Britain, and upon reporting to the War Office had his parole transferred to America.

Chased by a Bull

Lindsay Post.—It is reported that a commercial traveller, while driving from Fenelon Falls to Bobcaygeon lately, was charged by a large and ferocious bull. When the animal first saw the knight of the grip coming, he ran ahead, leading the procession for nearly four miles, when he turned and waited until the traveller's carriage caught up. The animal then made a mad attack and succeeded in upsetting the buggy, the drummer making his escape by jumping the fence and climbing a tree. A short time after this occurred a well-known vinegar traveller, representing a Toronto house, came along and, noticing his friend, proceeded to lend assistance, when he was treated in a similar manner. The bull afterwards succeeded in upsetting a lumber waggon before being captured. It was certainly a thrilling experience for the two drummers, which they will remember and relate for many years to come.

PETERBOROUGH ON TOP IN BEET SUGAR TESTS

Highest in Percentage of Sugar, Highest in Purity; Well Up in Yield

NO REQUIREMENT FOR MANUFACTURE LACKING

Not Another Place in the Province can Offer Such Favorable Inducements for the Industry.

There is a tide in the affairs of towns no less than of men that leads to fortune. Another of many recent indications that Peterborough has the opportunity of taking this tide at the flood came yesterday, when Mayor Denne received a letter from Professor Shuttleworth, superintendent of sugar beet experiments. Enclosed was a summary statement of the results in this county and a comparison with other places.

It will be remembered that the Ontario Government decided to give a bounty on beet sugar produced in the Province, and made arrangements to test the soil at various points. Peterborough was one of the thirteen places selected. About a score of our farmers obtained seed and grew beets this season, and the result of the Government test shows that beets grown here have the highest percentage of all in sugar and purity and that the yield is up to the average.

Beets showing 12 per cent. of sugar and 80 per cent. of purity are considered good enough to manufacture profitably. Those grown here showed 17.3 per cent. of sugar and 90.6 per cent. of purity—in both particulars higher than anywhere else in Ontario.

The yield of 16 tons to the acre is above the average to make growing very profitable to the farmers.

Peterborough also has an advantage over some of the other places at which tests were made in its great water supply. Abundance of water is a necessity in the manufacture of beet sugar. The town is surrounded on all sides by just the kind of land required. The shipping facilities are unsurpassed. It is unquestionable that there is no better place in Ontario for a beet sugar factory, and it is questionable whether there is an[illegible] advantages.

The great cost of a plant—about half a million dollars—renders the capitalists cautious about embarking. The somewhat formidable requirement was made by the representative of a manufacturer who was here recently, that one-seventh of the capital be subscribed by local men. Perhaps our local capitalists could not get a better investment; perhaps the result of the experiments will supply better terms [illegible]. At any rate it is a cold fact that Peterborough has a better prospect than any other place in Ontario of obtaining a beet sugar factory.

	Sugar	Purity	Yield Tons	Yield lbs.
Alvinston	15.19	86.1	21	976
Belleville	15.7	88.8	19	1735
Cayuga	16.3	88.2	14	1068

Walkerton	15.4	86.0	16	1764
Whitby	16.8	86.1	23	83
Berlin	14.6	85.8	18	1250

Alvinston's yield was from 15 plots; Belleville's 18; Cayuga 18; Clinton 15; Dunnville 18; Lindsay 9; London 20; Mt. Forest 21; Port Perry 18; Peterborough 21; Walkerton 24; Whitby 18; Berlin 18.

The following two tables give the record made by each of those in the district who took samples and grew the experimental plots. The first table shows the quality of the beets as regards sugar and purity, and the other gives the average weight of the beets and the yield per acre in each case:

CONSCRIPTION MAY YET COME

Strong Opinion Regarding the Proposed Methods of War.

MEN WANTED FOR THE ARMY

One Way Is to Increase the Pay and Another Is Conscription—Which Will Be Chosen?

London, Nov. 15.—The proposal to force men into the army is not being well received by the people. It is thought that better pay would induce enlistment.

The Post says,—The Government hesitates to resort to conscription in order to supply Lord Kitchener with more men, but it is not improbable that it will have to be done. Canada and the other colonies may be relied upon for some troops, but not enough. Besides, the mother country, for its own self-respect, could hardly call upon the colonies to finish a business with which the people at home have long been disgusted.

Conscription is the last resort in war, and it has been unpopular the world over, and often resisted, for obvious reasons. If a cause is of such a character that its justice does not appeal to the people to the extent of supplying volunteers, forcing unwilling men into service is a distinct advertisement to the world that the Government has not the support of the people in what it is trying to accomplish.

If conscription is resorted to in England it will be a severe blow to the country's pride and prestige. The world will view the spectacle of a powerful nation unable to subdue for two years a lot of unorganized farmers, and discontent and dissatisfaction so prevalent at home that the men of military age refuse any longer to make sacrifices to continue the conflict. Naturally the Powers hostile to Great Britain will see in this move an indication that the nation is declining, and new alliances and combinations may be the result.

SCHOOL OF CRIME IN THE GHETTO.

Strange Discovery Alleged to Have Been Made in Chicago

HAD NINE BOYS AS PUPILS

Junk Dealer Said to Have Been the Instructor and to Have Counselled the Use of Revolver

Chicago, Nov. 14.—An alleged "school of crime," with nine small boys as members, and James Kolis, a junk dealer, as captain, has been discovered in the "Ghetto." Kolis and all his boys have been arrested. Warrants were sworn out at the same time for several junk dealers, who are said to have bought the stolen goods. Whip in hand, Kolis is charged by two of the boys, who have made confession, with having forced them to steal. They say he would not let them go to school, but he threatened to kill them if they betrayed him, and that sometimes he would give them revolvers and tell them to shoot anybody who caught them while on their thieving expeditions. That certain boys might not be compelled to attend school, and that they might have full time for the robbing houses and the continuation of a complete course in crime, the death of Patrolman Francis S. Coggeshall, a truant officer of the Board of Education, was planned, it is alleged. Officer Cappatelli owes his safety to information given him by a six-year old girl.

Opened the Door and was Shot

Ottawa, Nov. 14.—A mysterious and cold-blooded shooting affair is reported from Hawthorne, a few miles from Ottawa. A well-to-do and respectable farmer named Frank Marshall, was awakened by someone knocking at his door. He went down to the door and as soon as it was opened, he was grabbed and shot through the neck and fatally wounded. The motive and the assailant are unknown, but the deed has caused tremendous excitement, as it occurred within an hour's drive from the city.

PETERBOROUGH, NOVEMBER 5, 1901

BEHIND THE TIME

It must be a rude shock to the good people of Montreal to have the invectives of Mr. Girdlestone hurled at them, as they have been. Mr. Girdlestone is chairman of the Bristol and West of England Dock Company. He finds Montreal and the St. Lawrence route just where it was four years ago—in a state of neglect. In his address to the Board of Trade he pointed out how much Montreal loses in shipping, which goes to American ports, when Canada might have it by the expenditure of a little money and—a little originality. But that is where the rub is. Have we originality? There are numbers of men of good reputation, etc., who spend their best energies in seeing how they can avoid difficulties not overcome them. Of course this plan is wise, if boldness is not backed up by brains. We have a fine crop of people, who look all right on the outside, but who ever heard of their originating anything? Besides, since they cannot originate and do not even understand the advanced ideas of others, they pettishly try to checkmate them and to preserve the pasture for their own feeding. There is a lot in that. Selfishness is at the bottom of much apparent stupidity. But that Canadians should be so far behind the times as to excite the wrath of an English shipowner, is a matter of concern. An appeal is to be made to the Premier, and none too soon. All along we have felt that the march of western civilization and progress was [illegible] in the East. Every effort should be made by the government to provide a ready spillway for Canadian commerce. It is bad enough to have obstacles to our exports abroad without having them at our own making at home. Peterborough is going ahead but no thanks to its municipal managers. What plan of any importance have they originated and carried out? Platitudes—dull, grey platitudes, with as little spring in them as November, are about all we get. After all, men of brains are not plentiful, and we should be thankful that we are no worse off. Yet for all that we are tinctured with the British "sin of self-complacency" which has served the Empire so bad a turn in South Africa. To Montreal we have always looked for ideas, but it has evidently run dry. In the meantime let us express our gratitude to Mr. Girdlestone for his attempt to impose some of these ideas into our heads.

There was a Man named J. Bull and he had taken some who were Scrappers from Away Back, says the clever Ottawa citizen. The oldest of these was Bobs who looked about as big as a Minute but when he Turned Loose you would think several Centuries and [illegible] a head-on Collision and been Attached. Then there was Buller, the heavyweight, who fought with bulldog Tenacity, and could lick his Weight in Wildcats, pound for pound. George White was a comparative Unknown upon the Occurrence we are about to Relate took place, but Those who Knew regarded him as a Likely and who would make His x Mark. And J. Bull sent them out to Do Up some Bad Men who were trespassing on his Property.

George Arrived on the Scene first and sailed in, but he was outclassed [illegible] less than Two Shakes his Agile Antagonist, a Rough-and-Tumble Scrapper who cared not for Aldershot rules, had him down trying to Pound his head in with a Rock. But George clinched his Grim Antagonist like a Vise so he could not wield the Rock, and George hollered for Help. After stopping to be interviewed by the Reporters, and telling them what he was Going to do with that Bunch of Plug Uglies when he got there, Buller hung his Sweater on a Branch and waded in to Rescue George. Now the Partner of the Plug Ugly who had George down was Laying for Buller and he, too, was quite ignorant of Aldershot rules in Fighting, so it came to Pass that when Buller, the Heavyweight, put up his Dukes and made a scientific Uppercut at the Boer Plug, the Plug Ugly came at him like a Cyclone of Head, Hands and Boots. And he threw Buller down, and Rolled him over and Soaked it to him in half-a-dozen Places all at once, and then Stood Over him and Admired the Wreck which he had Wrought. Whereupon Buller assembled out of the Dust and Rested back out of reach, Stunned and Discomfited.

And Buller, the Grim Fighter, stood glaring at his Sprawly Antagonist, while he mechanically picked Cactus Spines and bits of Rock out of his Anatomy. Then he lifted up his Voice and hollered to George and says: "Are you Alive?" And the Pesky Kid, having Troubles of his Own, as well as being a man of Few Words, said: "Yep." And Buller says: "George, I'm up again it. This Unprofessional Yahoo has thrown me up in the air. If you're going to wait for me to Rescue you, you'll have to wait all Day. You better throw up the Sponge."

And George hollered back: If I let go this Bunco Steerer he'll put a Dent in my Head with his Rock, and then this pair of Plug Uglies Won't do a thing but Whale you into Flinders." And George got a Clinch Grip in the Whiskers of his Baffled Antagonist and hung on. Then he yelled to Buller to Buck Up and Get into the Game. So Buller waded in Warily but on each occasion the Grim Fighter was Rolled Back, breathless and mud-stained yet Undismayed.

Then Bobs came along on the lope through the far side of the Orchard and he ran up against another of the Gang named Cronje; and went at him like a Game Cock. After Bobs had given him a Twister or two, Cronje threw up his Hands and accepted the Situation with Becoming Resignation. Then the rest of the Gang thought it was time to Make Tracks and they Headed up the Pike leaving Buller and George somewhat, Disabled but still in the Ring. Then Buller rescued George.

Josh Billings: "I luv a rooster for two things—one is the crow that is in him and the other is the spurs that air on him to bak up his crow with."

The Times has become a popular paper, not only amongst the people of the town and Ashburnham, but also amongst the [illegible] of the surrounding towns and villages.

Mr. G. D. Hilliard, of Lakefield, says the Times is regarded in Lakefield as the brightest paper that comes to that burg, and is read by very many in the village.

Wm. O'Brien, the [illegible] has long been a subscriber to the daily edition, says that the Times is the popular paper in that township, [illegible] the people [illegible] He hopes they'll long keep up the present pace.

Mr. Wm. Gollan, Reeve of Burleigh and Anstruther, states that the whole [illegible] reads the Times, and [illegible] the paper as one of the [illegible] He says that it is always full of good things.

Mr. F. F. Young, Young's Point, says everybody reads the Times in that locality. It is admirably conducted.

Mr. James [illegible], ex-M.P., says the Times is the brightest and best newspaper published in Peterborough.

[illegible] says he would rather miss his breakfast than miss getting the Times. It is a famous appetizer only equalled by [illegible]

Mr. J. M. Thomson, [illegible], says the Times is very popular in that village and is widely read.

Hon. Mr. [illegible] thinks the Times deserves great credit for the progressive [illegible]. It is up-to-date, giving all the news up to four o'clock each morning. [illegible] North [illegible], brought [illegible] a couple of [illegible]

Recently Mr. [illegible] and another [illegible] for the Weekly Times of [illegible] There are [illegible] from one section of [illegible] that are constant readers of the Times.

Mr. Harry Garbutt, Reeve of Smith, says that the Times is the popular paper in that locality.

Mr. James [illegible], Springville, gives similar evidence, and says you can hardly go into a house in his locality that the Times is not present.

Mr. Fenson, the great horse buyer, of Montreal, told the Times the other day that he has better results from the advertisement in the Times than from any other paper. He says he finds the Times is read by almost everybody in the district. He knows this, for almost every horse he buys is the product of the Times advertisement.

Mr. T. [illegible], Omemee, member of the Counties' Council of Northumberland and Durham, says that the Times is very popular in Cavan.

Mr. [illegible], Marmora, bears similar testimony in regard to Marmora [illegible]

David [illegible] says that in Asphodel, Hastings and Norwood, everybody literally reads the Times.

Dr. [illegible], the popular city Medical Health Officer, missed his Times the other morning, and came to the office for a copy. He said he was not feeling well, and wondered what was the matter, until he remembered he had not had his Times.

The above and a few of the [illegible] evidence we have in our possession of the high regard in which this great family journal is held by the people. Merchants and other advertisers should remember that [illegible] of families throughout the town and country cannot be reached by any other [illegible] through the Times.

BEHIND THE TIMES

It must be a rude shock to the good people of Montreal to have the invectives of Mr. Girdlestone hurled at them, as they have been. Mr. Girdlestone is chairman of the Bristol and West of England Dock Company. He finds Montreal and the St. Lawrence route just where it was four years ago—in a state of neglect. In his address to the Board of Trade he specifies how much Montreal loses in shipping, which goes to American ports, when Canada might have it by the expenditure of a little money and—a little originality. But that is where the rub is. Have we originality? There are numbers of men of good reputation, etc., who spend their best energies in seeing how they can avoid difficulties not overcome them. Of course this plan is wise, if boldness is not backed up by brains. We have a fine crop of people, who look all right on the outside, but who ever heard of their originating anything! Besides, since they cannot originate and do not even understand the advanced ideas of others, they pettishly try to checkmate them and to preserve the pasture for their own feeding. There is a lot in that. Selfishness is at the bottom of much apparent stupidity. But that Canadians should be so far behind the times as to excite the wrath of an English shipowner, is a matter of concern. An appeal is to be made to the Premier, and none too soon. All along we have felt that the march of western civilization and progress was being checked in the East. Every effort should be made by the government to provide a ready entry for Canadian commerce. It is bad enough to have obstacles to our exports abroad without having them in our own making at home.

Peterborough is going ahead but no thanks to its municipal managers. What plan of any importance have they originated and carried out? Platitudes—dull, grey platitudes, with as little spring in them as November, are about all we get. After all, men of brains are not plentiful, and we should be thankful that we are no worse off. Yet for all that we are tinctured with the British "sin of self-complacency" which has served the Empire so bad a turn in South Africa. To Montreal we have always looked for ideas, but it has evidently run dry. In the meantime let us express our gratitude to Mr. Girdlestone for his attempt to impose some of these ideas into our heads.

A FABLE FOUNDED ON FACT

There was a Man named J. Bull and he had taken some wars with Scrappers from Away Back, says the clever Ottawa citizen. The eldest of these was Bobs who looked About as big as a Minute but when he turned loose you would think several Centuries and one a Head-on Collision and been hitched. Then there was Buller, the heavy-weight, who fought with building Tenacity, and could lick his Weight in Wildcats, pound for pound. George White was a comparative Unknown upon the Occurrence we are about to relate took place, but Those who Knew regarded him as a Likely and who would make His Mark. And J. Bull sent them out to lick Up some Bad Men who were trespassing on his Property.

George Arrived on the Scene first and waded in, but he was outclassed and in less than Two Shakes his Agile Antagonist, a Rough-and-Tumble Scrapper who cared not for Aldershot rules, had him down trying to Pound his head in with a Rock. But George clinched his Grim Antagonist like a Vice so he could not wield the Rock, and George hollered for Help. After stopping to be interviewed by the Reporters, and telling them what he was Going to do with that Bunch of Plug Uglies when he got there, Buller hung his Sweater on a Branch and waded in to Rescue George. Now the Partner of the Plug Ugly who had George down was Laying for Buller and he, too, was quite ignorant of Aldershot rules in fighting, so it came to Pass that when Buller, the Heavyweight, put up his Dukes and made a Scientific Uppercut at his Solar Plexus, the Plug Ugly came at him like a Cyclone of Head, Hands and Boots. And he threw Buller down, and Rolled him over and soaked it to him in half-a-dozen Places all at once, and then Stood Over him and Admired the Wreck which he had Wrought. Whereupon Buller Ascended out of the Dust and Backed back out of reach, Stunned and Discomfited.

And Buller, the Grim Fighter, stood glaring at his Brawny Antagonist, while he mechanically picked Chestnuts and bits of Rock out of his Anatomy. Then he lifted up his Voice and hollered to George and says: "Are you Alive?" And the Plucky Kid, having Troubles of his Own, as well as being a man of Few Words, said: "Yep." And Buller says: "George, I'm up against it. This Unprofessional Yahoo has thrown me up in the air. If you're going to wait for me to Rescue you, you'll have to wait all Day. You better throw up the Sponge."

And George hollered back: If I let go this Sunny Steerer he'll put a Dent in my Head with his Rock, and then this pair of Plug Uglies Won't do a thing but Whale you into Franklin." And George got a Clinch Grip in the Whiskers of his Baffled Antagonist and hung on. Then he yelled to Buller to Buck Up and Get into the Game. But Buller waded in Warily but on each occasion the Grim Fighter was Rolled Back, breathless and mud-stained yet Undismayed.

Then Bobs came along on the lope through the far side of the Orchard and he ran up against another of the Gang named Cronje; and went at him like a Game Cock. After Bobs had given him a Flutter or two, Cronje threw up his Hands and accepted the Situation with Becoming Resignation. Then the rest of the Gang thought it was time to Make Tracks and they Headed up the Pike leaving Buller and George somewhat Disabled but still in the Ring. Then Buller rescued George.

Moral: When a Man Goes Himself Rescued, it is Pretty Hard to tell Who is to Speak for it.

EVERYBODY READS THE TIMES

A Few Pointers That Advertisers Would Do Well to Remember.

Josh Billings: "I luv a rooster for two things—one is the crow that is in him and the other is the spurs that air on him to bak up his crow with."

The Times has become a popular paper, not only amongst the people of the town and Ashburnham, but also amongst the residents of the surrounding towns and villages.

Mr. G. R. Hilliard, of Lakefield, says the Times is regarded in Lakefield as the brightest paper that comes to that burg, and is read by very many in the village.

Wm. O'Brien, the [illegible] of [illegible], who has long been a subscriber to the daily edition, says that the Times is the popular paper in that township, [illegible] per cent. of the people being readers. He hopes that it will long keep up its standard pace.

Mr. Wm. Gallon, Reeve of Burleigh and Anstruther, states that the whole [illegible] reads the Times, and regard the paper as one of the best dailies. He says that it is always full of good things.

Mr. P. P. Young, Young's Point, says everybody reads the Times in that locality. It is admirably conducted.

Mr. James [illegible], ex-M.P., says the Times is the brightest and best newspaper published in Peterborough.

[illegible] says he [illegible] rather miss his breakfast than miss getting the Times. It is a [illegible] appetizer only equalled by Caldwell's celebrated [illegible].

Mr. J. M. Thornton, Omemee, says the Times is very popular in that village and is widely read.

Hon. Mr. [illegible] thinks the Times deserves great credit for its progressive spirit. It is up-to-date, giving all the news up to four o'clock each morning. North [illegible], brought to us in a couple of [illegible].

Recently Mr. [illegible] and another of [illegible] for the Weekly Times of 50 names. Here are 50 names from one section of [illegible], these are [illegible] readers of the Times.

Mr. Harry Garbutt, Reeve of Smith, says that the Times is the popular paper in that locality.

Mr. James [illegible], Springville, gives similar evidence, and says you can hardly go into a house in his locality that the Times is not present.

Mr. [illegible], the great horse buyer, of Montreal, told the Times the other day that he has better results from the advertisement in the Times than from any other paper. He says he finds the Times is read by almost everybody in the district. He knows this, for almost every horse he buys is the product of the Times advertisement.

Mr. T. [illegible], Cavan, member of the Counties' Council of Northumberland and Durham, says that the Times is very popular in Cavan.

Mr. James Chambers, [illegible], bears similar testimony in regard to [illegible] Township.

David [illegible] says that in Asphodel, Hastings and Norwood, everybody literally reads the Times.

Dr. [illegible], the popular city Medical Health Officer, missed his Times the other morning, and came to the office for a copy. He said he was not feeling well, and wondered what was the matter, until he remembered he had not had his Times.

The above are a few of the many evidences we have in our possession of the high regard in which this great family journal is held by the public. Merchants and other advertisers should remember that hundreds upon hundreds of families throughout the town and country cannot be reached by any other medium except through the Times.

"MATT."

A TALE OF A CARAVAN

ent in, and when my bed is made, and Tim's hammock is swung just inside the door, the place forms the tiniest of sleeping chambers.

"Besides the inconveniences which I have mentioned, but which were, perhaps, hardly worth chronicling, the caravan has social drawbacks, more particularly embarrassing to a modest man like myself. It is confusing, for example, on entering a town, or a good-sized village, to be surrounded by the entire juvenile population, who cheer us vociferously, under the impression that we constitute a 'show,' and afterward, on ascertaining their mistake, pursue us with opprobrious jeers; and it is distressing to remark that our mode of life, instead of inviting confidence, causes us to be regarded with suspicion by the vicar of the parish and the local policeman.

"To avoid these and similar inconveniences we generally halt for the night in some secluded spot — some roadside nook or outlying common. But there is a fatal attraction in the caravan; it seems to draw spectators, as it were, out of the very bowels of the earth. No matter how desolate the place we have chosen, we have scarcely made ourselves comfortable when an audience gathers, and stragglers drop in amazed and open-mouthed. I found it irksome at first to paint in the open air, with a gaping crowd at my back making audible comments on my work as it progressed; but I soon got used to it, and, having discovered certain good 'subjects' here and there among my visitors, I take the publicity now as a matter of course.

"I begin this record in the Island of Anglesea, where we have arrived after our fortnight's wanderings in the more mountainous districts of the mainland. Anglesea, I am informed, is chiefly famous for its pigs and its wild ducks. So far as I have yet explored it, I find it flat and desolate enough; but I have been educated in Irish landscapes, and don't object to flatness when combined with desolation. I like these dreary meadows, these black stretches of melancholy moorland, these wild lakes and lagoons.

"At the present moment I am encamped in a spot where, in all probability, I shall remain for days. I came upon it quite by accident, about midday yesterday, when, on my way to the market town of Pencroes; or, rather, when I imagined that I was going thither, while I had, in reality, after hesitating at three cross-roads, taken the road which led exactly in the opposite direction. Presently the open moorland ended, and we entered a region of sandy hillocks, sparsely ornamented here and there with long, harsh grass. If one could imagine the waves of the ocean at some moment [illegible] agitation, suddenly frozen to stillness, and retaining [illegible] their tempestuous forms, it would give some idea of the hillocks I am describing. They rose on every side of the road, completely shutting out the view, and their pale livid yellowness, scarcely relieved with a glimpse of greenness, was wearisome and lonely in the extreme. As we advanced along them, the road we were pursuing grew worse and worse, till it became so choked and covered with drifted sand as to be scarcely recognizable, and I need hardly say that it was hard work for one horse to pull the Caravan along; more than once, indeed, the wheels fairly stuck, and Tim and I had to pull with might and main.

"We had proceeded in this manner for some miles, and I was beginning to realise the fact that we were out of our reckoning, when, suddenly emerging from between two sand-hills, I saw a wide stretch of green meadow land, and beyond it a glorified piece of water. The sun was shining brightly, the water sparkled like a mirror, calm as glass, and without a breath. As we appeared, a large heron rose from the spot on the water-side where he had been standing—and sailed leisurely away. Around the lake, which was about a mile in circumference, the road ran winding, till it reached the farther side, where more sand-hills began; but between these sand-hills I caught a sparkling glimpse of more water, and (guided to my conclusion by the red sail of a fishing-smack just glimmering on the horizon line) I knew that further water was—the sea.

'Still as a stone, without a sound,

"The spot had all the attraction of complete desolation, combined with the charm which always, to my mind, pertains to lakes and lagoons. Eager as a boy or a loosened retriever, I ran across the meadow, and found the grass lush and green, and sown with innumerable crowsfoot flowers; underneath the green was sand again, but here it glimmered like gold-dust.

"So here we have been since yesterday, and, up to this, have not set eyes upon a single soul. Such peace and quietness is a foretaste of Paradise. As this is the most satisfactory day I have yet spent in my pilgrimage, although [illegible] the other days of the past fortnight, I purpose setting down, verbatim, seriatim, and chronologically, the manner in which I occupied myself from dawn to sunset.

"6 A. M.—Wake and see that Tim has already disappeared, and folded up his hammock. Observe the morning sun looking in with a fresh, shining countenance at the window. Turn over again with a yawn, and go to sleep for another five minutes.

"7.15 A. M.—Wake again, and discover, by looking at my watch, that, instead of five minutes, I have slept an hour and a quarter. Spring up at once and slip on shirt and trousers; then pass out, bare-footed, into the open air. No sign of Tim, but a fire is lighted close to the Caravan, which shadows it from the rays of the morning sun. Stroll down to the lake, and, throwing off what garments I wear prepare for a bath. Can not get out for a swim on account of the reeds. The bath over, return and finish my toilet in the Caravan.

"8 A. M.—Tim has reappeared. He has been right down to the seashore, a walk of about two miles and a half. He informs me, to my dismay, that there is some sort of a human settlement there, and a life-boat station. He has brought back in his basket, as specimens of the local products, a dozen new-laid eggs, some milk, and a loaf of bread. The last, I observe, is in a fossil state. I ask who sold it to him. He answers, William Jones.

"8.30 A. M.—We breakfast splendidly. Even the fossil loaf yields sustenance, after it is cut up and dissolved in hot tea. Between whiles, Tim informs me that the settlement down yonder is, in his opinion, a poor sort of a place. There are several white-washed cottages, and a large, roofless house, for all the world like a church. Devil the cow or pig did he see at all, barrin' a few hens. Any boats, I ask? Yes, one, with the bottom knocked out, belonging to William Jones.

"Tim has got this name so pat, that my curiosity begins to be aroused. 'Who the deuce is William Jones?' 'Sure, thin,' says Tim, 'he's the man that lives down beyant, by the sea.' I demand, somewhat irritably, if the place contains only one inhabitant? Devil another did Tim see, he explains— barrin' William Jones.

"9.30 A. M.—Start painting in the open air, under the shade of a large white cotton umbrella. Paint on till 1 P. M.

"1 P. M.— Take a long walk among the sand-hills, avoiding the settlement beyond the lake. Don't want to meet any of the aboriginals, more particularly William Jones. Walking here is like running up and down Atlantic billows, assuming said billows to be solid, now I am lost in the trough of the sand, now I re-emerge on the crest of the solid wave. Amusing, but fatiguing. I soon lose myself, every hillock being exactly like another.

"Looking at my watch, I find that I have been toiling in this sandy wilderness for quite two hours. Time to get back and dine. Climb the nearest hillock, and look round to discover where I am. Can see nothing but the sandy billows on every side, and am entirely at a loss which way to go. At last, after half an hour's blind wandering, stumble, by accident, on the road by the lake-side, and see the Caravan in the distance.

"4 P. M.—Dinner. Boiled potatoes, boiled eggs, fried bacon. Tim's cooking is primitive, but I could devour anything—even William Jones' fossil bread. I asked if any human being has visited the camp. 'Sorra one,' Tim says, looking rather disappointed. He has got to feel himself a public character, and misses the homage of the vulgar.

"Paint again till 6 P. M.

"A beautiful sunset. The sand-hills grow rosy in the light, the lake deepens from crimson to purple, the moon comes out like a silver sickle over the setting sun. A thought seizes me as the shadows increase. Now is the time to entice the pink trout from their depths in the lake. I get out my fishing-rod and line, and, stretching two or three flies which seem suitable, prepare for action. My rod is only a small single-handed one, and it is difficult to cast beyond the sedges, but the fish are rising thickly out in the tranquil pools, and, determined not to be beaten, I wade in to the knees. Half a dozen trout, each about the size of a small herring, reward my enterprise. When I have captured them, the moon is high up above the sand-hills, and it is quite dark.

"Such is the chronicle of the past day. By the light of my lamp inside the Caravan I have written it down. It has been all very tranquil and uneventful, but very delightful, and a day to be marked with a white stone, in one respect—that from dawn to sunset, I have not set eyes on a human being, except my servant.

"Stop, though! I am wrong. Just as I was returning from my piscatorial excursion to the lake, I saw, passing along the road in the direction of the sea, a certain solitary horseman, who addressed me not too civilly on the road side the night before last. He scowled at me in passing, and, of course, recognised me by the aid of the Caravan. His name is Monk, of Monkshurst, and he seems to be pretty well monarch of all he surveys. I have an impression that Mr. Monk, of Monkshurst, and myself are destined to be better, or worse, acquainted."

CHAPTER III.

Matt Makes Her First Appearance.

"Eureka! I have had an adventure at last; and yet, after all, what am I talking about? It is no adventure at all, but only a commonplace incident. This is how it happened:

"I was seated this morning before my easel, out in the open air, painting busily, when I thought I heard a movement behind me.

"I should have premised, by the way, that Tim had gone off on another excursion into the Jones territory, on the quest for more eggs and milk.

"I glanced over my shoulder and saw, peering round the corner of my white sunshade, a pair of large, eager eyes— fixed not upon me, but upon the canvas I was painting.

"Not in the least surprised, I thought to myself, 'At last! The Caravan has exercised its spell upon the district, and the usual audience is beginning to gather.' So I went tranquilly on with my work, and paid no more attention.

"Presently, however, fatigued with my work, I indulged in a great yawn, and rose to stretch myself. I then perceived that my audience was more select than numerous, consisting of only one individual—a young person in a Welsh chimney-pot hat. Closer observation showed me that said hat was set on a head of closely cropped, curly black hair, beneath which there shone a brown, boyish face, freckled with sun and wind, a pair of bright black eyes, and a laughing mouth with two rows of the whitest of teeth. But the face, though boyish, did not belong to a boy. The young person was dressed in an old cotton gown, had a colored woolen shawl or scarf thrown over the shoulders, and wore thick woolen stockings and rough shoes, the latter many sizes too large. The gown was too short for the wearer, who had evidently outgrown it; it reached only just below the knee, and, when the young person moved, one caught a glimpse of something very much resembling a dilapidated garter.

"The young person's smile was so bright and good-humored that I found myself answering it with a friendly nod.

"'How are you?' I said gallantly. 'I hope you're quite well.'

"She nodded in reply, and, stooping down, plucked a long blade of grass, which she placed in her mouth and began to nibble— bashfully, I thought.

ITEMS OF INTEREST

London, Nov. 12.—Lively scenes in the Emanuel Free Church of England, Great Harwood, occupied the attention of the Blackburn magistrates recently. Rev. Henry Francis Gordon, the pastor, charged seven members of his congregation with brawling. The dispute arose over an alteration in the service objected to by a large majority of the congregation. When the new service was introduced last Sunday week there were loud protests. The solicitor for the trustees mounted a bench and tried to speak, and there was great uproar and much unseemly bustling. One account describes the scene as a "free fight." Last Sunday the clergyman was barred out of the church altogether. The Rev. Mr. Gordon in conducting prosecution yesterday used strong language towards those he had summoned. "They had," he said, "resorted to force, and low, vulgar and indecent behavior, in God's house." Some of the cases were dismissed by the magistrates. In others fines were imposed.

DRINK AND LUNACY.

London, Nov. 12.—Some of the persons committed to the inebriate reformatories established under the Acts of 1898-99 proved to be certifiable lunatics. This remarkable fact is mentioned in the second annual report on the working of the Acts, which was issued yesterday. Over 25 per cent of them were mentally deficient. So long as they were drinking their eccentricity and violence were ascribed to habits, but after liquor was removed the real state of affairs became evident. The inebriate reformatories are five in number, with 129 beds. To these, sixteen male and 128 female cases were committed last year. Four girls, under the age of twenty-one were among the committals.

WELSH VILLAGE SUBSIDING.

London, Nov. 12.—At the small colliery village of Hollybrush, near Tredegar, at midnight on Thursday, a serious subsidence occurred. It was accompanied by loud reports. The inhabitants were terrified and many rushed partly clad into the streets. The foundations of two houses were dislodged, and the walls cracked. An archway carrying the London and North-Western Railway and some contiguous colliery sidings were badly damaged, and fissures appeared in the roadway. There are colliery workings beneath the village, and to these the subsidence is attributed.

London, Nov. 12.—London's food supply is being closely watched by the health authorities of the port. The last report of their operations covers three weeks. In that time ten tons of fruit and fish, fourteen tons of condensed milk, and fifteen vanloads of grapes were condemned and destroyed. The quantity of meat condemned and destroyed in the same period was very large, amounting to 115 tons. Twenty-three tons of this quantity had been imported in the frozen state. Altogether the seizures of food samples unfit for human consumption were 3,827 in the three weeks.

SCOTCH GIRLS ARE THE BEST.

Yarmouth, England, Nov. 12.—Over 3,000 Scottish girls have come to Yarmouth for the herring fishing, and at a meeting of the Board of Guardians Mr. J. M. Headley declared that owing to their being engaged instead of Yarmouth women the latter would be driven to apply for relief.

Mr. George Angell, a Yarmouth curer, said Yarmouth women had only themselves to thank for being displaced, as the Scottish women were infinitely superior, and more and more would be required every year. They not only worked better and faster than the Yarmouth women, but the latter spent too much of their time in public houses. He predicted that another year curers would procure all their hands from Scotland.

The board resolved to take no action.

MYSTERY NOT CLEARED UP.

London, Nov. 12.—The mystery attaching to the death of Lizzie Crowther, of Wilke, near Leeds, was not cleared up by the inquest, which closed yesterday. The girl lived in a lonely part of the country and one night she rushed into her grandmother's house, and said a man had put some nasty stuff into her mouth. She died a few minutes later, but the cause of death could not then be ascertained. Subsequently an analysis showed the stomach to contain 11.2 grains of strychnine. One grain, said the analyst yesterday, was enough to cause death. The poison was probably contained in a vermin-killer, which was sold with great carelessness. The jury found that death was due to strychnine poisoning, but that there was no evidence to show how it was administered.

ELEVATOR FOR THE KING.

London, Nov. 12.—At a meeting of the Epsom Urban Council last night it was reported that the Epsom Grand Stand Association had written asking upon what terms the council would connect the grand stand with the council electricity supply works. The association is desirous of obtaining power to work a lift for the use of the King and Queen at the races next year and power also for lighting rooms for the grand stand for which 200 lights would be required. It was stated that negotiations were being proceeded with for supplying the electric power required.

TO OBSERVE "CARNEGIE DAY."

Edinburgh, Nov. 12.—The proposal is made and warmly taken up in Scotland that Andrew Carnegie's munificent benefactions should be recognized by Scotsmen by instituting "Carnegie Day," when in Glasgow, Edinburgh, Aberdeen and St. Andrew's, the four university towns, combined civil and academic celebrations should be annually held on the lines of "Colston Day," now established for a century at Bristol.

WONDERFUL SINGING VALLEY.

Berlin, Nov. 12.—One of the most extraordinary natural phenomena in the world has been discovered in a valley watered by a tributary of the river Moselle. The air at different points of this valley vibrates with three distinct musical notes—C major at the entrance, E toward the middle, F at the upper end. The sounds are like those of bells, but as there is no bell within miles of the valley, this cannot be the cause of the sounds. Prof. Gunther, an expert in acoustics, has started for the valley to investigate the phenomenon. Other scientists who have been there favor the theory that the aerial bell-like notes arises from the fall of a stream in the middle of the valley. But why should the sound assume a musical form in this particular valley? The "Singing Valley," is already attracting crowds of curious visitors.

A MARVELLOUS MEDICINE

"No Cure, No Pay," is the Newest Proposal of the Proprietors of Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—We make the following proposal to the readers of the Times: To any one who is a subject of rheumatism (no matter how long standing) or any blood disease, as enumerated below, and will give Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills a fair trial and do not find a perfect cure, we will refund the money paid for the pills. If no substantial improvement is observed, we will in addition, pay $10 in cash on satisfactory evidence being supplied us to this effect.

We have yet to know of a single case where these wonderful pills have not been almost entirely successful in effecting a cure. CANADA CHEMICAL CO.

Ex-Ald. Bailey, St. John's, writes: I cannot speak too highly of Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills. They worked a miracle in my case, and cured me after many years of suffering. I do not think their equal is to be obtained.

Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills are a positive and certain cure for la grippe, rheumatism, asthma, paralysis, catarrh, eczema, coughs, backache, indigestion, all stomach and liver troubles, female complaints, even when the disease having been standing for many years, the most stubborn cases will yield. Price 50 cents per box. For sale by Ormond & Walsh. The Canada Chemical Company will forfeit $10 for any case that these pills do not help.

Dr. Clarke's Sure Cure for Catarrh, and Dr. Clarke's Sure Cure for Eczema same price. $10 will be paid for any case they will not permanently cure.

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed, "Tender for Observatory, Ottawa, Ont.," will be received at this office until Wednesday, November 27th, inclusively, for the erection of an Observatory building at the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, Ont., according to plans and specification to be seen at the Department of Public Works, Ottawa.

Tenders will not be considered unless made on the form supplied, and signed with the actual signatures of tenderers.

An accepted cheque on a chartered bank, payable to the order of the Minister of Public Works, equal to ten per cent (10 p.c.) of the amount of the tender, must accompany each tender. This cheque will be forfeited if the party decline the contract or fail to complete the work contracted for, and will be returned in case of non-acceptance of tender.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

By Order,
FRED GELINAS,
Secretary.

Tenders for Supplies, 1902

The undersigned will receive tenders up to noon on MONDAY, 25th inst., for supplies of butchers' meat, creamery butter, flour, oatmeal, potatoes, cordwood, etc., etc., for the following institutions during the year 1902, viz.:—

At the Asylums for the insane in Toronto, London, Kingston, Hamilton, Mimico, Brockville, Cobourg and Orillia; the Central Prison and Mercer Reformatory, Toronto; the Reformatory for Boys, Penetanguishene; the Institutions for Deaf and Dumb, Belleville, and the Blind at Brantford.

Exception—Tenders are not required for the supply of meat to the asylums in Toronto, London, Kingston, Hamilton and Brockville, nor for the Central Prison and Mercer Reformatory, Toronto.

A marked cheque for five per cent. of the estimated amount of the contract, payable to the order of the Honorable the Provincial Secretary, must be furnished by each tenderer as a guarantee of his bona fides. Two sufficient sureties will be required for the due fulfillment of each contract, and should any tender be withdrawn before the contract is awarded, or should the tenderer fail to furnish such security, the amount of the deposit will be forfeited.

Specifications and forms of tender may be had on application to the Department of the Provincial Secretary, Toronto, or to the Bursars of the respective institutions.

The lowest or any tender not necessarily accepted.

Newspapers inserting this advertisement without authority from the Department will not be paid for it.

There is nothing like Asthmalene. It brings instant relief, even in the worst cases. It cures when all else fails.

The Rev. C. F. WELLS, of Villa Ridge, Ill., says: "Your trial bottle of Asthmalene received in good condition. I cannot tell you how thankful I feel for the good derived from it. I was a slave, chained with putrid sore throat and Asthma for ten years. I despaired of ever being cured. I saw your advertisement for the cure of this dreadful and tormenting disease, Asthma, and thought you had overspoken yourselves, but resolved to give it a trial. To my astonishment, the trial acted like a charm. Send me a full-size bottle."

Drs. Taft Bros.' Medicine Co.:

Gentlemen: Your Asthmalene is an excellent remedy for Asthma and Hay Fever, and its composition alleviates all troubles which combine with asthma. Its success is astonishing and wonderful.

After having it carefully analysed, we can state that Asthmalene contains no opium, morphine, chloroform or ether. Very truly yours,

REV. DR. MORRIS WECHSLER.

Avon Springs, N. Y., Feb. 1, 1901.

Dr. Taft Bros. Medicine Co.

Gentlemen: I write this testimonial from a sense of duty, having tested the wonderful effect of your Asthmalene, for the cure of Asthma. My wife has been afflicted with spasmodic asthma for the past 12 years. Having exhausted my own skill as well as many others, I chanced to see your sign upon your windows at 130th street, New York. I at once obtained a bottle of Asthmalene. My wife commenced taking it about the 1st of November. I very soon noticed a radical improvement. After using one bottle her asthma has disappeared and she is entirely free from all symptoms. I feel that I can consistently recommend the medicine to all who are afflicted with this distressing disease. Yours respectfully,

O. D. PHELPS, M. D.

Dr. Taft Bros. Medicine Co.

Gentlemen: I was troubled with Asthma for 22 years. I have tried numerous remedies, but they have all failed. I ran across your advertisement and started with a trial bottle. I found relief at once. I have since purchased your full-size bottle and I am ever grateful. I have a family of four children and for six years was unable to work. I am now in the best of health and am doing business every day. This testimony you can make such use of as you see fit.

ancer Sufferers Gain Strength

A great many people suffering from Cancers and Tumors, find their strength rapidly slipping away. These terrible diseases undermine the health and sap the vitality.

To operate or use plasters, simply means further exhaustion. The new Constitutional treatment, instead of weakening, actually builds up the strength and invigorates the entire system, not only this, but it arrests the progress of the disease and entirely eliminates every particle of the Cancer poison from the system. It is a pleasant treatment, can be taken at home, without pain or inconvenience.

—Dry hard wood is selling for five dollars per cord and coal at seven dollars per ton.

—The old Grand Central Hotel property has changed its appearance of late, having been turned into stores.

—Mr. F. W. Fowlds, Hastings, installed a 4 k w. generator of the Jones & Moore type in his grist mill for supplying his own electric light.

Numerous fruit trees are being returned by the farmers in this vicinity at present and we understand spring deliveries will exceed the [illegible].

—Charges of violation of the Liquor License Act have been laid by Inspector Greene against two hotel keepers in Norwood and a Havelock hotel man.

—The weather has taken a turn for the warmer, it will go without saying that the "long lane" of beautiful fall weather has had a turn at last.

—Mr. William Kennedy, the genial overseer at the new Lakefield dam, now in course of construction, informed the Times yesterday, that work was progressing satisfactorily.

—While the morning service was in progress in the Roman Catholic church, Campbellford, on Sunday, a man dressed as a woman, entered and stayed during the service. It is not known why the man dressed in this way, or who he is.

—The Regal chorus is being photographed at Whiton's. The photo will be a valuable souvenir to remember when the Regal chorus sang before the future King and Queen of England.

—The Archidiaconal Conference of the Archdeaconry of Peterborough, meets on Tuesday and Wednesday of next week.

—Yesterday's storm was the worst of the season. All building operations were suspended. Last year on the same date as yesterday there was a storm raging all over the Province.

—A lady got on the G.T.R. train from Lindsay, and when arrived near Peterborough she was taken violently sick. She became insensible, and she was taken to the National Hotel. Later in the afternoon she was conveyed in the ambulance to the Nicholls Hospital. It is not known who the woman is.

—If our informant is right it is up to the Campbellford hotel keepers to keep the law, especially to do business within legal hours. Each hotel keeper has received a notice signed by twenty residents, informing them that they (the citizens) will see that the law is kept or know the reason why. Every town is on a par with Campbellford and if a few citizens had the sand the twenty citizens of Campbellford have there would be but little need of a license inspector. Campbellford is going to be a dry town on Sundays.

FIRST SIXTEEN YEARS

Determine Structure and Physical Health

If parents could realize what a crime they commit in permitting children to have heavy drugs during their early life, such drugs, for instance, as coffee, which stunts their growth, prepares them for dyspepsia and nervous wrecks they would do anything, go to any amount of trouble and care, to change the methods and give their children the advantages that nature demands to produce perfect specimens.

A sixty year old woman writes: "My over-indulgent papa used to say, at the table, 'Why not let the child have what she likes; it won't hurt her any.' He referred particularly to my drinking coffee, which I was very fond of as a child. He honestly thought it didn't hurt me, for with his strong body, apparently without nerves, he was not consciously affected by coffee, but the effect on me—a bundle of nerves— was to develop restlessness and stunt my growth.

The first effect after drinking coffee was that of delightful exhilaration and I felt courage and strength to attack almost any amount of active work, but in a few hours the reaction came, with misery in my chest, palpitation of the heart, and most unbearable pains in my stomach.

Finally my attention was called to Postum Cereal Food Coffee and we secured some of it. It was prepared according to directions, but breakfast being delayed, the Postum got an extra boiling, which developed all its virtues, and we all fell in love with it from the first moment. The change in our physical health, after drinking Postum, was something remarkable. We have as delicious coffee as any one could ask, but it is a perfectly healthy coffee, and the more we drink of it, in reason, the better we are. I am satisfied that the increasing amount of heart difficulty of late years, among young people, is directly attributable to the use of coffee, and it is a great blessing to have so safe and delicious a food coffee as Postum. Please omit my name from publication."—East Brookfield, Mass. Name given upon application to Postum Cereal Co., Ltd. Battle Creek, Mich.

JOHN HOOPER IS ALIVE

A Case of Very Much Mistaken Identity

The reappearance of a supposed-to-be dead man yesterday shows how easily mistakes in identity may occur. It will be remembered that a body was found in a well in Otonabee a few days ago and brought to Bellegham's undertaking parlors. There it was viewed by a number of persons, several of whom were positive that the corpse was that of "Silent John" Cooper, a well-known character. The men who made the identification were quite familiar with Cooper's appearance in life and quite positive that the body was his, no doubt they would have been equally positive if placed under oath before a legal tribunal. Nevertheless, there is no doubt that "Silent John" is alive. Yesterday morning Mr. J. Smithson, of Otonabee, who knows the man well, met him coming toward town. At about 10 a.m. "Silent John" walked into the Maple Leaf Hotel, Ashburnham, and was at once recognized by Mr. Geo. Lipsett, sr., who also knows him well. He maintained while in the hotel the singular taciturnity that gives him his sobriquet, but he admitted that he was John Cooper. He bears little resemblance to the dead man, being decidedly larger and of lighter complexion.

Mr. Timothy Crowley thinks the dead man is a tramp whom he saw a few days ago in the neighborhood where the body was found. The body will probably be sent to Toronto.

FRASERVILLE.

—A little over a week ago Mr. Donaldson's jersey cow left home about noon and it appears has not yet returned. As this is not the first time such a thing has happened, Mr. Donaldson feels like looking into the matter. He may be in Hope now, as it is believed the cow was taken in that direction. Others besides Mr. Donaldson feel interested in the matter. They were trusting to the cow's supplying them milk and butter in the winter, and this seems particularly unfortunate.

—The Fraserville waiting-room is on the way as well as by the way. Mr. Richardson is able to report progress.

—Monday night's rain made light hearts. Yes and a bright Hart too.

—Mr. Stewart visited friends here recently. He was formerly the Village Blacksmith. He is now engaged in a more pretentious business and has his home in Brockville. Some of his old friends were quite pleased to see him.

New Restaurant

Mr. A. D. Towle has returned to town, and will open up to-morrow a first class restaurant, where hot and cold meals will be served at all hours of the day and night. Mr. Towle has had long experience in catering to the public, and is sure to give satisfaction. Day boarders will have special attention and reduced rates.

GENERAL SPORTS

Peterboro Intermediate Football Champions of Ontario—Now for the Canadian

If there was ever a crooked town of sports in Canada, London, Ontario certainly bangs them all. Last year the Ontario Hockey Association saw fit to discipline a number of London hockey enthusiasts for deliberate crookedness. Among the number was a fellow, named Peel. This fall he wanted to play football in the O. R. F. U., but the Executive said: "Go way back and sit down." Last Saturday Peterboro played London on their own grounds in the first game of the finals. Peel played. Peterborough raised strong objections to the referee and the objections were sustained by the Union Executive, resulting in Peterborough being declared the Intermediate Champions of Ontario. There is not a man who has true sport at heart who will not back up the finding of the Executive. A team that will go into the "Ringer" business with pure bullheadedness, has no field in the O. R. F. U. nor any other organization. Until London gets an idea that they cannot run things their own way it will be up to the different amateur associations to keep anything with London attached to it out of their game in Ontario.

The Toronto Star says about the matter: "At a four hours' meeting of the Executive Committee of the Ontario Rugby Union at the Rossin House last night it was decided to suspend the individual players of the London team and award the intermediate championship to Peterborough. Those present were President A. W. Ballantyne, F. H. Thompson, E. DuMoulin, Frank Reid and Secretary J. D. McMurrich.

The suspension of the London players was due to the club playing Peel in last Saturday's game. Peel was a member of the London Hockey Club and was one of the players who were professionalized last year by the O. H. A. for playing with a ringer. London played Peel last Saturday after an effort had been made to reinstate him. London claimed to have played him open and above board, and with the belief that he was eligible to play, because he had made affadavit regarding his status, as required by the O.R.F.U. prior to his application for reinstatement being passed upon.

Peterborough won the O.R.F.U. intermediate championship on appeal. There'll be no heavy legal fees, either.

MR. STRATTON'S DENIAL

The Provincial Secretary Contradicts the Story of Mr. Wright.

The Toronto Star interviewed the Hon. J. R. Stratton on Wednesday last regarding the statement made by the Conservative Organizer, Alex. W. Wright, in the World, that Mr. Mabee had told him in the presence of another that "Mr. Smith and Hon. Mr. Stratton took the manuscript of his book up to Mr. Stratton's summer residence at Stony Lake, and edited, revised and changed it, to suit themselves, so that the two gentlemen named are entitled to share with the distinguished author the glory of authorship."

"There is not a word of truth in the statement made by Mr. Wright," said the Minister. "The fact is, I never edited one line of the Mabee pamphlet; I never suggested a line of it, nor did I know that a pamphlet was gotten up by Mr. Mabee against Mr. Whitney until it was issued. The statement is a pure invention, without the slightest foundation of which Mr. A. W. Wright is fully capable."

Mr. Wright's general statements are distinctly denied by his friend, Mr. Mabee, who positively states in his affidavit that he never received one dollar from Alexander Smith for the pamphlet or for anything else, and in addition to this, Hunter, Rose & Co. state they are handling the pamphlet entirely on their own responsibility, financial and otherwise."

A SHORT SESSION

of Our City Fathers Last Night—The Board of Works Report

The Town Council met in special session, last night, but only to adopt the following report of the Board of Works, when they, on motion of Ald. Roger, seconded by Ald. Rush, adjourned till this evening, when the question of ownership of the property on Bethune street, on which the Canadian Cordage Company purpose to construct their railway siding will be taken up.

There were present Mayor Denne, Ald. ermen, Best, Roger, Rush, Shortly, Hales, Cinkinsale, Edgcumbe and Corkery.

BOARD OF WORKS REPORT.

Ald. Best submitted the following:

Gentlemen,—Your Board of Works beg leave to report and recommend as follows:

1. That the penalty of $120 as shown in the Town Engineer's report for a penalty on Wm. Langford for not completing the Smith street bridge over the creek until 21 days after the time specified in the contract be not exacted, as the superstructure could not be obtained owing to the steel strike, and that the balance due the contractor be paid.

2. That R. Sheehy be paid the balance coming to him on account of the contract for the sidewalk on Belmont avenue.

All of which is respectfully submitted. The report was adopted as read.

SPENCE MEMORIAL

An Effort Being Made to Have a Representative Meeting

A meeting of the Dan Spence Memorial Fund subscribers will be held in the Town Council chamber on the evening of Thursday, November 21st, for the purpose of deciding on some final action regarding the disposal of the money now on hand.

The secretary of the fund, Mr. S. R. Armstrong, is sending to every subscriber a circular letter, asking them to be present, if at all possible. It reads as follows:

To the subscribers to the Daniel M. Spence Memorial Fund,—

The money subscribed for said fund amounts to but $450, and is insufficient to purchase an ambulance, as at first suggested. Moreover, the enterprise of a worthy citizen has supplied the want and there is now a very useful ambulance in the town.

It is suggested that the tribute to the patriotism and self-sacrificing spirit of the brave man of our town who gave his life in South Africa to maintain the honour and integrity of the Empire, should be coupled with the name of the citizen of our county who died in Africa as a soldier of the Queen, and that the County Council should be asked to supplement your gift to enable the erection in the Court House grounds of a suitable memorial in honor of both of the brave men who gave their lives for their country.

The committee ask that you will personally attend a meeting of the subscribers to be held at the council chamber on Thursday, 21st of November, at 8 p.m., to consider the above proposition, and the committee will assume that all who do not so attend assent to the suggested proposal.

By order of the Committee,

S. R. ARMSTRONG,
Secretary.

Peterborough, Oct. 17, 1901.

A PRETTY WEDDING

Nuptials of Miss Sarah Welch and Mr. R. Gillespie

A very pretty wedding took place on Wednesday evening at the residence of the bride's father, when Miss Sarah Welch, daughter of Mr. Thomas Welch, of Otonabee, was married to Mr. Richard Gillespie, of Hamilton, son of Mr. Peter Gillespie, of Otonabee.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. L. Armitage in the presence of between fifty and sixty relatives and friends.

The bride was prettily attired in a white muslin gown, and was assisted by the groom's sister, Miss Jennie Gillespie, who was similarly dressed.

The bride's brother, Mr. Joseph Welch acted as groomsman, and the wedding march was played by Miss Ethel Dawson.

Among the many handsome presents received was a china tea set from the people of the Coldsprings Sunday school, and a silver fruit basket from the class of boys taught by the bride. The Times extends its congratulations.

SOME POSITIVE PROOFS

What is Being Told of Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills—No Cure No Pay.

Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills cured me of kidney trouble of many years' standing, and after I had tried every other known remedy. Joseph Begley, Caledonia ave., Rochester, N.Y.

I was afflicted with rheumatism so badly at times that I could not walk. Nothing I took did me much good, until I tried Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills. Five boxes cured me entirely.

I had the misfortune to have suffered some years ago from paralysis, sustaining no less than three strokes. I could get nothing to do me any good until I was induced to try Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills. I took nine boxes, and although not by any means well, I think I am in a fair way to recovery. I can now walk with the aid of a stick and feel myself getting better every day. M. F. Mann, Merlin, N.Y.

Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills permanently cured me of backache. I suffered for years, and took two boxes. That is a year ago. I have not had a symptom since. James H. Jackson, Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.

I do not believe there is a medicine to compare with Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills. They cured me of indigestion and catarrh of the stomach, after nine years' suffering. H. S. Macdonald, G.T.R. shops, Montreal.

Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills are a positive and certain cure for la grippe, rheumatism, asthma, paralysis, catarrh, eczema, coughs, backache, indigestion, all stomach and liver troubles, female complaints, even when the diseases have been standing for many years, the most stubborn cases will yield. Price 50 cents per box. For sale by Ormond & Walsh. The Canada Chemical Company will forfeit $10 for any case that these pills do not cure.

Dr. Clarke's Sure Cure for Catarrh, and Dr. Clarke's Sure Cure for Eczema, same price. $10 will be paid for any case they will not permanently cure.

THE BOERS ARE GETTING NEARER TO CAPE TOWN

A Cape Policeman, who had Surrendered, Shot in Cold Blood

BRITISH SUFFER SOME SLIGHT REVERSES

Lessons of the War—Canadian Died of Fever—United States Naval Attache Makes a Statement

London, Nov. 15.—A correspondent of the London Times, wiring from Middleburg, Cape Colony, says that within the last two days the Boers have approached still nearer to Cape Town, either to obtain fresh horses or to revenge themselves on the Dutch farmers who have not supported them as they were expected to do. In the northeast district, Commandant Fouche and sixty men, leaving the main body, made a raid last Saturday to Miburg Siding. The raiders blew up a few yards of track and shot in cold blood a Cape policeman who had surrendered. Fouche has since returned to the neighborhood of Jamestown. A patrol of district mounted troops was worsted on Monday by an insignificant force of the enemy.

London, Nov. 15.—An Austrian merchant, who has recently returned from South Africa, gives it as his opinion that the Boers will hold out at least another six months. They would be glad to make peace, he believes, if substantial autonomy were obtained. The retention of the gold mine region under British control is absolutely necessary, he avers, for the maintenance of peace. The Afrikander Bund was maintained by Mr. Kruger by means of wealth derived from the gold mines, the Austrian declares.

FRONTAL ATTACKS FUTILE.

London, Nov. 15.—Lt.-Col. Livermore, United States military attache at Copenhagen, who has been lately visiting London, for the purpose of studying the South African campaign at the British headquarters, made the following statement:

"The terrible losses of the American Civil War and the Franco-Prussian War showed the necessity for changing close formations and spreading troops over wider areas, yet apparently similar concrete examples have been necessary to re-enforce the old lesson.

"To-day quick-firing guns kill ten times as many men at the same time as the old weapons were capable of doing. Frontal attacks are thus futile unless the defenders' line is stretched to a point where it is possible for the enemy to break through."

AN OLD GAME.

London, Nov. 15.—The Times' correspondent says that ever since last May the Boers have been in the habit of destroying entire Kaffir kraals, in order to efface the movements of their commandoes.

POLICE FORCED TO CHARGE.

On Several Occasions They Have Dispersed the Mobs With Their Batons—Many Injured

Dublin, Nov. 15.—The Parliamentary contest in Galway, resulting from the vacancy in the House of Commons, caused by the elevation of Martin H. F. Morris to the peerage, is being marked by a succession of fights which takes all the constabulary of the neighborhood to keep the contestants within bounds. Horace Plunkett, Unionist, a former member of Parliament for the south division of Dublin county, is opposing Colonel Arthur Lynch, who served on the Boer side in South Africa. The use of firearms has not yet been reported, but sticks, stones, bricks and bottles figure in the daily encounters. The windows and doors of Mr. Plunkett's committee rooms were smashed in during the night. The police have been obliged on several occasions to charge with their batons and disperse the mobs. There is a lengthy list of injured persons.

BULGARIA MUST KEEP ALOOF

Consul General Dickinson Demands Freedom in Miss Stone Incident.

Sofia, Bulgaria, Nov. 16.—Consul General Dickinson of Constantinople has supplemented his verbal representations to the Bulgarian government by a note to-day in which he recapitulates the history of the abduction by brigands of Miss Ellen M. Stone and her companion, Mme. Tsilka, and the steps taken to obtain her release, and reminds the foreign minister of his promise to give every assistance. He cites instances where the attitude of subordinate officials has not conformed with this assurance.

Finally, Mr. Dickinson repeats his demand for the noninterference of the government in the negotiations.

Mr. Dickinson also quotes from Miss Stone's letters, saying that the chief danger to which she is subjected is flight from hiding places by night at the approach of troops. He declares that the people of the United States will hold the Bulgarian government morally and legally responsible for the lives of the captives should the bandits, exasperated by pursuit, slay them.

The government's reply, according to the opinion expressed in official circles, will set forth that while hesitating to establish the precedent that the government give protection to brigands in treating for the ransom of captives in the present case, involving the safety of two ladies, the government, as an act of courtesy and humanity, will comply with Mr. Dickinson's request.

A private agent who was employed to visit Doubritsa reports that the members of the secret committee were discussing the lowest terms of ransom that would be acceptable. One member of the committee to-day stated that he had been invited to join the band and to take part in the kidnapping, but that he refused and deprecated an attack upon in-offensive women, pointing out that such action was calculated to cost the committee more in sympathy and support than the value of twenty ransoms. This view seems to be dawning gradually, even in Bulgarian circles, where the kidnapping is condoned as in the interest of a sacred cause.

CRIMEAN VETERAN KICKED TO DEATH

Ambrose Short, the Hero of Many Wars, Died in Lockport

ONE OF THE NOBLE 600.

Was in the Famous Charge Against the Russian Batteries—After Crimean He Served in India

Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 15.—A despatch to The Courier from Lockport, N.Y., says: "To pass through campaigns in India to form one of the first British "thin red line" in the Crimea, to come unscathed through the historic charge of the six hundred at Balaklava, and then to retire to private life to the peace and quiet of the grocery business and be kicked to death by the delivery horse, was the fate of Ambrose Short, hero of many wars and formerly a sergeant of the Queen.

"Ambrose Short, a well-known merchant of this city, died about midnight last night from the effects of injuries received last Sunday from being kicked by a horse. Mr. Short went to the barn to feed his grocery delivery animal and failing to speak to the animal as he usually did, the horse kicked out and struck him in the abdomen. The blow knocked Mr. Short down and the horse continued kicking, but he evaded the additional blows and finally crept to the house.

"Doctors were called and it was found he had sustained a fractured rib and several bruises. The fears of internal injuries were only too soon realized. He began to grow worse Wednesday morning and sank rapidly, passing away at an early hour this morning. For thirteen years Sergeant Short served in the British army, receiving an honorable discharge, a certificate of good character from his captain, a gold medal from the Queen and other medals for heroic and distinguished services on the field of battle.

STORY OF HIS LIFE.

"Ambrose Short was born in Bristol, England, in 1837. At the age of seventeen he ran away and joined the army. Although but a youth, he was allowed to enlist as soldiers were in demand, for the Crimean War was on. He joined the famous 8th Regiment, which went all through the Crimean War at the siege of Sebastopool, Inkerman, Alma, and Balaklava. In the last named battle he participated in the famous charge as a member of the six hundred, led by Earl Cardigan against the Russian batteries, and was one of the 150 who rode back. After the Crimean war he served in India. Upon leaving the army Mr. Short married and came with his wife in 1862 to Seneca Falls, N.Y. There he lived twenty years and then moved to Lockport, where he has remained ever since."

PUDDING FOR THE BOYS

The Soldiers' Wives' League Remembers the Men on the Veldt.

Montreal, Nov. 15.—The Montreal boys who are battling for King and Empire in South Africa will not be forgotten at the approaching happy Christmas-tide.

To-day there was despatched from this city several large packing cases containing all sorts of toothsome delicacies and serviceable articles, from plum duff to chewing-gum, and from flannel underwear to boot-laces. These articles have been sent to the front by the Soldiers' Wives League, that admirable organization founded at the commencement of the war by Mrs. Hutton, wife of Major-General Hutton, then in command of the Canadian forces.

The League has been ably assisted by Miss Gould, of this city, who by means of a chain letter, some time ago, secured a considerable sum of money, the balance of which, $300, has now been utilized in the purchase of plum pudding for all of the 1200 Canadian boys who are "out on active service." To the Montreal boys especially have been sent underclothing, handkerchiefs, socks, note-paper, beef tablets, candy, raisins, chewing gum, pipes, bootlaces, and other useful and acceptable articles.

Sir William McDonald has contributed 200 pounds of tobacco, 4 pounds for each man. Pipes and cigarettes have also been enclosed with the other parcels. The boxes have been sent to Mr. Richard Solomon, George street, Cape Town, who will send them forward to their destination. Friends and relatives of the Montreal boys in South Africa, who may be writing to them, are asked by the League to remind them that they may obtain their parcels by applying to Mr. Solomon. The cases containing the goods will go to Cape Town direct from St. John, N.B.

ARCHIDIACONAL CONFERENCE.

Peterborough Archdiaconry Meets at Lindsay Next Week

The eight Archidiaconal Conference of the Archdeaconry of Peterborough is to be held at Lindsay on Tuesday and Wednesday next, the 19th and 20th.

The programme prepared is an interesting one that promises profitable sessions.

On Tuesday afternoon "Christian Science" will be discussed by Rev. W. J. Creighton, M.A., of Bobcaygeon, and Rev. E. A. Langfeldt, of St. Luke's.

On the same afternoon a "Consideration of the Report of the Lambeth Conference on the Holy Communion," is on the programme, the discussion being by the Rev. John Creighton, B.A., Blackstock; Rev. J. C. Davidson, M.A., of St. John's, and Rev. R. Seaborne, M.A., of Bowmanville.

On Wednesday afternoon "The Work of the Sunday School" will be discussed by Mr. J. H. Knight, of Lindsay, and Rev. W. L. Armitage, of Peterborough.

THE CHEMONG BRIDGE

A Misunderstanding Has Arisen in Regard to the Dominion Grant

A misunderstanding has arisen in regard to the Dominion Government grant towards the new Chemong bridge, and it is probable that a deputation will go to Ottawa on Monday to interview the Minister and clear the matter up.

When aid was sought from the Government at Ottawa it first proposed to make a grant of $10,000 towards a filled-in bridge. The county, however, never intended to build such a bridge, and a deputation went to Ottawa with the plans for the bridge as proposed, and laid the matter before the Minister. The estimated cost of the bridge then was about $22,000 but completed it has cost nearly $31,000. The Government agreed to give one-third the cost, and a demand was made upon the completion of the bridge for the one-third of the $31,000 on the total cost. The Minister, however, seems to think that the cost was not to exceed $22,000, and that it was one-third of this amount that was promised. The deputation, however, had no such understanding of the promise. It is probable an explanation will straighten the matter out.

Mr. Anderson, chairman of the Road and Bridge committee; Mr. Hawthorne, who was Warden at the time the grant was made, and the members will be the deputation.

VITRIOL THROWING MYSTERY

Woman of Unknown Past Throws Acid on Attendant of Doctor

Fort Dodge, Iowa, Nov. 16.—A woman who signs herself Julia Moorehouse, but of whose past little is known here, threw vitriol in the face of Mrs. George Wadsley last night, inflicting serious injuries. Mrs Wadsley is an attendant in Dr Bishop's office and is a woman of excellent standing in Fort Dodge.

While the reason for this attack is unexplained, the act itself is the climax of a series of persecutions to which Mrs. Wadsley has been subjected since last August and in which Dr Bishop has shared to the extent of receiving offensive letters signed with the name of the Moorehouse woman who has disappeared since last night's attack. The police are baffled.

FIGHTS AMERICAN INFLUENCE

Colonial Office is Improving Conditions in West Indies.

London, Nov. 16.—The colonial office is instituting certain educational schemes in the British colonies of those islands designed to make the king's subjects realize the advantage of maintaining close relations with the mother country. The principal purpose of this move is to counteract the encroachment of American influences in the West Indies.

The colonial secretary does not stop with the organization of steamship lines to carry to market the products of the British West Indies. He now prescribes technical curricula for the elementary schools of the colonies and promotes lecture courses to instruct the people in the art of successful development of their resources in the several countries. Agricultural classes are in full swing in the Leeward islands and the authorities report hopefully of their progress.

LIQUOR TRAFFIC CAUSES ANARCHY

Mrs. Stevens Says Saloons are The Schools of Lawlessness.

LIQUOR USED IN THE ARMY

Good Effect of England's Policy is Being Felt—Protest Against State Regulated Vice

Fort Worth, Texas, Nov. 115.—The following is an abstract of the address of President Stevens, of the W. C.T.U., at the annual convention, now being held here:

"Ours is a land, and ours is a nation where there should be no hatred of rule; where there should be no such experiences as have come to us thrice within four decades. One of the chief resources of anarchy in our country is without doubt the un-American liquor business, for the saloons are the schools of lawlessness. Because we are patriots, if for no other reason, we should work for the overthrow of the saloon power, and for the extermination of the liquor traffic.

JOY AND VICTORY.

"While the year has had its sorrows and disappointments it also has had its joys and victories. Among the temperance victories of the past year we gratefully record the action of the Senate in ratifying the treaty for the protection of the African races, and we are reliably told that for twenty months neither Boers nor English in South Africa have allowed liquors to officers or men. The good effect of England's policy in discouraging the use of liquor in the army is being felt, and we have reason to believe that the soldier boys do not feel defrauded. The French Minister of War has sent a message to every commandant of an army corps prohibiting the sale of liquor with an acholic basis in barracks, canteen, in camp of field, and moreover, provision is made for lectures before the troops on the effects and dangers of alcoholism. Even Russia has a governmental commission which recommends the prohibition of liquor selling in army canteens. Austria and Germany are endeavoring to strengthen the effiency of their arm by discouraging the use of alcoholics.

THE ARMY SALOON.

"In view of all this and much more, it is not at all strange that the Congress of the United States decided that the army saloon in this country must be abolished. But evidently there is a concerted plan on the part of the anti-temperance forces to try to prove that the law is productive of evil results—an increase of drunkenness, desertions, riots, etc.,—and testimony galore to this end is being gathered and given to the public. Meanwhile the temperance societies, ministers associations and others, are likewise receiving testimony of an entirely opposite character.

"We must make our strongest protest in strongest form against State regulated vice in the possessions of the United States.

"There is a rapidly increasing sentiment against the use of the cigarette. Forty-two States and the District of Columbia now have laws forbidding the sale of cigarettes or tobacco to minors."

MR. HAYS NOT RETURNING

The Story That He Will Resume Control of G. T. R. Denied

Montreal, Nov. 16.—The statement emanating from Chicago to the effect that Mr. C. M. Hays is to return to the Grand Trunk as president and general manager is authoritatively denied at the London office, says a special cable to the Star.

Mr. G. B. Reeve, second vice-president and general manager, speaking on the subject to-day said:

"Mr. Hays is on his way to England for a holiday, with his two daughters; he has not arrived there yet. He will continue his trip to the Continent. There is no doubt he will see some of our people when in England, but, so far as any arrangement as to his coming back to the Grand Trunk is concerned, I know nothing of it, and if there had been, I think I would have been sure to hear of it."

Mr. Reeve, it is well known, has always given the Grand Trunk "boys" to understand that promotion would come from within, and not from without, and he stated when he came from California to assume the general managership he only did so to keep the position warm for some Grand Trunk man. In Grand Trunk circles, as a rule, Mr. Frank W. Morse, third vice-president, is looked upon as the coming man.

On the other hand, there is a persistent story that Mr. Hays is coming back and that Mr. Reeve will visit England after his present agreement with the G. T. R. expires next May, lay down the reigns of office to Mr. Hays, and retire to his California ranch, which, as a matter of fact, he never desired to leave.

These rumours form the subjects of a great deal of gossip amongst railway men to-day.

De Lautrec on Ticket-of-Leave

Toronto, Nov. 15.—Count de Lautrec, who was sentenced to seven years imprisonment in St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary, has just been released on ticket-of-leave.

The Count who has had a very remarkable career, was in Toronto last fall in capacity of witness for the Crown in the trial of Fred Lee Rice, Thomas Jones and Frank Rutledge, the burglars who robbed a bank and the post office at Aurora. Lautrec is a Russian nobleman of a rather wandering disposition. He has roamed over the greater part of Europe, and was finally sent to Siberia for a political offence. He managed to give the authorities, the slip, however, and came to America. In some way or other he got mixed up with the theft of some bonds from Montreal. He was arrested in Chicago, and while awaiting extradition the Rutledge gang were also arrested and became his fellow prisoners. He overheard some conversations they had with their lawyer and they also told him some important facts about the Aurora case. His appearance at the trial in Toronto stirred the three prisoners exceedingly, and strong efforts were made to discredit him. These, however, were not successful, and to-day, no doubt as a reward, he is practically a free man. The Count is writing a book descriptive of his experiences in America.

May Run Bank in China

Washington, Nov. 16.—Mr Rockhill's attempt to interest American capitalists in the establishment of an international bank in China is bearing fruit. To-day Walter G. Oakman, president of the Guarantee Trust Company of New York, called on Secretary Hay to talk upon this subject. There seems to be a desire on the part of other capitalists to know how far they can count upon the aid of the United States government in the maintenance of the bank and the secretary of state is referring the inquirers to the secretary of the treasury, who will determine the matter.

MISTAKE CATTLE FOR DEER

Complaint That Settlers Have Suffered Loss by Hunters

Mr. R. Vance, who lives in the northern part of the County, was in town yesterday and complained that deer hunters were not satisfied with slaughtering the deer, but were killing and wounding the cattle belonging to the settlers. On Tuesday of last week he missed a fine young steer, and subsequently found it dead in the bush, with a bullet hole through its head. Other similar cases were also reported.

The fact is, our informant says, the woods are so full of hunters during the open season, that it is hardly safe for man or beast to be at large.

JEFFRIES RETAINS THE CHAMPIONSHIP

San Francisco, Nov. 16.

Ten thousand people saw the fight between Jeffries and Ruhlin last night. The betting was 2 to 1. Following is the fight by rounds.

Round One.—Ruhlin leads for head and lands lightly with left punch. Both men cautious. Jeffries' left goes around Ruhlin's head but no damage. Jeffries tapped Gus lightly on head with left. Jeffries uppercuts Ruhlin to jaw with left. Jeffries swings again, but missed. Gus blocked left jab for face. Jeff Rushed but Ruhlin came into action. Jeffries essays a left for body, but the Ohio man got out of harm's way. Jeff is smiling. The round was tame with the champion at slight advantage.

Round Three.—The men came up strong and Ruhlin shot in with right and left, which were stopped. Jeff elbowed his way back and finally caught right and left to face. Then rushed, landing on body. The champion led with left and was countered. Ruhlin found Jeff's head and in a short interchange neither had the advantage. The men fought at close range, Gus landing on Jeff's face and stopping the latter's attempt at retaliation with strong rights. Ruhlin feinted with right and the Akron man landed with a terrific left to the eye. Jeff pursued Gus and landed with two hands. In a rush Jeff landed weak body blows. Ruhlin again appeals to referee. [illegible] came back and[?] effectual short arm punch. Jeffries easily had the advantage, with Gus constantly complaining. Men closed several times, Ruhlin fighting low and Jeff apparently looking for chance to land knockout punch. Jeff retreated about the ring until the spectators hissed him. Round ended with neither men in distress, but Ruhlin the more worried of the two.

Round Four.—After short exchange at close quarters Ruhlin landed on face. He was forced back and Jeff smiled as Ruhlin again rebuked him. Jeff landed left, blackening Gus' left eye, then pursued him, fighting at short range and plainly wearing his man down. Ruhlin lacked aggressiveness and retreated as Jeff swung left and right and missed. Gus led for the face and Jeff pushed him across the ring. Then the champion waited Gus across the ring again and landed a fierce left on jaw. Ruhlin shot out ineffectual left and Jeff waded in, smashing Ruhlin left and right. Gus went down and took the count. He came up apparently weak and the gong saved him. Ruhlin was plainly in the greatest distress in this round. Round is Jeff's favor.

Round Five.—Ruhlin wore a distressed expression when he came up. Jeffries went in with straight arm blows, but was blocked. Jeffries landed light hook on jaw and short left to ribs and then again to neck with right. A volley followed this, in which the champion felt Gus with left to face. Ruhlin ducked and retreated steadily. Jeff followed the advantage and bored in, touching Ruhlin beneath chin with right and forced Ruhlin to ropes, after which Gus went to the floor and at the count of 8 staggered to his feet. He ceased fighting and Jeffries went in for a knockout. Ruhlin was utterly dazed and missed wild swings, while Jeffries threw him against the ropes. Jeff was declared the winner of the fight.

SOUTHERN PART OF BETHUNE ST. IN DISPUTE

Town Commissioners Sell a Portion to the Canadian Cordage Company

WHICH IS SAID TO BE PUBLIC PROPERTY

Town Council Knew Nothing of the Transaction Until Confronted With the Deed of Sale

Town Clerk Armstrong's comfortable office was the scene of no little consternation last night, when our city fathers once again met, for the third time, to pass a by-law authorizing the Canadian Cordage Company to construct a railway siding on Bethune street, and found to their astonishment, that the matter had been taken entirely off their hands by the Commissioners of the Town Trust. Town Solicitor E. B. Edwards under instructions, had prepared a by-law on these lines, giving the Cordage Company the right of way of 425 feet of siding from the G.T.R. spur line running into the oil works east of Bethune street and north of Perry, southward across Perry street into the Cordage Company's property east of Bethune street. The Council were to have passed this by-law Thursday night, but in privately discussing the matter down stairs before convening in the Council Chamber above, the fact arose that our Commissioners claimed vested rights in that portion of Bethune street below Perry, which they assert had never been a public highway, nor under the corporation's control, and is consequently outside the Council's jurisdiction. Ever careful of the Town's interest, Ald. Rogers at once suggested that before taking action on the by-law, Council should procure from their Solicitor his opinion on the matter. On this understanding they adjourned till last night, when they found the following letter to hand, in which Mr. Edwards gives it as his legal opinion that the land in question below Perry street is a continuation of Bethune street, and corporation property, although, as he adds in parenthesis, there may be some ground for the opposite contention.

MR. EDWARDS' DECISION.

Gentlemen,—

I have examined the plans filed in the Registry office by the Commissioners of the Town Trust for the subdivision of the southern reserve south of Townsend street, I find that the existing town streets running north and south from George street to Stewart, inclusive, were extended southward into the reserve and the lots laid out upon them in accordance with the uniform plan of survey of town lots, according to the original survey, the lots being numbered westward from George street in the same way. Amongst these streets, Bethune street is continued southward showing the line of the Grand Trunk Railway upon it. Although the name Bethune street is not written upon the plan indicating the street, I think it is quite clear that it was laid out as a street from Townsend southward to Lake street and that the land upon which the proposed siding is to be erected is a part of Bethune street. This is confirmed by By-law No. 161, passed by the Council on the 22nd June, 1882, under which permission is given to the Port Hope, Beaverton and Lindsay Railway Co. to construct the railway along and across the town streets as therein named, including the whole of Bethune street, and its continuance south of Townsend street and along and over the unoccupied lands of the town upon the south side of the Town.

The land south of Townsend street was originally purchased by the town from the Government, and it was not until the passing of the act of 1861 that it was first vested in the Commissioners of the Town Trust. Prior to that time it appears to have been held by the Town Corporation directly, although the patent therefore does not appear to have been issued until 1863, but it is evident that at the time of the passing of the by-law of 1855, and while the property south of Townsend street was still under the direct control of the Council, the continuation of Bethune street south of Townsend street had been determined upon by the Council, if not actually carried out.

On the whole, therefore, I am of opinion (though there may be some ground for the opposite contention,) that the land upon which it is proposed to construct the siding for the Cordage Co. is, in fact, a part of Bethune street. Yours truly,

E. B. Edwards.

THE DEED OF SALE.

The Council was about to meet in open session, naturally feeling perfectly safe in acting under their Solicitor's opinion, and passing the by-law above mentioned, when Messrs. Robert and Adam Hall, representing the Cordage Co., walked into the Clerk's office, and remarked that they had that morning purchased from the Commissioners for $150 the property in question, and producing in evidence thereof a deed of ownership to a portion of land which Mr. Edwards opines to be a public street. Naturally, our worthy Aldermen were amazed at the turn of affairs, and freely commented on what was considered to be an action on the part of the Commissioners fraught with danger to the Town's interests in this particular direction. Of course, there was no further object in passing the by-law, and Council instead of convening, spent an hour or more in discussing the pros and cons of the situation, during which an examination of the deed of sale revealed the fact that the guarantee covenants had been struck out, which seemingly would suggest that the Commissioners themselves are not so sure of their vested rights in said property. However, the Cordage Company has purchased such rights to the property as the Commissioners possessed, (whatever they be) and unless litigation arises, which is not likely, the matter is settled definitely, excepting the passing of a by-law giving a right of way across Perry street.

The Council naturally feels surprised that the Commissioners had not, at least, met jointly with them before disposing of property concerning which there seems to be at any rate some question as to the right of control, for by this action that portion of Bethune street from Perry to Lake street is practically placed outside the Corporation's jurisdiction. It further appears that a by-law was passed by the Town giving a right of of way to the Port Hope line along Bethune street, including that portion in dispute; this would indicate that the land south of Perry street is Corporation property, and not under the Commissioners' control.

McILMYRE OBJECTS.

During the evening Mr. McIlmyre appeared upon the scene, in company with his solicitor, Mr. R. F. McWilliams, to petition Council not to grant this siding to the Cordage Co. He has property on the west side of Bethune st., south of Perry, facing the G.T.R., which he claims will be materially injured by the construction of proposed siding. Of course, now that the matter has been summarily taken out of the Council's hands, he will have to argue his point with the Cordage Company, whose proposed siding his property faces.

BOER PRISONERS' APPEAL

Those at Bermuda Say They are Ill Clothed and Not Fed Properly

Boston, Nov. 16.—The Boston Globe to-day publishes the following letter of appeal under date of Bermuda, Nov. 1:

I have been requested by some of my fellow prisoners of war here to write to you to ask you if you would be so kind as to make an appeal to the public in your columns on behalf of the prisoners, who are in great need of clothing. No clothing is issued to them. The British Government offers to sell it to them, or take their notes of hand for the amount, payable in South Africa after the war. Nine-tenths of the prisoners have no money and no one wishes to give a promissory note for any amount, and that payable at a time when they will hardly be able to make both ends meet. Many of these men have wives and children at home for whom they will have to work, and on whom they will have to spend their money after the war.

It is true that the prisoners are allowed to work for the authorities, but they are only paid at the rate of a penny (2 cents) an hour. This is a little sum since the food supplied by the British is most insufficient for a man working eight hours a day. The rations received here are barely enough to keep body and soul together. The clothes worn by most of the prisoners are in a most disreputable state, being the same they were captured in. None have since been given them. Hoping you will acquaint the public with this, what I consider a disgraceful state of affairs, and trusting you will take the matter up. I remain yours truly.

Morning Times

PETERBOROUGH, NOVEMBER 16, 1901

A naval officer writes to the London Times to ask if England should not square herself with Holland, which has given such active aid to the Boers on the plea that they are fighting for their independence. He reminds them that for the last thirty years the Dutch have been trying to deprive the Atchinese of Sumatra of their independence, and that Holland owes her present position there to England's having stopped the exportation of arms and ammunition from the Straits Settlements. England, the writer says, might bring home the Sultan of Atcheen in an English man of war, assist his people to carry on their war of independence from London, and supply them with arms and sympathy. In less than six months the Dutch would require every man they have, as well as their pet allies, the Boers, to hold the island. That would be tit for tat.

A despatch from the Hague says that the Administrative Council of the Arbitration Tribunal will meet on November 20 to decide on the appeal of the Boers against the ruling that the war in South Africa is not subject to the court's consideration. Really there seems to be no reason why the Council (if there is such a body) should not meet and discuss the Boer war, or the Flying Dutchman, or the Man in the Iron Mask. The little unpleasantness now going on in South Africa is no longer a war between two nations; it is a civil war. Not only did the British Government annex the Transvaal and the Orange Free State to British South Africa, but the alleged Boer Government annexed British South Africa to the alleged Boer Republics. So any way the union seems to be complete and there is nothing left to arbitrate.

If Mr. Brodrick's statistics about the Boers are nearly accurate, and there is every reason to believe they are, the continued resistance is a monumental crime, as well as a monumental folly. With fortytwo thousand Boers in custody and eleven thousand killed, wounded or left the country on parole, and only ten thousand in the field, surely never was a cause more hopeless than that of the Boers. The humiliating thought in connection with this is the fact that the men chiefly responsible for this crime and folly are the English traitors who, to gain a party advantage, are encouraging England's enemies with vain hopes and false information.

Mr. Wolmarans, the Boer envoy at Amsterdam, takes the trouble to deny that there are any peace negotiations in progress. After the very explicit statements by Lord Salisbury, Mr. Chamberlain and Mr. Brodrick that this is a fight to a finish, the denial would seem to be superfluous. With 42,000 Boer prisoners and 11,000 otherwise "accounted for," it would be idiotic to make terms with the 10,000 still at large. In a few months at the outside the 10,000 will be put out of business and there will be nobody left to negotiate with but the jawsmiths at The Hague.

The objection to the Boer peace scheme of the two deceased Republics being revived and their autonomy guaranteed by France and Russia, is that it lacks finality. Lord Salisbury and Mr. Chamberlain have both declared that it is the intention of the Government to finish this war in such a manner that it will not have to be fought over again, which is a humane, as well as patriotic determination. At the outset Mr. Kruger frankly stated that the war would determine whether South Africa would be British or Dutch So be it.

When the Canadian farmers understand fattening poultry as well as they now understand the feeding of cattle and hogs — and that time is not far off — the exports of poultry to Britain will be enormous. Shippers report that Canada produces the best poultry in the world, but it has not been well handled in the past, hence the profit has been smaller than it should have been.

Lord Salisbury is anything but a jingo statesman, and his declaration that the Government intends to deal so effectually with the South African peril it will never require doing again, will make a great impression on the public mind. It will outweigh a good deal of pro-Boer and Little England shriekings.

The death of Lady Catherine Carew recalls the fact that she danced at the Brussels ball on the eve of Waterloo. The female survivors of that ball seem to be almost as numerous as the male survivors of the little unpleasantness which occurred the next day.

If something is not done to restrain notoriety hunters and suicides from shooting Niagara Falls, the place will soon become a field of horrors, and lose all charm for the ordinary tourist.

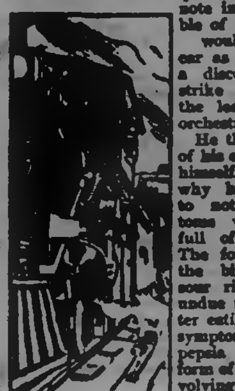
The Engineer

Leaning from the cab window does more with his ears than his eyes. The "rumble and grumble and roar" of his engine are to him articulate speech, and a false note in that jumble of sounds would catch his ear as quickly as a discord would strike the ear of the leader of an orchestra.



He thinks more of his engine than himself. That is why he neglects to notice symptoms which are full of warning. The foul tongue, the bitter taste, sour risings, and undue fullness after eating are but symptoms of dyspepsia or some form of disease involving the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition. In time the heart, liver, lungs, or other organs are involved and the engineer has to lay off.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition. It purifies the blood and builds up the body with sound healthy flesh.

"I used ten bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and several vials of his 'Pleasant Pellets' a year ago this spring, and have had no trouble with indigestion since," writes Mr. W. T. Thompson, of Townsend, Broadwater Co., Montana. "Words fail to tell how thankful I am for the relief, as I had suffered so much and it seemed that the doctors could do me no good. I got down in weight to 125 pounds, and was not able to work at all. Now I weigh 160 and can do a day's work on the farm. I have recommended your medicine to several, and shall always have a good word to say for Dr. Pierce and his medicine."

Josh Billings: "I luv a rooster for two things—one is the crow that is in him and the other is the spurs that air on him to bak up his crow with."

The Times has become a popular paper, not only amongst the people of the town and Ashburnham, but also amongst the residents of the surrounding towns and villages.

Mr. G. B. Hilliard, of Lakefield, says the Times is regarded in Lakefield as the brightest paper that comes to that burg, and is read by very many in the village.

Wm. O'Brien, the genial clerk of Douro, who has long been a subscriber to the daily edition, says that the Times is the popular paper in that township, 75 per cent. of the people being readers. He hopes that it may long keep up its onward pace.

Mr. Wm. Gallen, Reeve of Burleigh and Anstruther, states that the whole back country reads the Times, and regard the paper as one of the very best. He says that it is always full of good things.

Mr. P. P. Young, Young's Point, says everybody reads the Times in that locality. It is admirably conducted.

Mr. James Stevenson, ex-M.P., says the Times is the brightest and best newspaper published in Peterborough.

Commodore Cahill says he would sooner miss his breakfast than miss getting the Times. It is a famous appetizer only equalled by Cahill's celebrated ale.

Mr. J. H. Thornton, Omemee, says the Times is very popular in that village and is widely read.

Rev. Mr. [illegible] thinks the Times deserves great credit for its progressive spirit. It is up-to-date, giving all the news up to four o'clock each morning. North Smith, brought us in a couple of Recently Mr. Sage and another of clubs for the Weekly Times of 30 names. Here are 30 names from one section of Smith, that are constant readers of the Times.

Mr. Harry Garbett, Reeve of Smith, says that the Times is the popular paper in that locality.

Mr. James Haptie, Springville, gives similar evidence, and says you can hardly go into a house in his locality that the Times is not present.

Mr. Pearson, the great horse buyer, of Montreal, told the Times the other day that he has better results from the advertisement in the Times than from any other paper. He says he finds the Times is read by almost everybody in the district. He knows this, for almost every horse he buys is the product of the Times advertisement.

Mr. T. Donaldson, Cavan, member of the Counties' Council of Northumberland and Durham, says that the Times is very popular in Cavan.

Mr. James Chambers, Manvers, bears similar testimony in regard to Manvers Township.

David Healy says that in Asphodel, Hastings and Norwood, everybody literally reads the Times.

Dr. Bingham, the popular city Medical Health Officer, missed his Times the other morning, and came to the office for a copy. He said he was not feeling well, and wondered what was the matter, until he remembered he had not had his Times.

The above and a few of the many evidences we have in our possession of the high regard in which this great family journal is held by the people. Merchants and other advertisers should remember that hundreds upon hundreds of families throughout the town and country cannot be reached by any other way except through the Times.

"MATT."

A TALE OF A CARAVAN

"'May I ask where you come from?' I said. 'I mean, where do you live?'

"Without speaking, she stretched out her arm, and pointed across the lake in the direction of the sea. I could not help noticing then, as an artist, that the sleeve of her gown was loose and torn, and that her arm was round and well-formed, and her hand, though rough and sunburnt, quite genteelly small.

"'If it is not inquisitive, may I ask your name?'

"'Matt,' was the reply.

"'Is that all? What is your other name?'

"'I've got no other name. I'm Matt, I am.'

"'Indeed! Do your parents live here?'

"'Got no parents,' was the reply.

"'Your relations, then.. You belong to some one, I suppose?'

"She gave me another nod.

"'Yes,' she answered, nibbling rapidly. 'I belong to William Jones.'

"'Oh, to him,' I said feeling as familiar with the name as if I had known it all my life. 'But he's not your father?'

"She shook her head emphatically.

"'But of course he's a relation?'

"Another shake of the head.

"'But you belong to him!' I said, considerably puzzled. 'Where were you born?'

"'I wasn't born at all,' answered Matt. 'I come ashore.'

"This was what the immortal Dick Swiveller would have called a 'staggerer.' I looked at the girl again, inspecting her curiously from top to toe. Without taking her eyes from mine, she stood on one leg bashfully, and fidgeted with the other foot. She was certainly not bad-looking, though evidently a very rough diamond. Even the extraordinary head-gear became her well.

"'I know what you was doing there,' she cried suddenly, pointing to my easel. 'You was painting!'

"The discovery not being a brilliant one, I took no trouble to confirm it; but Matt thereupon walked over to the canvas, and, stooping down, examined it with undisguised curiosity. Presently she glanced again at me.

"'I know what this is,' she cried, pointing. 'It's water. And that's the sky. And that's trees. And these here'— for a moment she seemed in doubt, but added, boldly—'pigs.'

"Now, as the subject represented a flock of sheep huddling together close to a pond on a rainy common, this suggestion was not over-complimentary to my artistic skill. I was on the point of correcting my astute critic, when she added, after a moment's further inspection:

"'No; they're sheep. Look ye now, I know! They're sheep.'

"'Pray, don't touch the paint,' I suggested, approaching her in some alarm. 'It is wet, and comes off.'

"She drew back cautiously; and then, as a preliminary to further conversation, sat down on the grass, giving me further occasion to remark her length and shapeliness of limb. There was a free-and-easiness, not to say boldness, about her manner, tempered though it was with gusts of bashfulness, which began to amuse me.

"'Can you paint faces?' she asked, curiously.

"I replied that I could even aspire to that accomplishment, by which I understood her to mean portrait-painting, if need were. She gave a quiet nod of satisfaction.

"'There was a painter chap came to Aberglyn last summer, and he painted William Jones.'

"'Indeed?' I said, with an assumption of friendly interest.

"'Yes, I wanted him to paint me, but he wouldn't. He painted William Jones' father, though, along o' William Jones.'

"This with an air of unmistakable disgust and recrimination. I looked at the girl more observantly. It had never occurred to me till that moment that she would make a capital picture! just the sort of 'study' which would fetch a fair price in the market. I adopted her free and easy manner, which was contagious and sat down on the grass opposite to her.

"'I tell you what it is, Matt,' I said, familiarly, 'I'll paint you though the other painter chap wouldn't.'

"'You will?' she cried, blushing with delight.

"'Certainly; and a very nice portrait I think you'll make. Be good enough to take off your hat, that I may have a better look at you.'

"She obeyed me at once, and threw the clumsy thing down on the grass beside her. Then I saw that her head was covered with short black curls, clinging round a bold white brow unfreckled by the sun. She glanced at me sidelong, laughing, and showing her white teeth. Whatever her age was, she was quite old enough to be a coquette.

"Promptly as possible I put the question: 'You have not told me how old you are.'

"'Fifteen,' she replied, without hesitation.

"'I should have taken you to be at least a year older.'

"She shook her head.

"'It's fifteen year come Whitsuntide,' she explained, 'since I come ashore.

"Although I was not a little curious to know what this 'coming ashore' meant, I felt that all my conversation had been categorical to monotony, and I determined, therefore, to reserve further inquiry until another occasion. I thought this a good opportunity to show my natural politeness. Would she like to look at the interior? She said she would, though without exhibiting much enthusiasm.

"I thereupon led the way up the steps and into the vehicle. Matt followed; but, so soon as she caught a glimpse of the interior, stood timidly on the threshold. What is there in the atmosphere of a house, even the rudest, which places the visitor at a disadvantage, as compared with the owner! Matt for a moment was awed.

"'Come in, Matt; come in,' I said.

"She came in by slow degrees; and I noticed, for the first time— seeing how near her hat was to the roof— that she was unusually tall. I then did the honors of the place; showed her my sleeping arrangements, my culinary implements, everything that I thought would interest her. I offered her the armchair, or turned-up bedstead, but she preferred a stool which I sometimes used for my feet, and, sitting down upon it, looked round her with obvious admiration.

"'Should you like to live in a house like this?' I asked, encouragingly.

"She shook her head with decision.

"'Why not?' I demanded.

"She did not exactly know why, or, at any rate, could not explain. Wishing to interest and amuse her, I handed her a portfolio of my sketches, chiefly in pencil and pen and ink, but a few in water-colors. Her manner changed at once, and she turned them over with little cries of delight. It was clear that Matt had a taste for the beautiful in Art, but her chief attraction was for pictures respecting the human face or figure.

"Among the sketches she found a crayon-drawing of an antique and blear-eyed gentleman, in a skull cap copied from some Rembrandtish picture I had seen abroad.

"'I know who this is!' she exclaimed. 'It's William Jones' father!

"I assured her on my honor that William Jones' father was not personally known to me, but she seemed a little incredulous. Presently she rose to go.

"I can't stop no longer,' she explained; 'I've got to go up to Monkshurst for William Jones.'

"'Monkshurst? Is that where the polite Mr. Monk resides?'

"'Yes, up in the wood,' she replied with a grimace expressive of no little dislike.

"Is Mr. Monk a friend of yours?"

"Her answer was a very decided negative. Then, slouching to the door, she swung herself down to the ground. I followed, and stood on the threshold looking down at her.

"'Don't forget that I'm to paint your picture,' I said. 'When will you come back?'

"'To-morrow, may be.'

"'I shall expect you. Good-by!"

"'Good-by, master,' she returned, reaching up to shake hands.

"I watched her as she walked away toward the road, and noticed that she took bold strides like a boy. On reaching the road, she looked back and laughed, then she drew herself together, and began running like a young deer, with little or nothing of her former clumsiness, until she disappeared among the sand-hills.

* * *

"Thursday— This morning, just after breakfast, when I had entered the Caravan to prepare my materials for the day's painting, Tim appeared at the door with a horrid grin.

"'There's a young lady asking for ye,' he said.

"I had forgotten for the moment my appointment of the day before, and when I leaped from the Caravan, I perceived, standing close by, with her back to me, and her face toward the lake, the figure of a young woman. At first I failed to identify her, for she wore a black hat and a white feather, a cloth jacket, and a dress which almost reached the ground; but she turned round as I approached her, and I recognized my acquaintance.

"I cannot say that she was improved by her change of costume. In the first place, it made her look several years older—in fact, quite young-womanly. In the second place, it was tawdry. The dress was of thin silk old and frayed, and looking as if it had suffered a good deal from exposure to the elements, as was indeed the actual case. The jacket was also old, and seemed made of the rough material which is usually cut into sailors' pea-jackets; which was the case also. The hat was obviously new, home-made.

"'So you have come,' I said, shaking hands. 'Upon my word I didn't know you.'

"She laughed delightedly, and glanced down at her attire, which clearly afforded her the greatest satisfaction.

"'I put on my Sunday clothes,' she explained, ''cause I was going to have my likeness took. Don't you tell William Jones.'

"I promised not to betray her to that insufferable nuisance, and refrained from informing her that I thought her ordinary costume far more becoming than her seventh-day finery.

"'That's a nice dress,' I said, hypocritically. 'Where did you buy it?'

"'I didn't buy it. It came ashore.'

"'What! When you "come ashore" yourself?'

"'No fear!' she answered. 'Last winter when the big ship went to bits out there.'

"'Oh, I see! Then it was a portion of a wreck?'

"'Yes, it come ashore; and, look ye now, this jacket come ashore, too On a sailor chap.'

"'And the sailor chap made you a present of it, I suppose?'

"'No fear!' she repeated, with her sharp shake of the head. 'How could he give it to me, when he was drownded and come ashore? William Jones gave it to me, and I altered it my own self— look ye now— to make it fit.'

"She was certainly an extraordinary young person, and wore her mysterious finery with a coolness I thought remarkable, it being quite clear from her explanation, that all was fish that came to her net, or, in other words, that dead men's clothes were as acceptable to her unprejudiced taste as any others. However, the time was happening on, and I had my promise to keep. So I got my crayon materials and made Matt sit down before me on a stool, first insisting, however that she should divest herself of her head-gear, which was an abomination but which she discarded with extreme reluctance. Directly I began she became rigid, and fixed herself so to speak, as people do when being photographed —her eyes glaring on vacancy, her whole face lost in self-satisfied vacuity.

"'You needn't keep like that,' I cried; 'I want your face to have some expression. Move your head about as much as you like, laugh and talk— it will be all the better.'

"'Las' time I was took,' she replied, 'the chap said I mustn't move.

"'Ah! I suppose he was a traveling photographer?'

"'He had a little black box, like, on legs, and a cloth on top of it, and he looked at me through a hole in the middle. Then he cried 'now', and held up his hand for me to keep still as a mouse; then he counted fifty — and I was took.'

"'Ah! Indeed! Was it a good likeness?'

"'Yes, master. But I looked like the black woman who come ashore las' Easter was a year.'

"With conversation like this we began to chatter...

PAINES CELERY COMPOUND

Possesses Special Virtues and Powers for Female Health-Building.

ALL WOMEN WHO SUFFER FROM DISEASES PECULIAR TO THEIR SEX SHOULD USE IT.

A Hamilton, Ont., Lady Whose Life Was Despaired Of Is Made Well and Strong After Years of Suffering.

Paine's Celery Compound has stood the test of time and experience while hundreds of the common preparations are fast sinking into obscurity. Paine's Celery Compound is not a patent medicine; it is the discovery of one of the greatest and ablest physicians that ever practised the noble profession, and for this reason it is prescribed by many able doctors who recognize its worth.

Paine's Celery Compound possesses special virtues and powers for female health-building. It banishes nervousness, weakness, backaches, sideaches, headaches and all the nameless ills that come to women of all ages. It gives them rosy cheeks, sparkling eyes, and restores the freshness and activity of girlhood.

Miss Blake, of Hughson street, Hamilton, Ont., gives her testimony for the benefit of women who are suffering —many in silence—and earnestly looking for health and strength.

"For years I suffered much and was under the care of doctors who finally told me I was going into consumption. I became worse through the use of medicines, and gave up my doctors. While in a very critical condition, not able to sleep or rest, always faint and weak, appetite and digestion bad, my system run down and little life in me, I commenced to use Paine's Celery Compound. After the use of one bottle I felt much relieved. I have used in all seven bottles, and am now a new woman, can enjoy life, and as well as I wish to be."

A MARVELLOUS MEDICINE

"No Cure, No Pay," is the Newest Proposal of the Proprietors of Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—We make the following proposal to the readers of the Times: To any one who is a subject of rheumatism (no matter how long standing) or any blood disease, as enumerated below, and will give Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills a fair trial and do not find a perfect cure we will refund the money paid for the pills. If no substantial improvement is observed, we will in addition, pay $10 in cash on satisfactory evidence being supplied us to this affect.

We have yet to know of a single case where these wonderful pills have not been almost entirely successful in effecting a cure. CANADA CHEMICAL CO.

Ex-Ald. Bailey, St. John's, writes: I cannot speak too highly of Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills. They worked a miracle in my case, and cured me after many years of suffering. I do not think their equal is to be obtained.

Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills are a positive and certain cure for la grippe, rheumatism, asthma, paralysis, catarrh, eczema, coughs, backache, indigestion, all stomach and liver troubles, female complaints, even when the diseases having been standing for many years, the most stubborn cases will yield. Price 50 cents per box. For sale by Ormond & Walsh. The Canada Chemical Company will forfeit $10 for any case that these pills do not help.

Dr. Clarke's Sure Cure for Catarrh, and Dr. Clarke's Sure Cure for Eczema same price. $10 will be paid for any case they will not permanently cure.

Asthmalene Brings Instant Relief and Permanent Cure in All Cases,

Sent ABSOLUTELY FREE on receipt of postal. Write your name and address plainly.

CHAINED FOR TEN YEARS
HAY FEVER
ASTHMA
EVERY BOTTLE BRINGS RELIEF.

There is nothing like Asthmalene. It brings instant relief, even in the worst cases. It cures when all else fails.

The Rev. C. F. WELLS, of Villa Ridge, Ill., says: "Your trial bottle of Asthmalene received in good condition I cannot tell you how thankful I feel for the good derived from it. I was a slave, chained with putrid sore throat and Asthma for ten years. I despaired of ever being cured. I saw your advertisement for the cure of this dreadful and tormenting disease, Asthma, and thought you had overspoken yourselves, but resolved to give it a trial. To my astonishment, the trial acted like a charm. Send me a full-size bottle."

REV. DR. MORRIS WECHSLER
Rabbi of the Cong. Bnai Israel.
NEW YORK, Jan. 3, 1901.

DRS. TAFT BROS.' MEDICINE CO.:

Gentlemen: Your Asthmalene is an excellent remedy for Asthma and Hay Fever, and its composition alleviates all troubles which combine with asthma. Its success is astonishing and wonderful

After having it carefully analyzed, we can state that Asthmalene contains no opium, morphine, chloroform or ether. Very truly yours,

REV. DR. MORRIS WECHSLER.

AVON SPRINGS, N. Y., Feb. 1, 1901.

DR. TAFT BROS. MEDICINE CO.

Gentlemen: I write this testimonial from a sense of duty, having tested the wonderful effect of your Asthmalene, for the cure of Asthma. My wife has been afflicted with spasmodic asthma for the past 12 years. Having exhausted my own skill as well as many others, I chanced to see your sign upon your windows at 130th street, New York. I at once obtained a bottle of Asthmalene. My wife commenced taking it about the 1st of November. I very soon noticed a radical improvement. After using one bottle her asthma has disappeared and she is entirely free from all symptoms. I feel that I can consistently recommend the medicine to all who are afflicted with this distressing disease. Yours respectfully,

O. D. PHELPS, M. D.

DR. TAFT BROS. MEDICINE CO.

Gentlemen: I was troubled with Asthma for 22 years. I have tried numerous remedies but they have all failed. I ran across your advertisement and started with a trial bottle. I found relief at once. I have since purchased your full-size bottle and I am ever grateful. I have a family of four children and for six years was unable to work. I am now in the best of health and am doing business every day. This testimony you can make such use of as you see fit.

Cancer Sufferers Gain Strength

In great many people suffering from Cancers and Tumors, find their strength rapidly slipping away. These horrible diseases undermine the health and sap the vitality.

To operate or use plasters, simply means further exhaustion. The new Constitutional treatment, instead of weakening, actually builds up the strength and invigorates the entire system, not only this, but it arrests the progress of the disease and entirely eliminates every particle of the Cancer poison from the system. It is a pleasant treatment, and can be taken at home, without pain or inconvenience.

Burning Bunions

Foot Elm soothes a bunion, takes out the inflammation and gives ease and rest to the poor, sore foot. It is the best foot doctor you ever knew. Price 25 cts a box, all druggists, or by mail, Stott & Jury, Bowmanville, Ont.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

Local Happenings Picked Up Here and There by The Times.

NOTE.—The Times requests its readers to contribute items of news to its columns. Anything that is phoned or sent in writing to the office, of a nature suitable for publication, will be received and published.—Ed. Times.

—The Times is in need of a good man to do canvassing.

—The country roads have been exceptionally good this fall.

—There should be a large market to-day, should the weather be favorable.

—The Millbrook skating rink is for sale. It is proposed to remove it to Port Hope.

—Even at this time of year when vegetation is dea we see lots of blooming idiots.

—A man named Daly, from Emily, was fined $1 and costs—$5.50 in all, for being drunk.

—The police have a purse, picked up on Hunter street, for which they want an owner.

—Lindsay is to be lighted with gas. This seems strange when there is electric energy supplied from Fenelon Falls.

—The London Free Press, in its health hints, says, "Now eat apples." That's all very well. But who's to pay for them?

—The Royal Chorus Committee will meet to-night in the Y. M. C. A. to complete the business of the recent concert.

—The young woman, who was taken suddenly ill on the train on Thursday, and taken to Nicholls Hospital, has recovered. Her name is Miss Grace Bell.

—The body of the dead man found in the well in Otonabee on Monday, having been unclaimed and unidentified, was sent to Toronto yesterday afternoon.

—The Royal chorus is being photographed at Whiten's. The photo will be a valuable souvenir to remember when the Royal chorus sang before the future King and Queen of England.

—"Mamma, what would you do if that big vase in the parlor should get broken?" said an Ashburnham boy the other day. "I should whip whoever did it," said the mother, gazing severely at her little son. "Well, then, you'd better begin to get up your muscle," said Tommy, "cos papa's broke it."

TO CURE A COLD IN ONE DAY

Coyotes from the Prairie

Mr. E. J. Cassidy yesterday received a gift from a friend in Winnipeg of a couple of young coyotes, which arrived at the C. P. R. station yesterday morning.

Congregational Re-Union

The congregational re-union of St. Paul's Church was held last night, and was largely attended by members of the congregation. Refreshments were served and a most enjoyable evening spent.

Thumb Amputated

An employee of the Electric Works had the thumb of his left hand badly mangled yesterday morning, through having it caught in a machine which he was operating. The injury was of such a nature that Dr. Moher, the attending physician, had to amputate the thumb.

Matinee and Evening Performances

Marks Bros. Dramatic Company will give a matinee this afternoon when the comedy drama, entitled, "Mugg's Landing" will be presented. In the evening the thrilling western drama, "Trixy, the Mountain Queen," will be played. The Company has strong specialties between the acts. Popular prices of admission.

The George Street Choir

At a meeting of the trustees of the George Street Methodist Church, the resignation of Mr. Walden, organist, was accepted, and Mrs. T. J. Mowat was appointed in his place, and Mr. G. W. Mulligan as choir master. Mrs. Mowat is a clever organist and capable musician. Mr. Mulligan, as everybody knows is also a thorough voice trainer and vocalist.

Pagg, will be pleased to show it to any intending purchasers. Very reasonable terms are offered and liberal allowance made for old instruments taken in exchange.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Events of This Kind Transpiring in and Around Peterborough.

NOTE.—The Times requests its readers to furnish the paper with items of a personal and social nature either by phone or in writing.—Ed. Times.

—Hon. J. R. Stratton is spending a few days in town.

—County Magistrate Edmison held court in Havelock yesterday.

—Miss Annie Morrison, of Toronto, is visiting Mrs. Angus Macpherson, Patterson street.

—Mr. W. Hartley, formerly with the Auburn Co., is in town. Mr. Hartley has resigned his position in the mills at Marseillews, N. Y., and has accepted one at Dexter, Maine.

—Mrs. J. H. Peck, who has been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Peck, Ashburnham, and of friends in Lakefield, left for Pembroke this morning, whence after a few days' visit, she will leave for her home in Vancouver.

Mining Story

There was a bunch of knights of the grip sitting around the register in the back parlor of the Snowden house last night, and, as usual, some tall stories were told. Finally the conversation turned on gold mining, when one of those present, said he made his "pile" in the placer gold fields of British Columbia, in a peculiar way. One day he went to a barber shop to get a hair cut. The barber assayed the hair, and found it ran several grains of fine gold dust to the ounce. The miner happened to think he had been washing his head in a creek up the gulch. He located the spot as a placer claim, and is now worth half a million.

St. Andrew's Day Concert.

The preparations for the proper marking of St. Andrew's Day in Peterborough are about concluded. It has been decided to hold the event in the Opera House instead of the market building, as first arranged. The "Clachan Splore," or Scotch merrymaking, will consist of a short opening address, by a prominent Scotchman. Scotch dances by Prof. Sheets' classes of Highland lassies and laddies, consisting of the Highland fling, Sailor's hornpipe, Scotch reel, Lorne or ribbon reel, as danced at the Scottish games at the Pan-American, skirt dance, sand dance, tambourine dance, cakewalk, etc. Prof. McKay, the gifted and talented humorist and prince among comic delineators—the irrestible laughter-provoking mimic in comic songs and humorous readings, has been engaged, and will add merriment and mirth to the occasion. A detachment of Scottish pipers from the splendid Band of the 48th Highlanders, Toronto, has been engaged, and will furnish appropriate music for the dances. Other talent has also been secured, in order to make the Clachan splore the event of the season.

This festival anniversary will be held in the Opera House on the evening of Thanksgiving. General admission 25 cents, reserved seats 50 cents.

The Late Mrs. Stewart

Mrs. William Stuart, who passed away a few days ago, was one of the most esteemed residents of Otonabee. The deceased had been ailing for some months with heart disease, but it has been only during the past week that she was confined to her room. She passed away on Thursday at the family residence, lot 16, con. 17, where she has for many years resided. The late Mrs. Stewart's maiden name was Elizabeth Savigny, and she was born in Berwickshire, Scotland, in the year 1828, coming to Canada with her parents five years later, and settling in Otonabee. She has resided there ever since, during which time she has lived a useful, Christian life, and drawn to her side a large circle of friends. She was a Presbyterian in religion, and a member of St. Paul's church, town. Her husband's demise occurred about six years ago. She leaves to mourn her loss a family of five. They are Misses Ada and Eva, and Messrs. Denniston and Fred, at home, and Mrs. J. A. E. Stewart, of Vancouver, B. C. Messrs. John, James and Alexander Savigny, of Otonabee, are brothers, and Miss Jane E. and Mrs. Wm. Laur, of town, sisters of the deceased. The funeral will take place to-day to the Little Lake cemetery.

POOR CHRISTIANS

Faulty Feeding Makes Them.

Some people thought he was a funny old man when he spoke at camp meeting on the subject of "Lord Give Us Sense." One of the first requisits for living a peaceful, upright, honest and religious life is food of the kind that can be easily digested and that furnishes the rebuilding material for good healthy brain and nerve centers.

It is absolutely out of the question for a person to be peaceful, capable and right minded when the brain is underfed, and the nerves wrecked from lack of rebuilding elements they have a right to expect from good food.

A person fed on meat, bacon, ham, fried cakes, hot biscuits, sticky and poorly cooked starchy oat meal and wheat, may possibly have strong digestion enough to handle these things and be a happy, healthy individual; but 99 people in 1100 have not, and the result is irritable, poorly nourished, nervous bodies, foul breath, and a general condition that prevents one from being happy and contented. It is practically impossible for such persons to be good Christians.

The religion of common sense and good food is the first religion that a man or woman should cultivate, for that condition makes possible thoughts of a higher nature and a better grade.

There is a world of wisdom in the saying of Ruskin, "We may be sure we are not serving the Lord if we are not happy ourselves." All should try to build up a steady set of nerves and get rid of dyspepsia, constipation, fluttering heart, weak nervous conditions, and a train of terrors that come from bad digestion and poor food. They should quit coffee absolutely. Take for breakfast a little cooked or raw fruit, a saucer of Grape-Nuts Food and a cup of Postum Coffee. No meat or grease. You will have a clean, healthy stomach for dinner and at that meal have some meat and vegtables that you can digest. Let your supper be the same as your breakfast.

You probably don't need medicine but you need the kind of food that contains elements that rebuild the soft gray matter in the brain and nerve centers throughout the body.

It is "Up to you" reader to put yourself right and make of yourself a happy, cheerful individual, capable, and showing forth the charm of life rather than its terrors and distresses.

NEXT YEAR'S COUNCIL

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I think the ratepayers should take more interest in municipal affairs. The time is drawing near when a new Council will have to be chosen, and it is important that the very best men possible be secured.

Let there be plenty of discussion over this matter, so that interest may be awakened.

RATEPAYER.

NATURAL GAS IN PETERBOROUGH

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I was shown a copy of The Times a few days ago, in which I noticed that you were about to bore for natural gas.

In this connection I might observe that I happened to be in Peterborough some two years ago, I think it was, when pockets of gas were discovered at the canal excavation in your town. From what I saw there I am fully persuaded that gas exists in the neighborhood. You have the right geological formation, and should be rich in gas. I may add that I never saw better proof. Of course no man can tell the quantity that lies hidden below, but I would be very much surprised if it was not large. There are many reasons why I think so. When you find pockets of gas so near the surface as was shown in the canal digging, it is one of the best assurances that great quantities exist below.

I spent many years of my life as a prospector for gas and petroleum, and therefore naturally interested.

Hoping that the present efforts may be successful, I am, Yours truly,

A. R. SINCLAIR.

Hamilton, Nov. 14.—

CAUSES FOR DIVORCE

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—Will The Times kindly informe me through the paper what are the causes for divorce in the several states of the American Union. Not that I am looking for seperation, but it is in order to settle a dispute.

A READER.

Reply,—The following are causes for divorce in Pennsylvania, Ohio and Rhode Island: Pennsylvania —Violation of the marriage vow; physical incapacity; wilful desertion (two years); imprisonment for felony; cruel and abusive treatment; intolerable cruelty extreme cruelty, repeated cruelty; or extreme treatment; fraud and fraudulent contract; indignities as render life burdensome, and when wife by cruel and barbarous treatment renders condition of husband intolerable. Ohio—Violation of the marriage vow; physical incapacity, wilful desertion (three years); habitual drunkenness; imprisonment for felony; conviction of felony; cruel and abusive treatment; intolerable cruelty; extreme cruelty; repeated cruelty; inhuman treatment, fraud and fraudulent contract; absent without being heard from (three years); gross misbehavior or wickedness. Rhode Island—Violation of the marriage vow; wilful desertion (five years); cruel and abusive treatment; intolerable cruelty; extreme cruelty; repeated cruelty; inhuman treatment; failure by the husband to provide; when reasonably presumed dead by the court; gross misbehavior of wickedness.

SCIENTIFIC MATTERS

Editor Morning Times.

Dear Sir,—It may be interesting to many of your readers to know that by looking out on the south-western sky between 5.30 and 6.30 o'clock they can now see the approaching culmination of most interesting astronomical events. Those who are accustomed to look at and think about other particles of the universe besides the relatively small particle which we call the earth, and in which we strangely of necessity find ourselves, have been admiring in the gloaming and in the dark throughout the past summer the two most interesting and the greatest, both in volume and mass, of the planets, viz., Jupiter and Saturn. During the summer months Jupiter was not only the most conspicuous star in the heavens, but was so unusually bright as to arrest the attention even of the thoughtless. He was soon, however, to give place to his more brilliant sister Venus, which, though but half a circle (i.e. like a half-moon, as seen through a telescope) can now be seen in the south-western sky before sunset.

Jupiter and Saturn have for long been slowly approaching and will continue to do so till the 27th of this month, when they will be nearest to one another and be then only about one-half degree apart, or less than the moon's apparent diameter. Such a conjunction as this cannot take place again for twenty years. But a much rarer event than the approach of these great planets is simultaneously taking place, viz., a conjunction of the three most interesting members of the stellar system to which our own abode, the earth, belongs, Venus, Jupiter and Saturn. Venus is now rapidly approaching the other two and will curtsy to Jupiter on Sunday evening next, and to Saturn on the following night. Such a remarkable event as this does not happen oftener on the average than once in 1200 years.

To still further increase the interest in these rare events, the ruler of the night is now rapidly approaching the three planets as the luminous part of her disc is slowly increasing, and she will overtake all three on Friday next. She will then be five days old, just at her best for telescopic observation. The proximity of these four finest telescopic objects on the evening of the 15th will indeed be a remarkably rare event, and may not again take place for 15,000 years. Where shall we be then?

LUMBERMAN INJURED

Tree Felled Samuel Matthews in Dickson Company's Camp

Yesterday Samuel Matthews, whose home is in Grafton, was brought to the Nicholls Hospital, suffering from concussion of the brain.

It appears the injured man, while working in the woods on Thursday afternoon was struck on the head by a falling limb. It is thought, however, that he will recover.

A NOVEL ENTERTAINMEN

"Measuring Party" Given by Young People of Mark St. Church

A novel entertainment, called a "measuring party," was given by the young people of Mark Street Church in the Town Hall, Ashburnham, last night. Each guest was "stood up" in the doorway and measured, and the charge for admission was based on the height, being three cents for each foot and one cent for every inch additional. Hon. J. R. Stratton occupied the chair and delivered a brief and genial address, recalling the time when he was a resident of Ashburnham, and expressing the hope that the town and village might soon be united. The programme was a good one and was much enjoyed by the audience, recalls being frequent. Recitations were given by Miss Ruth, Miss Deyell, Miss Murray, Mr. Matchett and Master Fred Hooper; vocal solos by Miss Thompson, Miss Hooper and Mr. Petrie. The octette from the George St. church also contributed to the musical part of the program. A social half hour, with refreshments, followed the entertainment.

Mr. Matchett in a neatly complimentary speech, moved a vote of thanks to the Provincial Secretary, which was heartily carried by the audience, and appropriately responded to by Mr. Stratton.

Speaker's Sore Throat

Public speakers and singers know how useless and sickening are cough mixtures, sprays, lozenges, &c., for irritable or sore throat, and state that the most satisfactory remedy is Catarrhozone, the advantage of which is that it acts quickly and is convenient to use in public places. Catarrhozone relieves congestion, allays inflammation, and is a protection to the membrane. As a safe guard against colds and Catarrh it has no equal Rev. Mr. McKay, Goderich, says "Catarrhozone is an excellent remedy for throat irritation arising from throat irritation." Physicians, ministers and singers recommend Catarrhozone, druggists sell it for $1. Small size 25c. By mail from Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

HOME DYEING MADE EASY WHEN

DIAMOND DYES

ARE USED.

For quality, variety, brilliancy and durability of colors, the Diamond Dyes excel all other package dyes in the world. The Diamond Dyes are made in over fifty different colors for wool and silk, and special fast colors are made for dyeing cotton and mixed goods. No other dyes so strong, so true to color or so simple to use. Full and explicit directions on each package enable the inexperienced to do as good work as the professional dyer.

The Diamond Dyes Mat and Rug Patterns colored on a superior quality of Scotch Hessian are selling fast. With one of these designs it is easy to make a pretty floor ornament. The Wells & Richardson Co. Limited, 200 Mountain St., Montreal, P.Q., will send you free by mail all the new patterns if you send in your address.

Sealed tenders, addressed to the undersigned and endorsed "Tender for Alberni-Clayoquot Telegraph," will be received at this office until Tuesday, Dec. 3rd, inclusively, for the supply of telegraph poles for a line from the telegraph office at Alberni, in the County of Vancouver, Province of British Columbia, along the route described, to Clayoquot, a total distance of seventy-five miles, more or less; also for the construction of the above line of telegraph in accordance with the specification.

Contractors are notified that tenders will not be considered unless made on the printed form supplied, and signed with their actual signatures.

An accepted cheque on a chartered bank payable to the order of the Minister of Public Works, equal to ten per cent. of the amount of the tender, must accompany each tender. The cheque will be forfeited if the party decline the contract or fail to complete the work contracted for, and will be returned in case of non-acceptance of tender.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender,

By order,
FRED. GELINAS,
Secretary.

MALT BREAKFAST FOOD

Creates a Healthy and Natural Appetite.

The extraordinary statement that the large majority of people sit down to breakfast with uncertain and jaded appetities, is only too true.

Weakened and unhealthy morning appetities are largely created by the use of starchy foods that calls fro too great an expenditure of energy in the work of digestion. Oatmeal, cracked wheat, hominy and the majority of prepared cereal foods are responsible for many a poor and unhealthy appetite.

Malt Breakfast Food made from the choicest strength-giving Wheat and the purest health-giving Malt, the whole partially predigested, forms what food experts call a "perfect health food," delightful to the taste, appetising, energising, sustaining and invigorating. Malt Breakfast Food is the only prepared grain food that perfectly agrees with the digestion of young and old. No other breakfast food is so heartily indorsed by physicians. Your Grocer sells it.

SOME POSITIVE PROOFS

What is Being Told of Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills—No Cure No Pay.

Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills cured me of kidney trouble of many years' standing, and after I had tried every other known remedy. Joseph Bigby, Caledonia ave., Rochester, N.Y.

I was afflicted with rheumatism so badly at times that I could not walk. Nothing I took did me much good, until I tried Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills. Fiver boxes cured me entirely.

I had the misfortune to have suffered some years ago from paralysis, amounting no less than three strokes. I could get nothing to do me any good until I was induced to try Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills. I took nine boxes, and although not by any means well, I think I am in a fair way to recovery. I can now walk with the aid of a stick and feel myself getting better every day. M. F. Mann, Merlin, N.Y.

Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills permanently cured me of backache. I suffered for years, and took two boxes. That is a year ago. I have not had a symptom since. James H. Jackson, Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.

I do not believe there is a medicine to compare with Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills. They cured me of indigestion and catarrh of the stomach, after nine years' suffering. H. S. Macdonald, G.T.R. shops, Montreal.

Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills are a positive and certain cure for la grippe, rheumatism, asthma, paralysis, catarrh, eczema, coughs, backache, indigestion, all stomach and liver troubles, female complaints, even when the diseases have been standing for many years, the most stubborn cases will yield. Price 50 cents per box. For sale by Ormond & Walsh. The Canada Chemical Company will forfeit $10 for any case that these pills do not cure.

Dr. Clarke's Sure Cure for Catarrh, and Dr. Clarke's Sure Cure for Eczema, same price. $10 will be paid for any case they will not permanently cure.

DE WET ATTACKED, BUT WAS REPULSED BY BYNG

Boer Leader Made an Onslaught Upon the British Rearguard

BRITISH YEOMEN MEET WITH A REVERSE.

An Ingenious Prisoner of War—Johannesburg in a Quiet State—A Canadian Dead.

London, Nov. 16—The War Office has received the following despatch from Lord Kitchener, relating to the operations of the British in thee neighborhood of Reitz and Standerton.

"The rear guard of Byng's column, which was escorting the prisoners, was attacked by the enemy, 400 strong, stated to be under De Wet. After two hours' fighting the attack was repulsed, and the enemy retired, leaving eight dead. Our loss was one officers and nine men wounded.

"Col. Hickie, whose column is covering the construction of the blockhouse line on the Schoonspruit, reports a concentration to the west. He sent out a strong patrol of Yeomanry on November 13 from Brakspruit to reconnoitre.

"The patrol was surrounded by 300 Boers six miles from camp and six of our men were killed and 16 wounded. Some who were captured have since been released.

"Col. Hickie moved out to support the patrol and drove off the enemy."

A PRE-ARRANGED AFFAIR.

Cape Town, Nov. 15.—Despatches from Middleburg indicate that a column of local district mounted troops composed largely of reformed Cape Smut on November 113 last. They made practically no resistance when attacked, and it is believed that the surrender was pre-arranged.

A missing prisoner, who was discovered after a lengthy search hidden beneath the flooring of a hut in the camp at Simon's Town, has proved to be a genius. He has evolved a scheme for the dynamiting of trains, that makes use of the very pilot engine sent out to ascertain the safety of the track. The pilot engine sets in motion the machinery necessary to blow up the train. The inventor is of continental extraction.

CONDITION OF THE RAND.

Johannesburg, Nov. 116.—The streets in this city are gradually resuming their normal appearance after the general excitement of the military occupation. Residences of all classes are much in demand, whole town property is selling at a high figure. Two stands at the corner of Pritchard street, together measuring 50 by 1100 feet, have been sold for £35,000.

Many natives of the Portugese territory are said to be anxious to come here to work in the mines. The authorities are concluding negotiations with the Portugese Government.

SOME BOER HORSES FIT.

London, Nov. 16.—Kitchener's monthly mail reports, dated August 8 and September 8, report that during the former month 13,570 horses were captured from the Boers, twenty per cent of which were fit for remount purposes. Geernal Kitchener, commenting on the progress of operations, says: "So long as this rate of progress can be maintained, there can be little doubt of its ultimate effect, even on an enemy to whom no other form of argument seems to appeal."

PAINTED THE CHILDREN.

London, Nov. 16.—A recently issued blue book sheds some light on the working of the refugee camps in South Africa. It shows a steady improvement in the behavior and health of inmates, and proves the extreme anxiety of the manager to make the sanitary conditions of the camps as healthy as possible. It states that the general superintendent issued a circular to the camp officials ordering them to dilute the condensed milk, which is alone available, before issuing to the refugees, it being impossible to make the Boer women understand that this is absolutely necessary. The reports show that among the remedies used by the Boers is paint, it being their custom to paint any afflicted part of the body with green paint. Cases are mentioned where three children were covered with paint except their faces.

The morning papers are almost unanimous in their characterization of the Blue book as evidencing an extremely generous policy.

SKINNER DEAD.

Ottawa, Nov. 16.—The Militia Department has been notified by cable from the Casualty Office at Cape Town of the death of Alexander Skinner, of Scots Railway Guards. Skinner was wounded at Pudimore, near Vryburg, and died on Nov. 12. His widow resided at Lindsay, Ont. Deceased went to South Africa originally as a trooper in B Squadron Strathcona's Horse, but came home last March, and then returned to South Africa.

FOR A CANADIAN TREATY

COMMERCIAL BODIES ASK CO-OPERATION OF PRESIDENT.

The Importance of Reciprocal Relations Between the United States and the Dominion Clearly Pointed Out.

Washington, Nov. 18.—A strong plea for the re-establishment of reciprocal commercial relations with Canada was made to the President by a delegation composed of representatives of chambers of commerce and boards of trade of the principal cities of the country.

J. R. Leeson, of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, acting as the spokesman of the delegation, told the President that in point of foreign consumption of products of the United States, Canada was ranked next to Great Britain and Germany. He said that the trade with Canada was twice as great as with all the countries of South America, and that Canada was fully as good a customer as Cuba, Mexico, all Central America, and the West Indies.

The delegation, while it is known to favor the reconvocation of the Joint High Commission for the consideration of this subject, did not, through its spokesman, suggest this method of procedure.

The President was requested to advise the establishment of reciprocal trade relations with Canada in such a manner as he might deem most expedient.

CAUSE OF ABROGATION.

In 1854 a reciprocal treaty was drawn between this country and Canada, but it was abrogated in 1866, as a result of the unfriendly feelings which were the outcome of England's apparent friendship toward the Confederacy during the civil war. Since that time there has been no commercial agreement between the countries.

The President told the delegation that, while it would be invidious for him to express himself in favor of reciprocity with any particular country, he could say that the general subject of reciprocal relations was receiving a great deal of his attention. He believed that Congress also should devote much time and study to the question. The delegates filed a type-written statement of their views, with a compilation of statistics concerning trade between the United States and Canada.

PERSONNEL OF THE DELEGATION.

The delegation also called upon Secretaries Hay and Gage. It consisted of J. R. Leeson, W. O. Blaney, and H. G. Preston, of the Boston Chamber of Commerce; Gustavus H. Schwab, Isadore Straus and S. D. Webb, of the New York Chamber of Commerce; DeWitt C. Delamater, President of the Detroit Merchants and Manufacturers' Association; J. T. McHugh, President of the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce; M. I. Greenough, ex-President of the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce; D. N. Ransdell, representing the Indianapolis Board of Trade; C. H. Keep Secretary of the Buffalo Merchants and Lake Carriers' Association; Frederick W. Wood, President of the Maryland Steel Company, representing the Baltimore Board of Trade, and George H. Anderson, Secretary of the Pittsburg Chamber of Commerce.

CAPTAIN KIDD'S TREASURE

COPY OF A LETTER FROM THE NOTORIOUS PIRATE CHIEF.

Purports to Have Been Written from Boston After His Capture and Refers to the Hiding Place of His Money and Jewels

Providence, R. I., Nov. 16.—A letter 200 years old from Captain Kidd, the notorious pirate chief, to John Bailey, Esq., of New York, which, from evidence contained in it, is believed to be genuine by those to whom it has become an heirloom, has been deposited for safe-keeping, with other papers, in the office of the Record Commissioners of this city.

The letter is the property of Edward Field, clerk of the Municipal Court of Providence, and historian, a descendant of the Warner family, who was one of the first to settle in what is now the town of Warwick. It was found among the family papers. Apparently the communication was written after the capture of Captain Kidd. It is dated Boston, 1700-1, and it says in part;

"I fear we are in a bad situation. We are taken for pirates, and you must come to Boston as soon as you get this; there is no one I can depend upon. If I do not see you, I will tell you where my money is. It is * * * buried on * * island in Boston harbor on the * * * island in two chests containing from £15,000 to £30,000 sterling in money, jewels and diamonds. They are buried about four feet deep, with a flat stone on them and a pile of stone nearby. There is no one that knows where it is but me now living.

"It is about * * * up the hillside. Don't fail to come to me as soon as you get this. If I am gone to England be there as soon as possible. Secure the money and diamonds before you come, as money will do a great deal for us."

The letter contains much more matter and refers to many incidents which have been found to be historically correct. The words which would tell exactly where the treasure was buried are omitted, and their places are take nby asterisks. It is considered likely that along with the letter went another writing, in which was given the key to the omitted portions.

OTTAWA'S MAYOR SUMMONED

Charged With Buying Liquor During Prohibited Hours.

Ottawa, Nov. 18.—Mayor Morris was surprised yesterday afternoon when P. C. Hatton stepped up to him and said, "Here is a summons for you." The charge against his worship is that he did unlawfully buy or obtain intoxicating liquor during prohibited hours in the Russell house on Saturday, Nov. 9th, not being an occupant, a member of the family, or a lodger in the Russell house. The charge will be heard at the police court on Saturday.

A charge has also been laid by P. C. Hatton against F. X. St. Jacques, proprietor of the Russell house, for selling liquor during prohibited hours on Saturday last.

It is explained that the Mayor attended State dinner at Government house on Saturday night last, and that on his way home he called at the Russell house to enquire if his brother, Mr. F. F. Morris, of Belleville, had arrived, as it was expected that he would be in the city. His worship met a friend in the rotunda, and after conversing with him a while adjourned to a private office off the rotunda. Certain other gentlemen, some of whom were guests of the house, came in and entered into conversation. They were all invited to partake of the Mayor's hospitality, and it is understood they had one or two drinks, besides some cigars, other members of the company purchasing as well as the Mayor.

It is said that eleven prominent citizens have been summoned to attend court with the Mayor on a similar charge of drinking after hours. Information concerning these cases is, however, not forthcoming at present.

A second summons was served on the Mayor tonight for drinking at the Russell on Monday evening after the legal hour of closing.

IN DAWSON SALOONS

How the Enumerators Counted 30000 People in the Gold Field

Vancouver, B.C., Nov. 16.—Major J. H. Woodside, official enumerator, is in the city on the way from Dawson to Ottawa with the figures of the Yukon census. The Major would not state the exact population, but said 30,000 would be very near it. Dawson itself has a population of about 8,000. The census-taking in the Yukon was perhaps one of the most unique official occurrences which has ever taken place in Canada. It was the first ever taken in that district and the work of recording the transient and permanent population was most difficult. The method was different from that followed in most districts, but proved effective. Men were stationed on the bridges entering the city, in the public libraries and in the prominent saloons, and in this manner a large number of names were secured which otherwise would have been missed.

Major Woodside procured some very valuable information regarding the resources of the country, on which a separate report will be made. While the distance covered during the enumeration was thousands of miles, only one serious accident occurred, that was when a man was knocked off a raft by a sweep and sustained an injury to his eye. There has been a tremendous emigration to the outside this fall to spend the winter, and in one month, from 7th September to 7th October, 3,500 names were secured by placing enumerators on the river boats. Major Woodside had 108 enumerators and twelve assistants in Dawson; 30 in the districts, on the Creeks 25, and outside of these 40 more. Major Woodside leaves for Ottawa to-day.

GEORGIAN BAY CANAL

Say 20 Feet Channel From Georgian Bay to Lake Nipissing Would Cost $4,000,000.

Ottawa, Nov. 16.—Engineering experts have reported to Mr. Tarte that the cost of constructing a channel of a uniform depth of twenty feet between the Georgian Bay and Lake Nipissing, will be $4,000,000. The distance is 61 miles and the chief engineering obstacle to overcome in making this route navigable, exists at Five Miles Rapids. Discussing the question of a shorter outlet for the grain of the west, Mr. Tarte pointed out that the Georgian Bay and Lake Nipissing route would place grain vessels in touch with the Grand Trunk at Callender and the C. P. R. at North Bay. "Before many years the export of grain from Manitoba and the Territories," and the Minister "will amount to one hundred million bushels. We must take care that this is not diverted into American channels."

St. Joseph, Mo., Nov. 16.—William Morgan until to-day has been head cook at the St Charles hotel in this city. He tendered his resignation this afternoon and notified the proprietor that he was going to England and that when he returned he would build a much better hotel than there is in St Joseph. Morgan is sole heir to an estate in England estimated to be worth considerably more than $500,000, left him by the death of an uncle. His uncle often berated Morgan for the manner of life he was leading, and he says he had every reason to believe that he would never benefit from his uncle's riches.

Crew Abandoned the Schooner

Vineyard Haven, Mass., Nov. 16.—The schooner Douglas Haynes of Bath, Me., from Port Johnson for Hallowell Me., with a cargo of coal, is sunk between Shovelful and Pollock Rip shoals with her three masts projecting out of the water. Captain Blaisdell and his crew of four men were rescued by the schooner Luther T. Garretson and landed here this afternoon after having suffered terribly from exposure.

Captain Blaisdell says he encountered a violent gale and anchored Nov. 10. The vessel rode out the gale until late in the afternoon, when the heavy sea caused it to leak badly. Soon the decks were awash and all hands climbed into the rigging. Thirty minutes after they had secured themselves the vessel went to the bottom. Yesterday morning the men were rescued.

An All-Canadian Yukon Line

Vancouver, Nov. 18.—McLean Brothers, of this city, announce that they have perfected arrangements for building a new line to the Yukon through northern British Columbia, which will provide an all-Canadian route. The new line will, it is stated, largely reduce the cost of taking machinery and supplies into the Yukon. McLean Brothers are large contractors on the coast, and are associated with MacKenzie and Mann.

The Utah Earthquake

Salt Lake, Utah, Nov. 18.—A special from Richfield, Sevier County, states that the damage to property in that county from the recent earthquake will amount to almost $100,000. Scarcely a building escaped injury of some kind. The Mormon Tabernacle at Richfield was damaged to the extent of $2,000. In many parts of the country landslides have occurred, blocking railroads, changing the course of streams, and causing general disorder.

THE BRITISH ARMY BEHIND THE TIMES

The War Greatly Prolonged by Bad Generalship.

IT IS TIME FOR A CHANGE

How the British Generals Give the Enemy Opportunities.

A Strong Letter on the War Which Tells Its Own Story—Our Officers as Seen by a Neutral.

London, Nov. 18.—The following is from a resident of Pretoria, and is published in two of the leading London papers:

The war drags on unsatisfactorily, and the civilians to a man cannot understand what 250,000 men are doing with some 10,000 Boers at the outside in the field. At one place there are 25,000 troops, within a radius of a few miles, and yet people are officially informed that we could not be insured outside a radius of ten miles. We saw a column of ours moving along a road—and the roads always follow the low ground and the valleys,—and for all they knew and saw the hills might have been full of Boers, who reserve their fire and then catch stragglers, etc., and arm and mount themselves at our expense. One very bad feature of giving the soldiers 300 rounds of ammunition each is that they shed their cartridges like leaves when they are tired and the Kaffirs pick them up in bushels. This I was often told, but the military men I spoke to said it was impossible. However, I crossed a column of ours the other day and shortly after I saw two Kaffirs who had been following, it, and immediately one of them came up and offered me 35 loaded cartridges for a shilling. He said he had been following the column and picked them up! They say Boers collect these cartridges in tens of thousands and use them. Nearly all the Boers are armed with our rifles, mounted on our horses, and use our ammunition. A certain general lost his head and ordered the immediate evacuation of the place on the rumor of a Boer column, which never came, and we left there 1,000 suits of soldiers' clothing and £8,000 of stores which the Boers have used since. At—we evacuated again in a funk and left behind us 25,000 rounds of ammunition and stores. Now — was sent away from—, not in disgrace but to a high post elsewhere! Truely the ways of the army are wonderful. The press of London should insist on disasters being reported. We have heard, on the authority of men and traders who were near the sites of the disasters that within the last month 70 of one regiment have surrendered in the colony in a batch, 60 off another in a batch, and 90 of a third, and another in a batch in the Free State, and hundreds of individual men, and no mention has been made in our papers here. Why, I saw in one place that under martial law the commandant had notified that, if any one was heard openly taking of or writing about war news which was not certified and posted up by the military authorities, he would be fined and imprisoned. Of course we say nothing in public, but in private we all talk freely.

"I have had talks with many Boers, for under martial law we are all in adversity alike and adversity makes strangers and enemies friends for the moment. A Boer told me that martial law would not be bad if it were administered by reasonable men, but 'your officers are so stupid, they annoy us all because they do not think.' They are not bad, but stupid. Along the line as we travel we were advised, saying, 'Don't get down at —, at —, and other places, and the commandants there fools, whose one idea of martial law is harrassing friends and foes alike.' Driving, walking about the district you have to show your pass to any armed man you see, and they are sometimes a nuisance. Once a man almost refused to return my pass because I would not give him whiskey. On another occasion sentry made me write down all about my wife and children and horse, etc., because I would not give him sixpence. Any unarmed man moving about among the country full of armed soldiers and sentries, is helpless. The soldiers are good and reasonable as a rule, but there are blackguards among them, especially as we have recruited rum fellows in our regular corps.

"When we were going from — to — we had gone half way when a man met us who said,—'Stop here, and return; there are 120 Boers in —, about ten miles ahead of you.' I asked him what they looked like. He said,—'The most ragged lot you ever saw, all of them but two colonial rebels, of whom forty were riding donkeys, forty foals and forty were well mounted. The well-mounted men did the rearguard work, and they bragged that they had evaded and could evade a whole British column anywhere. They said—The English columns are funked to rush us, and they will never overtake us, they are so careful of themselves.' I mentioned this to a colonel, and he said it was not fair at this stage of the war to rush a lot of Boers and sacrifice many men. I told him that it would mean less loss of life in the end, but he said, 'Well, I'd never risk it.' I met a very smart intelligence officer the other day, and he said the war could not be finished for a year yet, as it was such a difficult war, the country so large and the kopjes so inpregnable, etc., Indeed, if for kipje you write a bare easy hill, for kloof a bare glen, for krantz an easy cliff, and get rid of all the jargon of drifts and poortsn which are fords and ferries; and dongas and sluits, which are simple ravines which a child should see; you will see that the men have been counting on the English press being stagestruck with their words, which mean nothing. If our men got rid of their wagons and took to the hills like the Boers, they would come across them easy enough. An old Boer said to me once that, if two men go after one another and one never gets on a road and the other never leaves it, they are not likely to meet unless by chance in a fog they knock against each other.

At the stations the military fill the hotels and take up the waiting rooms, and ordinary travelers like me live on platforms, though the military all have tents, but they find the hotels easier. —t —— the hotels are full to choking of military men, and champagne and Stilton cheese and other luxuries make you think you are in Capua and not in an army in the field. The officers' getting on alike this makes the soldiers slack. The only chance of our finishing the war in a reasonable time is for the press to insist on true information from the front. Many of the best officers I have seen are eager for full information and a state of war, instead of our nursing the Boer women and children and the Boers nursing our prisoners. They all say that if no mercy were shown on either side the war would soon end. We feed their wives, and they feed and sooths all our men who hand them over their guns and horses, and so the war drags on. Wherever you go you see slackness, slackness, and the military make up for it by being terribly severe with civilians and friends about passes etc. They commandeer the horses of loyalists, and play polo on them or let their wives ride them, until the loyalists are getting into sympathy with the Boers, and poor old England's name is being dragged through the dust. I know this is a jeremiad from beginning to end, but really I have not met a cheerful man since I left Cape Town.

QUEER PREDICAMANT.

A Montrealer in Lynn, Mass., Asked to Hold a Baby Mother Did Not Return.

Boston, Mass. Nov. 18. — Patrick Ryan, of Montreal on a visit to Lynn, Mass., last evening, had an amusing experience with a baby. Mr. Ryan had been visiting Boston and took an express train for Lynn. A young woman pretty, well dressed and with an infant in her arms, took a seat by his side. Suddenly she remarked, "There, I have forgotten my ticket." She turned to Mr. Ryan and asked him if he would willingly care for the baby a minute while she went for the ticket. Mr. Ryan gallantly offered to take the baby. The young woman did not return and the train started with Mr. Ryan doing his best to quiet the squalling infant. Sympathetic women on the train came to Mr. Ryan's aid, but they seemed to enjoy the predicament after he had told his story, and some were inclined to shake their heads and look wise. Mr. Ryan had enough of the role of father by the time he reached Lynn and he left the train at a two-forty clip and told his troubles to a policeman. The baby was sent to a Lynn institution for care.

THE C.P.R.'S NEW LINE.

The Initiatory Step Toward a New Line of St. Lawrence Steamers.

Montreal, Nov. 18.—Mr. C. W. Spencer, General Superintendent of the Canadian Pacific, has had his duties increased by assuming the vice-presidency and general managership of the Kingston and Pembroke.

Mr. Spencer says he has not yet made his report regarding the road to the Canadian Pacific, but this much he says is certain that it will be put in excellent condition. Important improvements are in contemplation in the way of increased rolling stock, etc. The road is in good order, and will afford a valuable connection for passenger travel down the Thousand Islands and the rapids of the St Lawrence. The Kingston and Pembroke runs a distance of 103 miles from Kingston to Renfrew, where it connects with the C.P.R. It also had running powers over the latter road from Renfrew to Pembroke, 35 miles, and from Pembroke to Nipissing, 140 miles. Its gross earnings last year were $262,600, and net earnings $44,364. Its total authoritized capital is $4,978,911, paid up $4,939,813. The total cost of the road being $4,665,856.

It seems to be admitted that this is the initiatory step towards a new line of St. Lawrence steamers operated in the interests of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

The Galway Election

Dublin, Nov. 18.—The Parliamentary contest in Galway, resulting from the vacancy in the House of Commons caused by the elevation of Martin H. F. Morris to the peerage, is being marked by a succession of fights which takes all the constabulary of the neighborhood to keep the contestants within bounds. Horace Plunkett, Unionist, a former member of Parliament for the South division of Dublin county, is opposing Colonel Arthur Lynch, who served on the Boer side in South Africa. The use of fire arms has not yet been reported; but sticks, stones, bricks and bottles figure in the daily encounters. The windows and doors of Mr. Plunkett's committee-room were smashed in during the night. Police have been obliged on several occasions to charge with their batons and disperse the mob. There is a lengthy list of injured persons.

Why Catarrh Is Fatal

Because it pours a flood of poisons into the circulation that saps strength and digestion so materially as to render the body incapable of resisting disease, and consumption is the result. Catarrh is quickly cured by Catarrhozone, a fragrant germ destroying vapor that goes to the root of the disease. It soothes and heals the inflamed mucous surfaces, clears the head and throat, and positively never fails to perfectly cure Bronchitis, Asthma or Catarrh. Nothing is so good for diseases of the respiratory organs as Catarrhozone. Large outfit $1. Small size 25c. Druggists or by mail from Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

Pain in the Joints

may be muscular or rheumatic. The joints are hard to get at, and requires a powerful penetrating remedy to reach the affected parts. Polson's Nerviline exactly meets the requirements, for it is both powerful and penetrating. The pain is expelled as if by magic, for one drop of Nerviline equals in strength five drops of other remedies. You won't often call the doctor if Nerviline is in the house. Price 25 cents.

Steamer Wrecked Near Goderich—A Strange Cure for Cancer—A Campaign on Foot to Stamp Out Duelling

London, Nov. 16.—The Onlooker contains an account of a most remarkable cure of cancer which medical circles are eagerly discussing. It says the cure was discovered through the case of Lady Margaret Marsham, sister of the Earl of Romney. Lady Margaret became so ill that her throat nearly closed, nourishment had to be administered artificially and her death was expected in about a week, when a friend prescribed the use of fresh green violet leaves. The suggestion was followed. Relief was immediate. The large, hard external tumor disappeared, and in a week all pain had ceased and the cancerous growth in a fortnight.

OUTBURST AGAINST DUELLING.

London, Nov. 16.—The Berlin correspondent of the London Times reports an address delivered by Superintendent Gemmel at the grave of Lieutenant Glaskowitz, who was killed in a duel when he did not want to fight. The preacher entered a protest against the spirit of slavery that will not emancipate itself from the degrading bonds of antiquated mediaeval prejudices. Superintendent Gemmel said he expected to be harshly criticized by some army officers, but, on the other hand, many, including men of high rank, would acknowledge the justice of this movement.

Goderich, Ont., Nov. 16.—The steam barge India picked up the schooner Marine City forty miles north of Thunder Bay, loaded with pulpwood. The schooner had been abandoned three days before the India towed her to this port. The India was unable however, to make the harbor, on account of the terrific northwest gale which was blowing. During the night the schooner broke away and it is reported has drifted ashore about twelve miles south of here with four of the India's crew on board. The India made the harbor this morning. The steam barge Rosedale arrived during the night.

Sofia, Bulgaria, Nov. 15.—Gregory Tsilka, Albanian missionary, and husband of Mme. Tsilka, Miss Stone's companion in captivity, has arrived at Sofia. He said: "I have received a letter from my wife, saying that Miss Stone and herself are well cared for. From the first they have known that liberation would not be speedy. The brigands are satisfied with their captures and in no hurry. Frequently they get to eat something like bologna sausage. The letter says also that Miss Stone's active horseback life has enabled her to bear the brigand regime well. The words 'the earth' are written where the name of the place whence the letter came, should be but the Turkish officials of Razlog, Macedonia, have had information about the captives right along."

WILL LORD ROBERTS RESIGN HIS POST?

London Correspondent of Herald Says He will Resign

WILL GIVE UP HIS POST IN APRIL

Application Sent in for Another Aide de Camp—Will Not Take Part in Coronation Ceremonies.

New York, Nov. 16.—According to the London correspondent of the Herald, it is stated on the highest authority that more dissatisfaction than ever reigns in the War Office. It is now thought almost certain that Lord Roberts will resign the post of commander-in-chief next April, if not sooner, and therefore will not take any prominent part in the coronation ceremonies. There is a considerable amount of grumbling at his continued absence from Pall Mall, where an enormous batch of papers is left unanswered by him. Only the other day application was made by Sir Evelyn Wood for another aide-de-camp. As the commander-in-chief was not present, Mr. Brodrick took it upon himself to answer and gave rather a curt refusal.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

Munich, Nov. 15.—An exciting incident occurred shortly before the beginning of the concert at the Odeon Hall here yesterday evening, when a man, standing at the foot of the main staircase leading to the hall, fired four shots into the auditorium, dangerously wounding one of the attendants and slightly injuring another. The perpetrator of the outrage then shot himself dead. Enquiries made by the police have ascertained the fact that the man is a sculptor's assistant, named Hoffman, of Neustadt, in Baden. From papers found upon him it would appear that he was suffering from mania due to Anarchist influences.

TO DELIMIT THE TERRIORIES.

Paris, Nov. 16.—The Journal de Debats, says: The French and British Governments have come to an agreement in order to arrange, by a mixed commission, the delimitation of the frontier between the French colony of the Ivory coast and the British colony of the Gold Coast, as far as the ninth parallel. M. Maurice Delafosse, the deputy administrator of the colonies, who is well known for his studies in African philology, has been appointed chief of the French section of the mixed commission. His colleagues will be Captain Bouvet of the Colonial Artillery, and Lieut. Lafogue, of the Infantry. The chief of the British section is Captain Watherson, who has already taken part in the delimitation of the northern frontier of the Gold Coast, in conjunction with Capt. Bultier, representing France.

MAYOR OF OTTAWA WAS DISQUALIFIED

Pleaded Guilty of Treating Friends After Hours

HE IS OUT FOR TWO YEARS.

An Acting Mayor will Have to be Appointed on Monday—Fined $5 and $2 Costs Other Names Not Mentioned

Ottawa, Nov. 16.—The necessary conviction against the Mayor was procured in the Police Court this morning to disqualify his Worship from sitting in the Council for two years, under heavy penalties. There were two charges of treating during prohibited hours, one on Saturday and one on Monday. Mr. Osler appeared for the Mayor, and pleaded guilty to the first offence, and not guilty to the second, and said the Mayor did not wish to drag the names of the gentlemen who were with him, and preferred to accept disqualification and take the consequences. The facts have already been published. The Mayor was returning with friends from the State dinner, and it was proposed to look in at the Russell in passing and take a parting drink.

A fine of $5 and $2 costs was inflicted and the Mayor cannot sit again in the Council or act in any way as Mayor, and an acting Mayor will have to be appointed by the Council on Monday.

It is worthy of note that the action against the Mayor was brought by the Chief of Police soon after the Mayor's complaints against the latter had been heard by the Police Commissioners.

Big Sawmill for Ottawa

Ottawa, Nov. 18.—One of the biggest sawmills in Canada will probably be built within a few miles of Ottawa, in time for the opening of next season's business. Those interested in the project are the Shepard and Morse Lumber Co., the Rideau Lumber Co., Alex. Barnet of Renfrew; Messrs. Bryson of Coulonge, and Mr. Alexander Fraser, of Ottawa, and a meeting will be held in a few days to complete some of the details. Negotiations are now going on for a site within five or six miles of Ottawa, and as soon as it is secured, work on the mill will be begun. When the mill is built it will have a capacity of between forty and fifty million feet of lumber a day, and will give employment to about one hundred and fifty men.

TO WEAR A TIARA WORTH $1,250,000

Mrs. Bradley Martin's Expensive Ornament for Royal Coronation

THE PEERESSES WILL COMPETE

They Outvie Each Other in the Brilliancy of Their Tiaras—Queen's Crown Most Valuable in the World

London, Nov. 16.—Preparations for King Edward's coronation are already taking definite and costly shape. Mrs. Bradley-Martin is having a tiara made in Paris, it is reported, at a cost of $1,250,000. It is a replica of the diamond which shone on the head of Empress Josephine. Queen Alexandra, in having the Koh-i-Noor diamond set in her new crown, will make it most valuable crown in the world, a distinction now held by the King of Portugal. Peeresses are vying to outvie each other in the brilliancy of their tiaras. Lady Kilmory, one of the most beautiful women in London, the wife of the Earl of Kilmory, who was an intimate boyhood friend of the King, Lady Londonderry, the Duchess of Portland, are all said to be spending vast sums in order to celebrate the coronation by a display of jewels worthy of the occasion.

It is reported that King Edward at the coronation will confer the semi-royal title of Duke of Inverness on the Duke of Fife, son-in-law of His Majesty.

REDMOND IN CANADA.

The Irish National Leader to Make a Tour of Canada

We understand that Mr. John Redmond, the Irish National leader, contemplates making a tour of the chief cities of the Dominion. We hope, for the sake of our reputation as royal citizens, that he will not be asked to come to Peterborough. Redmond is hostile to everything British, and has frequently given expression of his feelings in regard to British rule in Ireland. He has been invited by the Irish societies of Ottawa to that city, and is promised a big reception. All of which goes to show that we have many traitors in Canada.

Murderer Dies and Confesses

Michigan City, Ind., Nov. 18.—Before going to the scaffold, Joseph D. Keith, who was hanged here at an early hour this morning for the murder of Miss Nora Kifer, made a confession of his guilt. The confession is addressed to Keith's wife. He said Nora Kifer annoyed him much, and, fearing her, he put the girl out of the way for the sake of his wife.

THE DOGS OF WAR WILL NOT BE CALLED OFF

In spite of the fact that the temporary successes won by the Boer guerilla forces during the past few months have served to rekindle fresh hope in the cause of Dutch independence in South Africa, if any sane person has really assumed that the British were willing to throw up the sponge at this juncture their hope must have been rudely shattered by the speech of Lord Salisbury at the recent dinner of the Lord Mayor of London. This was the traditional opportunity for the leader of the government to foreshadow the policy of the cabinet on any great public question, and the astute premier took advantage of it to make unmistakably clear the attitude of the ministry with respect to the unfortunate war in the Transvaal. After speaking of the light manner in which the cloud hovering over the Mediterranean during the past few weeks had passed away and contrasting this situation with that existing half a century ago, he strongly deprecated the spirit of pessimism frequently heard in the utterances of various British citizens as to the war in which England is engaged.

His Lordship pointed out that unlike the wars of former years, the struggle in South Africa was not determined by the capture of the enemy's capital nor did the dissipation of the force in the field constitute conclusive victory. England is now confronted by a system of guerilla warfare, which must be slowly and effectively stamped out. The Premier said he could not take the public into his confidence, but he would say that whatever delays were encountered they were not due either to the generals in the field or to a neglect to comply with their demands. He declared that England had neighbors in South Africa whose conduct was for years a menace to the stability of that part of the British empire, and he stated emphatically that they were now engaged in removing this menace and were determined to do it so effectually that it will never require doing again.

Commenting on the speech of Lord Salisbury, the Burlington Free Press points a moral by drawing attention to the popular sentiment in Canada. Our contemporary says:

"Any one who has travelled among even the people of Canada during the past few months could have foretold what the attitude of the British government would be, provided it continued to carry out the wishes of its subjects. While the British people have criticised the conduct of the conflict they have no idea of calling off their dogs of war. Indeed the expenditure of life and money already made would militate against such a step.

And the Free Press proceeds to bring the matter home to the people of the United States in the following very forcible fashion:

"If the Americans want to realize how the British feel about South Africa, let them ask how they feel about the Philippines, and then in addition try to imagine how much more strongly they would feel if the Philippines were adjacent to territory that we had controlled for decades and a considerable part of the population thereof were Americans. When we look at the situation confronting the British in South Africa from this standpoint we realize that it is idle for the Boers or any one else to expect the English government to give up the struggle there, leaving altogether out of consideration the blow to England's military prestige that would result from the weakening of the British at this time."

The Free Press is right. The honor, good faith and prestige, not only of England itself, but of the whole British Empire, are at issue, and there will be no cessation of hostilities, and no receding from the stand taken until the Boers are themselves ready to lay down their arms. The Boers brought on the war themselves with the intention of driving England out of South Africa, and they must accept the inevitable consequences of their mad act.

Benson's fight at Brakenlaagte was magnificent, but was it war? Out of 180 brave men, 132 went down to save an unwieldy baggage train from capture.

A Big Quarter's Worth

is always found in a bottle of Polson's Nerviline, the best household liniment known. It cures rheumatism, neuralgia, toothache, headache, sick-stomach, in fact is good for everything a liniment ought to be good for. Mothers find it the safest thing to rub on their children for sore throat, cold on the chest, sprains and bruises. Never be without Polson's Nerviline. It will cure the pains and aches of the entire family and relieve a vast amount of suffering every year.

THE OUTLOOK

For a woman's happiness in the married state depends less, as a rule, upon the man she is to marry than upon her own health. The woman who enters upon marriage, suffering from womanly weakness, is "heaping up trouble against the day of trouble."

Weak women are made strong and sick women are made well by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is the one reliable regulator. It dries enfeebling drains, heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness. It nourishes the nerves and invigorates the entire womanly organism. It makes the baby's advent practically painless, and gives strength to nursing mothers.

"I suffered for twelve years with female trouble," writes Mrs. Milton Grimes, of Adair, Adair Co., Iowa, "which brought on other diseases—heart trouble, Bright's Disease, nervousness, and at times would be nearly paralyzed. Had neuralgia of stomach. I can freely say your medicines (nine bottles in all, five of 'Favorite Prescription,' four of 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and two vials of Dr. Pierce's Pellets), have cured me. I can work with comfort now, but before I would be tired all the time and have a dizzy headache, and my nerves would be all unstrung so I could not sleep. Now I can sleep and do a big day's work, something I had not done for over eleven years before."

Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, in paper covers, sent free on receipt of 31 one-cent stamps to pay expense of customs and mailing only. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

A Few Pointers That Advertisers Would Do Well to Remember.

Josh Billings: "I luv a rooster for two things—one is the crow that is in him and the other is the spurs that air on him to bak up his crow with."

The Times has become a popular paper, not only amongst the people of the town and Ashburnham, but also amongst the residents of the surrounding towns and villages.

Mr. G. B. Hilliard, of Lakefield, says the Times is regarded in Lakefield as the brightest paper that comes to that burg, and is read by very many in the village.

Wm. O'Brien, the genial clerk of Douro, who has long been a subscriber to the daily edition, says that the Times is the popular paper in that township, 75 per cent. of the people being readers. He hopes that it may long keep up its onward pace.

Mr. Wm. Gallon, Reeve of Burleigh and Anstruther, states that the whole back country reads the Times, and regard the paper as one of the very best. He says that it is always full of good things.

Mr. P. P. Young, Young's Point, says everybody reads the Times in that locality. It is admirably conducted.

Mr. James Stevenson, ex-M.P., says the Times is the brightest and best newspaper published in Peterborough.

Commodore Calcutt says he would sooner miss his breakfast than miss getting the Times. It is a famous appetizer only equalled by Calcutt's celebrated ale.

Mr. J. M. Thornton, [illegible], says the Times is very popular in that village and is widely read.

Hon. Mr. [illegible] thinks the Times deserves great credit for its progressive spirit. It is up-to-date, giving all the news up to four o'clock each morning. North Smith, brought us in a couple of Recently Mr. [illegible] and another got clubs for the Weekly Times of 30 names. Here are 30 names from one section of Smith, that are constant readers of the Times.

Mr. Harry Garbett, Reeve of Smith, says that the Times is the popular paper in that locality.

Mr. James Haggie, Springville, gives similar evidence, and says you can hardly go into a house in his locality that the Times is not present.

Mr. Pearson, the great horse buyer, of Montreal, told the Times the other day that he has better results from the advertisement in the Times than from any other paper. He says he finds the Times is read by almost everybody in the district. He knows this, for almost every horse he buys is the product of the Times advertisement.

Mr. T. Donaldson, Cavan, member of the Counties' Council of Northumberland and Durham, says that the Times is very popular in Cavan.

Mr. James Chambers, [illegible], bears similar testimony in regard to Manvers Township.

David Healy says that in Apsley, Hastings and Norwood, everybody literally reads the Times.

Dr. Bingham, the popular city Medical Health Officer, missed his Times the other morning, and came to the office for a copy. He said he was not feeling well, and wondered what was the matter, until he remembered he had not had his Times.

The above are a few of the many evidences we have in our possession of the high regard in which this great family journal is held by the people. Merchants and other advertisers should remember that hundreds upon hundreds of families throughout the town and country cannot be reached by any other way except through the Times.

"MATT."

A TALE OF A CARAVAN

gained the day, while I proceeded rapidly with my drawing. At the end of a couple of hours Matt had become so fidgety that I thought it advisable to give her a rest. She sprung up and ran over to inspect the picture. The moment her eyes fell upon it she uttered a rapturous cry.

"'Look ye now, ain't it pretty? Master, am I like that?'

"I answered her it was an excellent likeness, and not too flattering. Her face fell, however, a little as she proceeded.

"'Are my cheeks as red as that master?'

"'You are red, Matt,' I replied flippantly; 'so are the roses.'

"She looked at me thoughtfully.

"'When it's finished, will you give it to me to keep?'

"'Well, we shall see.'

"'I gave t'other chap a shilling for his frame, and all, but I've got no more money,' she continued, with an insinuating smile, which, as a man of gallantry, I could not resist. So I promised that, if she behaved herself properly, I would, in all probability make her the present she coveted.

"'You must come again to-morrow,' I said, as we shook hands, 'and I'll finish the thing off.'

"'All right, master, I'll come.'

"And, with a nod and a bright smile, she walked away.

"During the whole of this interview Tim had not been unobservant, and as soon as I was left alone he looked up from the work he was engaged upon viz., potato- washing, and gave a knowing smile.

"'Sure she's a fine bold colleen,' he said. 'Does your honor know who she is?'

"'I have not the slightest idea.'

"'They're saying down beyant that she's a say-fondling, and has neither father nor mother, nor any belongings.'

"'Pray who was your informant?'

"'The man who picked her from the say —William Jones himself.'

"That name again. It was becoming too much for flesh and blood to bear. From the first moment of my arrival I had heard no other, and I had begun to detest its very sound."

CHAPTER IV.

Introduces William Jones and his Father.

My story is now bound to follow in the footsteps of Matt, who, on quitting the presence of her artist-friend walked rapidly along the sand-incumbered road in the direction of the sea. Skirting the lake upon the left hand, and still having the ocean and sand-hills upon her right, she gradually slackened her pace. A spectator, had he been by, would have doubtless observed that the change was owing to maiden meditation; that is other words, Matt had fallen into a brown study.

Presently she sat down upon a convenient stone, or piece of rock, and resting her elbows on her knees, her chin in her hands, looked for some minutes at vacancy. At last she rose, flushing warmly, and murmuring something to herself.

The something was to this effect

"His hands are as white as a lady's when he pulls off them gloves, and he said I was as pretty as my picture."

I can only guess at the train of reasoning which led to this soliloquy, and express my opinion that Matt had well-developed ideas on the subject of the sexes. True, she was not above sixteen, and had little or no experience of men, none at all of men who were both young and good- looking. Nevertheless, she was not insensible of the charms of a white hand, and other tokens of masculine refinement and beauty.

By a natural sequence of ideas, she was lead to stretch out her own right hand and look at it critically. It was very brown, and covered with huge golden freckles. The inspection not being altogether satisfactory, she thrust both her hands irritably into the pockets of her jacket and walked on.

Presently she left the road and came upon a primitive wooden bridge consisting of only one plank, supported on two cairns of stone. Here she paused, and, seeing a red-legged sand-piper running about on the edge of the water just below her, made a gesture like a boy's throwing a stone whereon the sand-piper sprung up chirping, and flew along out of sight.

In due time she came out upon a narrow and rudely-made road which wound along the rocky promontory, at low-water skirting the sand, at high-water, the sea. The first house she reached was a wooden life-boat house lying down in a creek; and it being then low tide, at some distance from the water's edge. On the roadside above the house was a flag-staff, and beneath the flag-staff a wooden seat. All was very still and desolate, without a sign of life; but a little further along the road was a row of cottages which seemed inhabited, and were, in fact, the abodes of the coast-guard. Instead of lingering here Matt proceeded on her way until she reached what, at first sight, looked like the beginning of a village, or small town. There were houses on each side of the road, some of them several stories high; but still there was no sign of any human soul. Suddenly, however, the street came to an end, and Matt found herself on a sort of rocky platform overlooking the sea; and on this platform, shading his eyes from the blazing sun, and looking out seaward, was a solitary man.

So intent was he on his occupation that he was unconscious of Matt's approach till she was standing by his side. He turned his eyes upon her for a moment, and then once more gazed out to sea.

A short, plump, thickset man, with a round, weather- beaten face, which would have been good-humored but for its expression of extreme watchfulness and greed. The eyes were blue, but very small and keen; the forehead low and narrow; the hair coarse and sandy; the beard coarser and sandier still. He might have been about fifty years of age. His dress was curious; consisting of a yellow sou'-wester, a pair of seaman's coarse canvas trousers, and a blue pilot-jacket, ornamented with brass buttons which bore the insignia of Her Majesty's naval service.

Presently, without turning his eyes again from the far distance, the man spoke in a husky, far-away whisper.

"Matt, do you see summat out yonder?"

Matt strained her gaze through the dazzling sunlight, but failed to discern any object on the light expanse of water.

"Look ye now," continued the man "it may be drifting weed, or it may be [illegible] but it is summat. Look [illegible]

"Summat black, William Jones?"

"Yes. Coming and going. Now it comes, and it's black; now it goes, and the water looks white where it was. If it isn't wreck, it's weed; if it ain't weed, its wreck. And the tide's flowing, and it'll go ashore afore night at the Caldron Point, if I wait for it. But I sha'n't wait," he added, eagerly. "I'll go and overhaul it now."

He looked around suspicious, and then said:

"Matt, did you seen any of them coast-guard chaps as you come along?"

"No, William Jones."

"Thought not. They're up Pencross way, fooling about; so there's a chance for an honest man to look arter his living without no questioning. You come along with me, and if it is summat, I'll gie thee tup-pence some o' these fine days."

As he turned to go, his eye fell for the first time on her attire.

"What's this, Matt? What are you doing in your Sunday clothes?"

The girl was at a loss how to reply. She blushed scarlet, and hung down her head. Fortunately for her, the man was too absorbed in his main object of thought to catechise her further. He only shook his fat head in severe disapprobation, and led the way down to a small creek in the rocks, where a rough coble was rocking, secured by a rusty chain.

"Jump in and take the paddles. I'll sit astarn and keep watch."

The girl obeyed and leaped in; but before sitting down she tucked up her dress to her knees to avoid the dirty water in the bottom of the boat. William Jones followed, and pushed off with his hands. Calm as the water was, there was a heavy shoreward swell, on which they were immediately uplifted with some danger of being swept back on the rocks; but Matt handled the paddles like one to the manner born, and the boat shot out swiftly on the shining sea.

The sun was burning with almost insufferable brightness, and the light blazed on the golden mirror of the water with blinding refracted rays. Crouching in the stern of the boat, William Jones shaded his eyes with both hands, and gazed intently on the object he had discovered far out to sea. Now and then he made a rapid motion to guide the girl in the rowing, but he did not speak a word.

"Pull away, Matt," said the man, not looking at her. "You ain't tired, not you!"

With a long- drawn breath Matt drew in the oars, and, swift as thought, peeled off her jacket and threw off her hat, leaving her head exposed to the burning sun.

Now, the silk gown she wore had evidently been used by its original owner as a festal raiment, for it had been cut low, and had short sleeves. So Matt's shoulders and arms were perfectly bare, and very white they looked in contrast with her sun-freckled hands, her sunburnt face, and her warm brown neck. Her bust was as yet undeveloped, but her neck and shoulders were fine, and her arms beautifully molded. Altogether her friend the painter, could he have seen her just then, would have regarded her with increasing admiration.

Freed from the incumbrance of her jacket, she now pulled away with easy grace and skill. Further and further the boat receded from the shore till the promontory they had left was a couple of miles away. Suddenly William Jones made a sign to the girl to stop, and stood up in the boat to reconnoitre.

The object at which he had been gazing so long was now clearly visible It consisted of something black, floating on a glassy stretch of water, and surrounded by fragments of loose scum or foam; it was to all appearance motionless, but was, in reality, drifting wearily shoreward on the flowing tide.

William Jones now evinced increasing excitement, and urged his companion to hurry quickly forward — which she did, putting out all her strength in a series of rapid and powerful strokes. Another quarter of an hour brought them to the spot where the object was floating. Trembling with eagerness, the man leaned over the boat's side with outstretched hands.

As he did so, Matt turned her head away with a curious gesture of dread.

"What is it, William Jones?" she asked, not looking at him. "It isn't —you know —one o' them?"

"No, it ain't," replied the man leaning over the side of the coble, and tilting the gunwale almost to the water's edge. "Too early for them Matt. If they comes, it won't be till Sunday's tide. They're down at the bottom now and ain't yet rose. Easy. Lean t'other way! So there —look out!"

As he spoke he struggled with something in the water, and at last, with an effort which almost capsized the boat, pulled it in. Matt looked soon and saw that it was a small, flat wooden trunk, covered with pieces of slimy weed. Floating near it were several pieces of splintered wood which seemed to have formed part of a boat. These, too, William secured and threw down on the footboard beneath him.

"It's a box, that's what it is," cried Matt.

"It's a box, surely," said Jones "And it's locked, too. And, look ye now. I misdoubt there's nowt inside or mayhap it would have sunk. Howsomever, we'll see!"

After an unavailing effort to force it open with his hands, he drew forth a large claspknife, worked away at the lock, and tried to force open the lid, which soon yielded to his efforts, as the action of the salt water had already begun to rot the wood. On being thus opened the box was found to contain only a couple of coarse linen shirts, an old newspaper, two or three biscuits, and half a bottle of some dark fluid.

After examining these articles one by one William Jones threw them back into the box with gestures of disgust, retaining only the bottle which he uncorked and applied to his lips.

"Rum!" he said, smacking his lips, and nodding at Matt. Then, recorking the bottle carefully, he returned it to the box, and, standing up, reconnoitered the sea on every side. But nothing else rewarded his eager search; he threw himself down in the stern of the boat and ordered Matt to pull back to shore.

As they went he closed one eye thoughtfully, and mused aloud:

"Night before last it blew half a gale from the sou'hard. This here box came awash from the east coast of Ireland. May be it was a big ship as was lost; them planks was part of

THE CASE OF MISS STONE

Sofia, Bulgaria, Nov. 16.—Consul General Dickinson of Constantinople has supplemented his verbal representations to the Bulgarian government by by a note to-day in which he recapitulates the history of the abduction by brigands of Miss Ellen M. Stone and her companion, Mme. Tsilka, and the steps taken to obtain her release, and reminds the foreign minister of his promise to give every assistance. He cites instances where the attitude of subordinate officials has not conformed with this assurance.

Finally, Mr. Dickinson repeats his demand for the noninterference of the government in the negotiations.

Mr. Dickinson also quotes from Miss Stone's letters, saying that the chief danger to which she is subjected is flight from hiding places by night at the approach of troops. He declares that the people of the United States will hold the Bulgarian government morally and legally responsible for the lives of the captives should the bandits, exasperated by persuit, slay them.

The government's reply, according to the opinion expressed in official circles, will set forth that while hesitating to establish the precedent that the government give protection to brigands in treating for the ransom of captives in the present case, involving the safety of two ladies, the government, as an act of courtesy and humanity, will comply with Mr. Dickinson's request.

A private agent who was employed to visit Doubritza reports that the members of the secret committee were discussing the lowest terms of ransom that would be acceptable. One member of the committee to-day stated that he had been invited to join the band and to take part in the kidnaping, but that he refused and deprecated an attack upon in-offensive women, pointing out that such action was calculated to cost the committee more in sympathy and support than the value of twenty ransoms. This view seems to be dawning gradually, even in Bulgarian circles, where the kidnaping is condoned as in the interest of a sacred cause.

THE WEST INDIES

London, Nov. 16.—The colonial office is instituting certain educational schemes in the British colonies of those islands designed to make the king's subjects realize the advantage of maintaining close relations with the mother country. The principal purpose of this move is to counteract the encroachment of American influences in the West Indies.

The colonial secretary does not stop with the organization of steamship lines to carry to market the products of the British West Indies. He now prescribes technical curricula for the elementary schools of the colonies and promotes lecture courses to instruct the people in the art of successful development of their resources in the several countries. Agricultural classes are in full swing in the Leeward islands and the authorities report hopefully of their progress

A MARVELLOUS MEDICINE

"No Cure, No Pay," is the Newest Proposal of the Proprietors of Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—We make the following proposal to the readers of the Times: To any one who is a subject of rheumatism (no matter how long standing) or any blood disease, as enumerated below, and will give Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills a fair trial and do not find a perfect cure we will refund the money paid for the pills. If no substantial improvement is observed, we will in addition, pay $10 in cash on satisfactory evidence being supplied us to this effect.

We have yet to know of a single case where these wonderful pills have not been almost entirely successful in effecting a cure. CANADA CHEMICAL CO.

Ex-Ald. Bailey, St. John's, writes: "I cannot speak too highly of Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills. They worked a miracle in my case, and cured me after many years of suffering. I do not think their equal is to be obtained.

Dr Clarke's Little Red Pills are a positive and certain cure for la grippe, rheumatism, asthma, paralysis, catarrh, eczema, coughs, backache, indigestion, all stomach and liver troubles, female complaints, even when the diseases having been standing for many years, the most stubborn cases will yield. Price 50 cents per box. For sale by Ormond & Walsh. The Canada Chemical Company will forfeit $10 for any case that these pills do not help.

Dr. Clarke's Sure Cure for Catarrh, and Dr. Clarke's Sure Cure for Eczema same price. $10 will be paid for any case they will not permanently cure.

Exception—Tenders are not required for the supply of meat to the asylums in Toronto, London, Kingston, Hamilton and Brockville, nor for the Central Prison and Mercer Reformatory, Toronto.

A marked cheque for five per cent. of the estimated amount of the contract, payable to the order of the Honorable the Provincial Secretary, must be furnished by each tenderer as a guarantee of his bona fides. Two sufficient sureties will be required for the due fulfillment of each contract, and should any tender be withdrawn before the contract is awarded, or should the tenderer fail to furnish such security, the amount of the deposit will be forfeited.

Specifications and forms of tender may be had on application to the Department of the Provincial Secretary, Toronto, or to the Bursars of the respective institutions.

The lowest or any tender not necessarily accepted.

Newspapers inserting this advertisement without authority from the Department will not be paid for it.

RELIEF.

There is nothing like Asthmalene. It brings instant relief, even in the worst cases. It cures when all else fails.

The Rev. C. F. WELLS, of Villa Ridge, Ill., says: "Your trial bottle of Asthmalene received in good condition I cannot tell you how thankful I feel for the good derived from it. I was a slave, chained with putrid sore throat and Asthma for ten years. I despaired of ever being cured. I saw your advertisement for the cure of this dreadful and tormenting disease, Asthma, and thought you had overspoken yourselves, but resolved to give it a trial. To my astonishment, the trial acted like a charm. Send me a full-size bottle."

DR. TAFT BROS. MEDICINE CO.

Gentlemen: I write this testimonial from a sense of duty, having tested the wonderful effect of your Asthmalene, for the cure of Asthma. My wife has been afflicted with spasmodic asthma for the past 12 years. Having exhausted my own skill as well as many others, I chanced to see your sign upon your windows at 130th street, New York. I at once obtained a bottle of Asthmalene. My wife commenced taking it about the 1st of November. I very soon noticed a radical improvement. After using one bottle her asthma has disappeared and she is entirely free from all symptoms. I feel that I can consistently recommend the medicine to all who are afflicted with this distressing disease. Yours respectfully,

O. D. PHELPS, M. D.

DR. TAFT BROS. MEDICINE CO.

Gentlemen: I was troubled with Asthma for 22 years. I have tried numerous remedies but they have all failed. I ran across your advertisement and started with a trial bottle. I found relief at once. I have since purchased your full size bottle and I am ever grateful. I have a family of four children and for six years was unable to work. I am now in the best of health and am doing business every day. This testimony you can make such use of as you see fit.

Permanent Cures of Cancer

We here give a few cases, where the efficacy of our Constitutional treatment in curing Cancer, is established beyond all question. We have plenty on fyle.

There is ample proof that where our remedy cures, it cures to stay and saves people from the torture of knife and plaster.

CANCER OF THE BREAST—A lady had Cancer of the breast, which rendered her right shoulder and arm almost helpless. Our remedy cured her over five years ago, and there is not the slightest return of the trouble.

CANCER OF THE FACE—This case of a gentleman who was so bad that his right cheek was almost eaten off with the disease. Plasters aggrivated his trouble. Our treatment cured him five years ago and he had been all right since.

CANCER OF THE STOMACH—Doctors pronounced the trouble cancer of the stomach. There was vomiting of material that looked like Coffee grounds, Great weakness and prostration. Cured over four years ago and well to-day.

CANCER OF THE NOSE—A severe case which was cured by our remedy in 1891 and has never returned to this day.

Full accounts of the above cases, together with the names and addresses of the persons, are given in our new book, "Cancer, Its Cause and Cure," sent to anyone, in plain wrapper on receipt of 2 stamps. Stott & Jury, Bowmanville, Ont.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

Local Happenings Picked Up Here and There by The Times.

NOTE.—The Times requests its readers to contribute items of news to its columns. Anything that is phoned or sent in writing to the office, of a nature suitable for publication, will be received and published.—Ed. Times.]

—The market was largely attended on Saturday.

—One hundred and twenty-four hunters' licenses were issued this year by Mr. J. B. McWilliams.

—When a man has a birthday, he takes a day off. When a woman has one she takes a couple of years off.

—The Chief of Police has a music case, and a pair of lady's gauntlets, for which he would like an owner.

—A meeting of Dan Spence Memorial subscribers will be held in the Town Council Chamber on Thursday evening.

—Now comes the melancholy days when people will be obliged to listen to the long-drawn out stories of the hunters, until their ears ache.

—A meeting of the Ashburnham Reading Circle will be held at the home of Miss Smith, 30 Aberdeen avenue, this evening at 7.30 o'clock.

—The work of completing the new Masonic hall, in the block corner George and Simcoe streets, is now in progress. It will be one of the best in Canada.

—Thirty-eight new members were initiated at the Federation of Labor meeting Friday night. A members' banquet will be held by the union on the evening of the 27th inst.

—The Royal chorus is being photographed at Whiteman's. The photo will be a valuable souvenir to remember when the Royal chorus sang before the future King and Queen of England.

—The first of the winter series of band concerts will be held in the Market Hall on Friday evening. The 57th band is making arrangements to go to Lindsay again at the end of the month.

—The committee of the Citizen's Ball, Havelock, have decided to hold it on Friday evening, Nov. 22nd. An orchestra from Peterborough has been engaged, as has also the floor manager, Mr. Archie Moore. Archie has gained a world wide reputation as a floor manager at such social affairs.

—A meeting of the Retail Merchants' Association of the town will be held in the Y.M.C.A. hall on Monday night. The meeting is a special one, and all merchants, whether members of the Association or not, are invited to attend. Mr. E. M. Trowern, of Toronto, will address the meeting.

—The next meeting of the Fortnightly was to have been held to-morrow evening, but owing to the Y.M.C.A. hall having been engaged, the meeting has been postponed until the following Tuesday, the 26th, when Mr. Sheriff Hall will lecture.

A burning chimney at the residence of Mr. Cleary, corner of Dalhousie and Stewart streets, gave the firemen a run about 4.30 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The chimney, which was plugged up, was cleared with a babcock engine, and no damage was done.

—The new cottage for the lockmaster at the locks is nearly completed. In addition to the cottage a woodshed about 10 ft. x 20 ft. has been erected near by and further south nearer the river a large storehouse 30 ft. x 40 ft. has been added to this growing group of canal buildings.

Fogg, will be pleased to show it to any intending purchasers. Very reasonable terms are offered and liberal allowance made for old instruments taken in exchange.

County Police Court

County Magistrate Edmison had a short session of court Saturday morning when a hen dispute was settled. Two neighbors from Otonabee were the principals. One man charged the other with keeping hens which had damaged his property. After hearing the evidence the owner of the hens was ordered to pay costs and the hens will be controlled hereafter.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Events of This Kind Transpiring in and Around Peterborough.

NOTE.—The Times requests its readers to furnish the paper with items of a personal and social nature either by phone or in writing.—Ed. Times.

—Mrs. A. J. Warne is visiting her sister, Mrs. W. J. Gould, Belleville.

—Dr. Berry of Hastings, was in town on Saturday, the guest of his uncle, Mr. J. Stuart, Stewart street.

—Mrs. F. H. Dixon will hold her post-nuptial reception on Tuesday, and Wednesday afternoons, Nov. 19th and 20th, at No. 535 Downie street.

—Miss Evelyn G. Elliott, a recent graduate of the Maine General Hospital, Portland, Me., is visiting her mother, Mrs. C. Elliott, Water street.

—The Times had a call on Saturday from Mr. W. L. Taylor, of the Tweed News, who dropped off on his way east.

—Mr. J. H. McClellan left on Saturday for New York on business. He will be back Thursday.

—Miss May Appleby has returned from a two months' visit in Boston, Mass., and Concord, N.H.

—Mr. Thos. Flood of Ennismore, the attentive caretaker of the Pigeon Creek bridge, was in town on Saturday on business.

—Mrs. T. F. Mowat received the sad news of the sudden death of her father, Mr. J. D. Smith, which occurred in Quebec on Friday. Mr. and Mrs. Mowat left on Friday by G.T.R. for Brockville, where the remains will be sent for interment.

The Ottawa Deputation

The deputation consisting of Messrs. J. B. McWilliams, warden Fitzgerald, Councillor Wm. Anderson and Ex-warden M. Hawthorne, leave this morning for Ottawa, to interview the Government in regard to the grants to the Chemong Lake bridge. They will return Wednesday.

Poor Meat

On Saturday there was offered for sale on the market a quantity of meat that looked as if it had not been properly killed. At least Chief Rossel thought so, and ordered it off the market. The farmer drove off, after protesting that it was all right.

A Generous Hunter

Mr. J. M. Brooks, on his return from his annual hunt on Saturday, sent the editor of this great family journal a fine roast of choice venison. It was delicious. This g.f.j. hereby tenders Mr. Brooks thanks.

St. John's W. A.

The monthly meeting of the St. John's Woman's Auxiliary, will be held in the Guild Room, this afternoon at half-past three. The collectors will kindly report to the treasurer at three o'clock.

Married in Buffalo

A wedding of considerable local interest took place in Buffalo on October 24th, when Mr. David Yarnold of town, was married to Miss Annie Hall, daughter of Mr. John Hall of Buffalo, and formerly of town. Mr. and Mrs. Yarnold, who will receive the congratulations of their many friends, have taken up their residence at 88 Hunter street.

Basket Ball

An interesting game of basket ball was played Saturday night between Ackerman's "Cow Hides" and Hamilton's "Iron Clads," resulting in a victory for the Iron Clads by a score of 8-4.

Features of the game were the combination work of the Iron Clads and the phenomenal playing and scoring of Laing.

The public would like to see another game between the Iron Clads and the Canadian General "Sparklets," for the championship.

A Telescope Needed

Mrs. Kendry, who takes great interest in scientific matters, thinks that a good telescope should be provided for the use of our Collegiate Institute pupils and citizens generally. There is no doubt that a telescope would awaken more interest in astronomy, and would help the scientifically inclined student to a better understanding of heavenly bodies. Mrs. Kendry would like to see a fund started for the purchase of a first-class instrument by voluntary subscription. Just now the heavens are particularly beautiful, the planets showing out like magnificent diamonds. On the 27th, the great conjunction between the planets is timed to take place.

CHURCH NOTES.

—Yesterday evening Rev. J. C. Davidson exchanged pulpits with Rev. E. A. Langfeldt, Mr. Davidson going to St. Luke's and Mr. Langfeldt to St. John's.

—The meeting at the Y.W.C.A. yesterday afternoon was led by the president, Miss Roberts.

The pulpit of George Street Methodist was occupied yesterday morning and evening, by the Rev. Mr. Datte, of Belleville.

—At All Saints' Church yesterday there was a celebration of the Holy Communion at the morning service. The morning sermon was on the "Christian Elements" (from the Epistle for the day) and in the evening the subject was "The Son of Man." Rev. W. L. Armitage conducted

DEATH OF JAMES M'CLELLAN

A Prominent Local Builder and Contractor Passes Away on Saturday

We regret to chronicle the death of Mr. James McClellan, which sad event occurred at his late residence, No. 185 Barnardo avenue, on Saturday afternoon last, from peritonitis, after an illness of only a few days.

For about 20 years Mr. McClellan was in the employ of the Toronto Loan and Savings Company, looking after their building and repairing operations here. He leaves a large family to mourn his demise.

Mr. Redmond's Visit to Ottawa

Ottawa, Nov. 18. — The St. Patrick's Literary Society are making arrangements for the reception of Mr. John Redmond, M.P. Mr. Redmond and his friends will be met at the station by a number of local prominent Irishmen on his arrival, and escorted to the Russell House. Divisions Nos. 1 and 2 of the Ancient Order of Hibernians will take part in the reception.

HUNTING SEASON ENDED

Return of the Various Hunting Parties on Saturday

The open season for deer hunting ended Saturday, and the hunters have all got back to town.

The Eagle Lake party got 15 deer, the entire lot weighing 1500 pounds. The members of the party were: Messrs. Jack Cottingham, captain; Chas. Westlake, Sec.-Treasurer; C. James, C. Gunsolus, Geo. Fitzgerald, R. Tivey, W. Mitchell, F. Pearson, M. Dobson, T. Parker White, S. Courier, M. Tooley, W. Creamer, and J. Irwin, the capable cook.

The Winch—Morrow party had its headquarters on Sand Beach, Lake Ketcheschum, and killed 12 deer. The lodge which was erected by Mr. Harry Winch, is a triumph in architecture. Members of the party were: Messrs. R. A. Morrow, H. C. Winch, J. J. Lundy, W. H. Hill, Peter Campbell, R. G. Kingan, R. M. Dennistoun, D. Johnston, T. H. Hooper, A. Simpson, A. Patterson, R. Gibbs, R. Fair, A. L. Davis, W. G. Morrow, R. Hicks and F. Bailey, of Toronto. Several of these spent only part of the season at the camp, and returned during the week.

The Westlake-O'Brien party had remarkable good luck and got ten deer seven of which were bucks. The hunters camped near Sucker and Bottle lakes. Those who composed the party were Messrs. Phil. Westlake, Wm. Westlake, M. O'Brien, J. Stabler, R. Stabler, and Mr. Lyndall, of Chemong.

Arthur Head's party were camped at the head of Eagle lake, and brought home seven fine deer. The members of the party were: Messrs. Arthur Head, Tom Welsh, C. Butcher, B. Mitchell, E. Milburn, and H. Wills.

Messrs. Thomas, John and William Brightman, Wm. Buller, of town, and W. McMillan, game warden, of Hillsburg, together with five settlers in the vicinity of Gull Lake, evidently had the best luck of any of the several parties in this vicinity, their luck consisting of twenty deer. Rev. Mr. McKnight was a member of the party for a few days.

The Farm Point Hunt Club had an interesting time of it. The party averaged six during the season, those figured in the hunt being Messrs. Myles Hamilton, George Dawson, J. Milne, S. Milburn, W. Moritz, J. Howden, A. Letellier, B. Laroque, L. Houdrey, J. E. A. Fitzgerald, Gug White and W. Steelbrook. The party had headquarters with Mr. Nelson Windover, on the Switzer farm, between Kashacum and Gull Lake. They secured ten deer.

Messrs. Arnott Bros., North Monaghan, F. Lawless and Harry Jeffery have returned from the north with five deer, one buck weighing 225 pounds.

APSLEY.

—No news here but hunting. All the parties are having more or less deer with them.

—The patrons of the Apsley cheese factory will hold their annual oyster supper and entertainment on Friday evening, Nov. 22, the close of a most successful season.

—Mr. James McIlvena, our popular blacksmith, is busy erecting a new blacksmith shop across the road from the old stand.

—Mr. J. W. Stuart of Lakefield, is up north in the interests of the Singer Mfg. Co.

—A party composed of Messrs. C. and P. Coones, T. W. Eastland, N. Lane, Fred Bullard and Ben Jones, have returned from Chub Lake with nine deer after five days' hunting.

MT. JULIAN.

—Mr. Charles Armstrong of the Mt. Julian Hotel had the good fortune to shoot a fine deer on the first day of deer hunting.

—Mr. P. W. Shearer & Sons have finished a most successful season's sawing with their new steam mill situated at Mt. Julian, which has proved a great boon to people in this section.

—Mr. J. W. Stuart, the energetic agent of the Singer Mfg. Co., was in this section last week and did a good business.

MR. BROOKS' HOSPITALITY

The Popular Proprietor of the Palace to Give Venison Dinner

Mr. J. M. Brooks, the popular proprietor of the Palace Restaurant, will entertain his friends and patrons to a venison dinner this evening between 4.30 and 11 o'clock.

Mr. Brooks returned from Sundridge, where he has a hunting lodge, and where he spent two weeks. His party, which consisted of five, secured ten deer, the largest of which was secured by Mr. Brooks. It weighed 230 pounds, and was a beauty.

Mr. Brooks says that there were forty hunters within a radius of a mile and a half of his camp, which is located twelve miles from Sundridge. When he left camp there was a foot of snow on the ground.

Mr. Brooks is strongly of the opinion that shooting deer in the water should be stopped. If something of the nature is not done, deer will soon be extinct. As an instance of the number that was slaughtered this season, two full cars were shipped to Toronto from the Sundridge district.

Put Everything in the Contract

Lindsay Post: A very interesting case was argued yesterday before His Honor Judge Harding at the Court House. It will be remembered that the 57th Regimental band of Peterborough ran an excursion from that town to Sturgeon Point in August last, the Str. Crandella being engaged to convey the excursionists from Lindsay to the Point. The crowd was so large that the above steamer was unable to accommodate them, and about 130 passengers were obliged to board the Str. Esturion in order to reach their destination. Mr. Jos. Crowe, manager, on behalf of the band, entered an action against Capt. Crandell, claiming $31, the amount paid to the Trent Valley Navigation Co. It appears that a written contract was made, but in it there was no provision for passengers seeking other boats provided the Crandella was unable to carry them. It was pointed out by Mr. Stewart, who defended Crandell, that he had suggested engaging a barge also, at a further cost of $12, but it was not included in the contract, and he could not see how the band could claim the amount when they had failed to have a proper agreement drawn up. Mr. A. P. Poussette appeared on behalf of the Peterborough boys, and put up a strong fight for his clients. His Honor reserved his decision.

The Toppan Trial

Barnstable, Mass. Nov. 18. — Miss Jane Toppan, charged with the murder of Mrs. Mary E. Gibbs, at Cataumet, last August, was before the court here to-day; but the hearing was postponed again, the date fixed being December 11. Miss Toppan is rapidly giving way under the strain incident to her imprisonment. She is in reality being kept in solitary confinement, and is suffering untold mental tortures. She has only one desire, that of being allowed to tell the court her side of the story.

Frontal Attacks and the South African War

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—It is only now that Lt.-Col. Livermore, United States military attaché at Copenhagen, who has lately been visiting London, for the purpose of studying the South African campaign at the British headquarters, has discovered the futility of making frontal attacks on the enemy in their entrenchments when provided with quick firing guns. The Yankee expert is no improvement on the Old Country authorities in making that discovery. Our Canadian boys are not that slow witted. Our esteemed fellow citizen, W. Dixon Jewett—and Dixon does not claim to be a military expert—foresaw and foretold the very difficulty without any study or examination, that has been demonstrated in making frontal attacks in the South African war. Dixon, on the side, remarked that if he was entrenched above on, say, Armours hill, with quick firing guns, he would like to see how many would be left of a thousand invaders to tell the story, should they have the temerity to make such an attack.

Yours, etc.,

CANADIAN.

An Old Hunter.

Huntsville Forester: Just at present, when hunting stories have precedence over fish and other kinds of yarns, it is interesting to listen to this from a prominent Huntsville citizen. He hunted in these parts years ago, when bears and wolves seem to have been particularly plentiful. "Bless your heart," he said to a group of listeners at Pym's hotel, "you men don't know what hunting means. Not many years ago, when the modern rifle was unheard of and fishing was done with a bent pin, I recollect one day's 'take in' in which I played the role of conqueror. When nightfall came, with my old shot gun, hunter's knife, and fish rod and pin, I had killed five bears, seven deer, seventeen wolves one moose of over 2000lbs., twelve feet high and over fifteen feet long, and caught over four hundred speckled trout. Beat that some of you fellows who boast of your ability as hunters." he said, but as he turned to those whom he thought he addressed, he found himself alone in his glory. The crowd had left before he had half completed his list of captures.

Violence Used in Galway Contest

Dublin, Nov. 16.—Rioting between the Horace Plunkett and Arthur Lynch factions, as a result of the Parliamentary contest in Galway was renewed last night. The Lynchites stormed the Unionist headquarters, and further demolished the doors and windows. Numbers of persons were injured and several heads were split.

Colonel Lynch has not yet appeared on the scene, and is not expected. The Nationalists assert that if the colonel is elected he will be "smuggled" inside the House of Commons to take the oath and then "face the music" if accused of treason for fighting in behalf of the Boers.

John Dillon is actively campaigning against Mr. Plunkett, his object, it is alleged, being to cause Mr. Plunkett's retirement from the Vice-Presidency of the Irish Agriculture and Industries Department, which probably would follow his defeat. Mr. Dillon's attitude is in a line with his denunciation of John Redmond because the latter so warmly supported Mr. Plunkett's projects for the regeneration of agriculture in Ireland, on the Parliamentary Committee, whose labors resulted in the formation of the new department.

SOME POSITIVE PROOFS

What is Being Told of Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills—No Cure No Pay.

Dr. Clark's Little Red Pills cured me of kidney trouble of many years' standing, and after I had tried every other known remedy. Joseph Begley, Caledonia ave., Rochester, N.Y.

I was afflicted with rheumatism so badly at times that I could not walk. Nothing I took did me much good, until I tried Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills. Fiver boxes cured me entirely.

I had the misfortune to have suffered some years ago from paralysis, sustaining no less than three strokes. I could get nothing to do me any good until I was induced to try Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills. I took nine boxes, and although not by any means well, I think I am in a fair way to recovery. I can now walk with the aid of a stick and feel myself getting better every day. M. F. Mann, Merlin, N.Y.

Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills permanently cured me of Backache. I suffered for years, and took two boxes. That is a year ago. I have not had a symptom since. James H. Jackson, Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.

I do not believe there is a medicine to compare with Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills. They cured me of indigestion and catarrh of the stomach, after nine years' suffering. H. S. Macdonald, G.T.R. shops, Montreal.

Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills are a positive and certain cure for la grippe, rheumatism, asthma, paralysis, catarrh, eczema, coughs, backache, indigestion, all stomach and liver troubles, female complaints, even when the diseases have been standing for many years, the most stubborn cases will yield. Price 50 cents per box. For sale by Ormond & Walsh. The Canada Chemical Company will forfeit $10 for any case that these pills do not cure.

Reincarnation Defined.

The doctrine of reincarnation, along with Karma and other Oriental hypotheses relating to the spiritual life, has attracted much attention in the Occident of late years, and, as now appears, it has even become a subject of discussion among the Dutch Jews. The Bombay "Guardian" gives a dialogue on "transmigration" of souls, between two gentlemen of this nationality. As the doctrine is often found to be a difficult one for Western comprehension, we give the "Guardian's" report of the conversation, which has the merit of being at least a clear statement: Strauss—O, say, Mishter Isaacs, vot new dochtrine ish dis I hear? Dey call it tdrampsmikrashun. Isaacs — O, tdrampsmikrashun, tdrampsmikrashun; you not know vot dot is? Strauss —No, und I hears very much about it sometimes now. Isaacs—Vell! Vell! I soon dtell you vot tdrampsmikrashun is. It is dis vay. You are now Strauss. Some day you dies, und den your soul or spirit goes into a tdonkey. Den some mornin' I gets up und I valks oudt early down ve vay, und I meets dot tdonkey, und it (you) brays und brays, und says, "Mishter Isaacs! Mishter Isaacs!" Und I says, "Vy, who are you? I tdon't know you." Und you says, "Vy Mr. Isaacs, you tdon't know me? Vy, I am Strauss!" Und I says, "Vot, you Strauss? No! No! Vy you are a tdonkey." Und you says, "No, no; I am Strauss, but I have chust been tdrampsmikrated." Then I sthrokes your long ears, und pats you big cheek, und I says: "Vell, vell, now, Strauss; is dis dou? Vy, how little you have changed!" Tdot is de tdrampsmikrashun doctrine."

A Scientist's Grim Discovery.

Dr. Casagrandi, in reading a paper before a medical association in Rome, stated that he had employed a number of women wearing long skirts to walk for one hour through the streets of the city, and, after the promenade was over, he had taken these skirts and had them submitted to a very careful bacteriologic examination. There were found on every skirt large colonies of noxious germs, including those of typhoid fever, consumption, influenza and tetanus (or lock-jaw). Numerous other bacilli were likewise well represented on each skirt. Dr. Casagrandi maintained that, in view of these facts, women, and especially mothers, should at once discontinue wearing trailing skirts, and other members of the Medical Congress unhesitatingly expressed the same opinion, and passed resolutions to that effect. That women should subject themselves to the filth, to say nothing of the possible dangers of trailing gowns, has long been a wonder to those acquainted with bacteriology. Nevertheless, so long as fashion calls for long skirts, no reform can be expected, for the great majority of women are bound to be in the fashion regardless of any ordinary considerations. There is some encouragement, however, in the fact that many of the younger women of the present wear their golf and bicycle skirts throughout the day, and merely dress for dinner and the evening.

KITCHENER'S PLAN TO END BOER WAR

He is Aiming to Drive the Enemy Against Lines of Blockhouse

THE VAST SYSTEM OF FORTS.

Military Writers in the Old Country do Not Appreciate the Importance of the General's Block House

London, Nov. 18.—The Government may have been lost in the recent fog, but Lord Kitchener knows where the battalions are, and has not been disheartened by repeated failures to overtake or entrap the guerilla leaders. His latest despatches with the sidelight thrown upon them in the detailed reports of the operations of the army explain what is going on in South Africa. The clearance of the Dutch districts, so that the enemy could not maintain systematic hostilities in them was the chief object early in the year; driving the scattered bands of guerillas against the lines of blockhouses, where the enemy is forced to surrender in small groups is the supreme end of the close of the year.

GREAT BLOCKHOUSE SYSTEM.

The magnitude of the system of blockhouse lines has not been appreciated by military writers here. There is a complete network of railway defenses for the protection of the lines of communication, and also transverse barriers across the Orange River Colony, from Jacobsdal to Ladybrand, from Aliwal North to De Aar, and thence to Kimberly, and in the eastern and western Transvaal, with Heidelberg and Megaliesberg as centres. The surrenders reported from week to week are mainly due to the sweeping movements of mobile columns toward these blockhouse lines.

KITCHENER'S PLANS.

A new feature of Kitchener's campaign is apparently the organisation of a fresh series of mounted columns, with the lightest possible equipment, and probably without guns, for hot pursuit of the enemy's force, and the capture of the leaders—Steyn, Dewet, Botha, Delarey and Kemp. There are no practical results of the new tactics, but with the reinforcements ordered or already on the way, military men are hoping that the collapse of the Boer struggle will come in due time. It is noticeable that neither the end of the year nor the meeting of Parliament is mentioned as the limit of hostilities, but the coronation in June.

REGULAR BOER TACTICS.

The Boers, with their talent for adapting themselves to new conditions, are reverting from irregular to regular warfare, and after scattering their forces are now massing them for attacks upon rear guards of columns and isolated garrisons. Botha and De Wet are following the same tactics. But the bands of Cape rebels against whom General French is operating are too widely dispersed to cooperate with one another.

ITEMS OF INTEREST

London, Nov. 16.—The bureaus of the War Department are in possession of some very interesting facts relating to the mortality of bullet wounds under modern conditions of treatment, which throw some indirect light on the subject. It should, of course, be borne in mind that any arm fired at very short range has an explosive effect, not that it does explode, but that the jar it gives the substance into which it enters resembles that produced by an explosion. Tests of firing into a tin can filled with various substances at short range reveal that. But aside from this short-range explosive jar, the hand pistol is a much less dangerous weapon than the rifles of modern warfare. It is not believed that the bullets which entered the President had a muzzle velocity of more than 600 feet, whereas the velocity of the smaller arms used in warfare is from three to four times as great.

The war in South Africa has furnished a vast amount of interesting surgical experience, showing the effect of modern arms and of antiseptic methods in the hospitals. While it is too early to draw deductions from the statistics of the war, it is worthy of note that when the records were kept of 12,687 officers and men who had been wounded, only 732 died of wounds received in action. This small mortality is attributed to the prompt application of a first aid dressing. The action of the Mauser bullet upon human tissues depends upon the range at which it is fired. Within 200 yards it has an explosive character. The nickel case seems to expand, and became detached, causing a severe, lacerated and contused wound which heals very slowly. If it strikes a bone it crushes and destroys it. If fired at a longer range it makes a clean, drilled hole through a bone, while if it strikes soft parts of the body, only a small wound is made, there being but little difference between the place of the bullet and its exit, which bleed but little unless an important vessel is injured.

It is remarkable how few amputations have been performed during the Boer war. Dr. Kendall Franks has reported that in his experience not more than amputations had occurred in 3,000 cases, which is attributed to the conservative spirit of present-day surgery. Dr. Sterling Ryerson relates that he saw at Kimberly 147 wounded Boers in a roller rink which had been converted into a temporary hospital. They had been wounded at Paardeburg, and in many cases the wounds had been undressed for from fifteen to seventeen days. He tells of one man who had been shot through the elbow joint and whose only treatment had been the universal Boer remedy, tobacco juice. The arm was enormously swollen, and almost erysipelatous in appearance. A civil surgeon, however, took the case in hand with modern methods, with the result that the man made an excellent recovery, retaining even the power to move his arm at the joint. Another man whose case is somewhat notable, was shot through the body by a round ball from a shrapnel shell. The projectile entered four inches below the heart, somewhat to the left, and came out through the sixth intercostal space on the right side and posteriorly. He had been wounded sixteen days before, but at the time Dr. Ryerson saw him he had practically no symptoms, which is remarkable, in view of the nature of the missile. Dr. Ryerson relates that he has seen a good many penetrating wounds of the abdomen, which have produced little immediate disturbance. One was the case of a medical officer who was shot through the stomach. He had had little to eat for twelve hours before he was wounded and when that occurred he had the good sense to abstain from drinking, although very thirsty. He lay on the battlefield for twelve hours and yet made an excellent recovery. The surgeon relates that three months afterward although his wound was healed, he complained of a dragging sensation in the neighborhood of the injury, and was eventually sent home, an invalid. Two of his companions who had been shot through the abdomen in much the same way drank water and died of peritonitis; but this may have been due, the doctor thinks, to the filthiness of the water.

It is understood to be the experience of the surgeons in South Africa, that what is known as the abdominal section in wounds of the intestines was inadvisable. Altogether, wounds show a surprising tendency to heal rapidly even under the most trying circumstances, if antiseptic treatment is early applied.

The surgeon's story of how he treated wounds of the head, involving destruction of brain tissues, especially of young and innocent boys, is most impressive. Wounds of the eye were frequent occurrences, the reports describing a case in which both eyes were lost, the bullet passing through the orbit and cutting the optic nerves. But this chapter on bullets makes most unpleasant reading.

Some discussion is here given as to the possibility of a better supervision of concealed firearms. To be effective, such a movement would have to be national in its scope, and the customs inspection service on the borderline and at the ports of entry would have to make careful scrutiny of arrivals. In the city of London to-day any person who purchases a pistol must leave with the merchant his name and address, but there is no way of knowing that he gives his real name and so the formality is only of remote usefulness. Something approaching a permission or license to carry concealed firearms, it is believed by some people, would be beneficial, not only as a preventative of assassination, but for a generally wholesome affect on the community. That far too many pistols are owned and carried by all classes of people seems to be generally acknowledged.

WINNER OF THE DERBY.

London, Nov. 16.—A Steddall's First Principle won the Derby Cup of 2,000 sovereigns for 3-year-olds and upwards at the Derby November meeting today.

A TRAGEDY OF LIFE.

London, Nov. 18.—Occasionally the police courts disclose a story which outvies the efforts of the most imaginative novelist. Such a one was recently unfolded at Mitcham. Under an old yew tree just off the Pitcairn road an old man was observed sitting. He seemed to be asleep. Hat and stick were beside him, and a newspaper was unfolded on his knee. The old man sat there in the sleep of death for six days. People passed and repassed. It was no business of their's, and there was nothing in his appearance to cause comment. Meanwhile the police were everywhere searching for Mr. S. Parsons, aged seventy-three, who, with a gold watch and chain and £118 in notes in his pockets, had left his home, No. 117 Wistanley road and had not been heard of since. One man chanced to cross the field, and make a closer inspection, and realized that the sleeping old man would not wake again. All his personal property was intact. Not one had approached him, and death had remained undisturbed for close on a week near the high road.

A BUTTON HOUSE.

Paris, Nov. 16.—A house built of buttons is the latest thing in architecture, and a certain French musical celebrity is building it. The walls, ceilings, the doors, the exterior and the interior are all ornamented with buttons of every description, from the very origin of their invention up to those of the present day. Those dating from the Lower Greek Empire are of the most curious manufacture, but every country has been ransacked and some very curious specimens are reported to have been brought to light.

BRITISH TROOPS IN GOOD CONDITION.

Less Patients in the Military Hospitals Than Formerly

THE YEOMANRY ARE RELEASEED

English Papers Are Discussing the Marquis of Salisbury's Mysterious Speech—The Mysterious speech

Bloemfontein, Nov. 18.—British columns operating in the Orange River Colony bring in about one hundred prisoners a week.

As the British troops become acclimatized and accustomed to the exposure of campaigning, the military hospitals are becoming depopulated and the medical staff have a comparatively easy time. Doubtless, too, the fact that the commissariat and transport systems are practically in a state of perfection, thus affording a regular distribution of rations and supplies generally, may account in a great measure for the amelioration of the suffering of the troops.

The military authorities have supplied the farmers in the neighborhood of this city with fungus to assist in killing the locusts, of which great swarms have appeared here lately. The cattle, sheep, etc., show a marked improvement, owing to the abundance of grass.

THE BRAKSPRUIT AFFAIR.

London, Nov. 18.—The War Office has received further details of casualties in the recent fight at Brakspruit, reported by Lord Kitchener last Friday. Fifty-eight Yeomanry, who were captured by the Boers, were afterwards released.

A European despatch says that Kitchener has written to Botha suggesting that the negotiations for settlement be reopened.

CANADIAN CASUALTY.

Ottawa, Nov. 17.—The Minister of Militia has received a despatch from the War Office to the effect that Trooper All Saints', rather tha nsppose the wish, severely wounded at Tweefontein. Hall enlisted at Montreal.

SALISBURY'S SPEECH.

London, Nov. 18.—The newspapers are still discussing the recent war speeches. Many guesses are being made as to the meaning of Lord Salisbury's mysterious pleading that silence is imposed on the Government by a sense of public duty. It is suspected that the Government has authentic information of the Boer funds.

WESTERN OATS

Order for a Half Million Bushels for South Africa.

Ottawa, November 17.—While the arrangements which the department of agriculture has made with dealers in Western Alberta calls for the collection and shipment of half a million bushels of oats for South Africa, it is the opinion of the department that a second consignment of half a million bushels will subsequently be procured in the same district. Enquiry of the dealers convinced the department that half a million bushels was as large a quantity as could be with certainty collected for shipment from the west by December 19th. the arrangement with the war office specifying that the oats should be on shipboard at St. John, Jan. 5, after being clipped and bagged on way across continent. This will be the first shipment of Alberta oats to any point east of Winnipeg, as the usual cost of handling the transportation prevents export to a very distant point. In the case of the South African consignment, however, systematic arrangement with the railroad and steamship companies together with the good price which the war office is willing to pay enabled the transaction to be carried out with profit both to the Alberta farmer and the British authorities. The farmers of Alberta are to receive 24 cents a bushel for the oats, and the dealers 3 cents a bushel for inspection and purchase. Then the freight for the 3,000-mile haul by rail from Calgary to St. John will be about 19 cents a bushel. To this has to be added the cost of clipping and bagging the oats which will be done probably at Montreal, so that they will have about trebled in cost by the time they reach Cape Town.

CHINA MAKING AND PURCHASING ARMS

ARSENALS BEING OPERATED ON AN EXTENSIVE SCALE

European Agents Negotiating for the Delivery of Firearms and Ammunition to the Government.

London, Nov. 18.—Telegraphing from Hankow, November 5, the Pekin correspondent of the Times, Dr. Morrison, says: "The Yang Tse Valley is now peaceful, and no doubt is entertained that the Court will return to Pekin. Trade is very active here. The manufacturers of arms and ammunition is proceeding on a great scale at all the principal Chinese arsenals. There are 2000 workmen in the Hankow Arsenal and 2500 in the arsenal at Shanghai.

"Forty thousand gunstocks were recently imported, and 15,000 Mausers are now ready for distribution. Large contracts for the supply of rifles are being negotiated by the representatives of European firms. Work on the railway from Hankow to Canton has not yet been begun. Recently Sheng, the Taotai, asked that categorical assurances should be given to the Chinese Government that this concession, which was granted to an American syndicate because the syndicate was American, should not become subject, as was reported from American to the Belgians, who hold three-fifths of the original stock.

Pain in the Joints

may be muscular or rheumatic. The joints are hard to get at, and it requires a powerful, penetrating remedy to reach the affected parts. Polson's Nerviline exactly meets the requirements, for it is both powerful and penetrating. The pain is expelled as if by magic, for one drop of Nerviline equals in strength five drops of other remedies. You won't often call the doctor if Nerviline is in the house. Price 25 cents.

TRICKS OF SMUGGLERS

REMOVE THE INTERNATIONAL BOUNDARY MARKS.

Devices for Evading the Payment of Duties at the Imaginary Line Dividing Canada and the United States—Stores and Hotels Erected Thereon.

Ottawa, Nov. 18.—A recent official examination of the monuments marking the boundary line between Canada and the United States showed many of them to have disappeared along the frontier of New York state. As these monuments consist of iron pillars, indestructible and not easily dislodged, their absence suggested deliberate removal. A prominent customs official, when asked to account for the fact, said:

"It is true these monuments were erected many years ago and some of them may have disappeared from natural causes; but I am inclined to credit the wiles of smugglers with having caused the disappearance of most of them. You probably have no idea of the tricks to which the 'free trade' fraternity resort along the frontier. They give us no end of trouble. There are many places where stores and even hotels are built directly on the boundary line, part of the building being in the United States, part in Canada. There is a hotel at a place called Trout River, in the eastern townships, which stands on the boundary, the line passing through the bar-room so you can stand in New York state and get your drink in Canada. When local prohibition prevailed on one side of the boundary you can imagine how easily it was evaded. At other places there are stores with one counter in Canadian territory and another in the United States. The border town of Rock Island, with its whip and corset factories, is a source of endless trouble to the customs people of both countries. In fact, throughout all that district it is only by the customs detectives on both sides of the line working in harmony that we manage to get along at all. In fact the real customs business there is practically all done by the detective service. There is only one other place which gives us so much trouble and that is that French island of St Pierre off the Newfoundland coast. There the authorities tacitly encourage smuggling. They protest against the presence of a British consular agent there at all. The United States government maintains a consul at St. Pierre, but he is afraid of his life to do anything.

"No; there is no law here to prevent the erection of buildings on the boundary line. In Europe they won't even allow roads to be run across the frontier except at certain authorized places. All we do in Canada to curb frontier contraband enterprise is to inflict a heavy penalty upon the owners of building situated on the boundary line in case smuggled goods are found on the premises. The penalty is forfeiture of goods and a fine of $200 to $1,000 the heaviest penalty imposed under the Canadian customs law."

CHINA MAKING ARMS.

Arsenals Being Operated on an Extensive Scale.

London, Nov. 18.—Telegraphing from Hankow, November 5, the Pekin correspondent of the Times, Dr. Morrison, says: "The Yang Tse Valley is now peaceful, and no doubt is entertained that the Court will go to Pekin. The manufacture of arms and ammunition is proceeding on a great scale at all the principal Chinese arsenals. There are 2000 workmen in the Hankow Arsenal and 2500 in the arsenal at Shanghai.

Foreign News

Geneva, Nov. 18.—Recently M. Ringel's school for young boys at Sekingen visited Bale duringg the holidays and roused great interest and excitement in the town by their Spartan dress dna manners. The boys wore a simple soft shirt without sleeves, and a belt around the centre. They were without any head covering or stocking and their footwear was wooden sandals. All the year round they wear the one garment. Their food is of the simplest, and they undergo great exertions. M. Ringele commenced his Spartan system with his boys some years ago, and the results were very encouraging. The boys remain at the school until they are of age to become soldiers, and they are considered the best recruits in the army. M. Ringele intends starting a girls' school very shortly on the same principles and methods.

Rome, Nov. 118.—Will the Nuncio at Madrid, Mgr. Rinaldini, return to Madrid or will his leave be prolonged indefinitely? That is the point which people at Rome are discussing with interest, and to which the Spaniards attach an importance that will be readily understood. The Iberian people has preserved its faith; it is a historic soul, a traditional block. Were the Government to attack the sanctuary directly we should see the evolution of a drama whose terrible grandeur would startle the imagination. Not to send back to Madrid the visible representative of the Pope would indicate on the part of the Vatican the conviction that the evil days are at hand.

As a matter of fact the Court of Rome has reason to be severe. The Cabinet, as is well known, immediately after the departure of the Nuncio, made public its decree of restrictions on the religious. Does it intend it merely as a police ordinance in order to appease the mob in the streets? In that case the new disturbances which at the present moment are agitating Spain would show up brutally under what illusions Senor Sagasta is laboring. Will it attempt to apply strictly this law that it is so burdensome, the Concordat of 1853, authorizing three congregations, the Philippine regulars, the Fathers of St. Vincent de Paul, and an order to be designated in each diocese? We would almost believe it from the declarations made by the president of the council in reply to an interpellation on the subject of the unfortunate decree. Senor Sagasta's words are full of mysteries and embarrassments; you can feel in them that the man is between two fires; he tries to escape from each, and as usual he will fall into both. Pessimists assert that driven by the bold demands of the mob, Senor Sagasta will submit to the Cortes, a formal law against the congregations.

Your Time is Valuable.

CREW LOST OFF NEWFOUNDLAND.

Steamer Elk Lost in Belle Isle With All on Board

WAS LASHED TO THE RIGGING

The Titanic Wrecked in a Fog Off Cape Race—A Terrific Gale on Lake Superior

Halifax, Nov. 18.—The steamer Elk was lost on the northern coast of Newfoundland, and Captain Dunning, and his crew of 25 men were drowned. She was a Norwegian steamer, plying between Montreal and St. John's, Newfoundland. Late advices state that a terrific storm has been raging along the coast since Thursday night, and the Elk would meet the full force of it as she emerged from the Gulf of St. Lawrence. She either foundered or was driven on the rocks and was dashed to pieces. In the fierce storm landing by boats on that perilous coast would be impossible, and the crew would go down with the vessel. Another steamer of the same name foundered two years ago off the Massachusetts coast while on a voyage from New York to Halifax.

BARKENTINE LOST.

St. John's, Nfld., Nov. 18.—The barkentine, Titanic, bound for Liverpool from this port, was wrecked on Saturday in a thick fog off Cape Race. The captain and his crew were on the wreckage 36 hours, lashed to the rigging, and were not rescued until yesterday afternoon. So thick was the fog that the coast folk were not aware that a wreck had occurred, the crew being unable to make any signals that would attract attention. The fact that the Titanic was in a cove, between high cliffs, made it impossible for the crew to land. The ship is a total wreck, and the cargo is lost.

FOUR MEN DROWNED.

Goderich, Nov. 18.—There seems no doubt that the following four men were drowned in the wreck of the schooner Marine City last Friday: Jas. Halpin, of Kingston, second engineer; Antony Jerush, Garden Island, mate; James Coanly, Kingston, fireman, and Frank Lawrence, Kingston, sailor. It will be remembered that these men left the India when the Marine City was taken in tow.

STORM ON LAKE SUPERIOR.

Fort William, Nov. 18.—A terrific storm raged on Lake Superior on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, the Spaulding being the only vessel of the fifteen expected in that time. The Canadian Pacific Railway liner Alberta cleared on Friday for Owen Sound, right in the face of the gale. There are fifteen big American vessels under shelter at Battle Island, bound down. The Athabasca is one of the vessels delayde in arriving here.

To Form a Republic

Ottawa, Nov. 18.—The Skagway despatch reporting an alleged plot to form a Canadian Yukon Republic, overpower Yukon police and upset Dominion authority is regarded on Parliament hill as another production of irresponsible imagination. A year ago a somewhat similar fake was sprung on the continent from the same quarter. Col. Fred White of the Northwest Mounted Police Department, who is in close and constant touch with those who would be aware (if any one) of such a movement among the alien population, says he is satisfied there is now a shadow of formation in the yarn.

ADMISSION OF TROPHY.

With reference to the New York despatch stating that a Customs difficulty had arisen as to the admission of the Palma trophy into Canada, enquiries made this morning show there is some mistake on the subject. No communication whatever has been received by the Department here of the character mentioned in the despatch. Article 473 of the Tariff Act, provides for free admission of cups, coins, medals, or other prizes won in open competition, and no question has been raised as to the Palma trophy.

San Francisco, Nov. 18.—A despatch to The Call from Skagway, Alaska, speaks of the discovery of what is alleged to have been a huge conspiracy existing in Dawson and ramifying to Skagway, Victoria, Vancouver and Seattle, for the overthrow of the local government of the Yukon Territory and the establishment of a republic, with Dawson as its capital. According to the details of the story, arms, ammunition and provisions have been taken in over the railroad and cached at strategic points. Prominent American residents of Skagway are said to be leaders in the conspiracy. Miners to the number of 5,000 are said to await the summons to arms, ready to fight for the independence from Dominion rule of the gold fields, camps and towns. The plan is to overpower the mounted police, arrest the civil authorities and take the government into their own hands. The rigors of the Arctic winters would give the insurgents six months' immunity from attack by Canadian or British troops. It is also stated that a hurried conference in the matter was held at Skagway November 5.

THE AUSTRALIAN FLAG

Contains a Six-Pointed Star Emblematic of the Six States.

Melbourne, Nov. 18.—The judges appointed by the government of the Australian Commonwealth have made their selection from the 30,000 designs submitted in the recent competition open to Australian artists and others. The flag decided upon has the Union Jack in the top left-hand corner, with a six-pointed star immediately beneath it, emblematic of the six federated states, while the other half of the flag is devoted to depicting the southern cross. The government and official color is to be blue, while the mercantile marine of the new commonwealth will fly the flag with a red ground. The approved design was submitted by several competitors.

Plan a Prodigious Tunnel

St. Petersburg, Russia, Nov. 19.—A bold, remarkable project is receiving attention among Russian engineers. It is proposed to construct a tunnel under the main chain of the Caucasus mountains from a point forty miles south of Vladikavkas.

The tunnel will be twenty-three miles long and cost $75,000,000. As soon as the Trans-Siberian railway is finished, it is believed, this Caucasian tunnel, which has the warm support of the czar, will be commenced. From a military and commercial point of view the work will be of vast importance, as the only direct communication with trans Caucasia from southern Russia is by an ordinary road from Vladikavkas to Tiflis.

STOLE DIAMONDS WORTH $10,000.

Thief in Portland, Oregon, Also Got off with $200 Gold

OPENED A BROKER'S TRUNK

Mr. Lowenthal, of New York, Left the Property in His Room—Janitor's Pass Keys Missing

Portland, Ore., Nov. 18.—E. F. Lowenthal, a diamond broker of New York, arrived here Saturday morning and registered at the Portland Hotel. He was assigned a room on the ground floor of the hotel, and placed a trunk containing diamonds valued at $10,000 and $200 in gold in the room. Mr. Lowenthal states that he left the hotel between 9 and 10 o'clock last evening, and that when he returned he found his trunk broken, open and the diamonds and cash missing. Detectives were immediately summoned, and from hasty examination of the premises arrived at the following conclusion:

"A janitor of the hotel had a bunch of passkeys in the pocket of a pair of trousers which were hanging in a closet in the basement. This bunch of keys is missing, and the theory is that the thief, who was evidently well posted as to the basement storey of the hotel, secured these keys and thus effected an entrance to Mr. Lowenthal's room. It is supposed that the robber, after securing his plunder, made his way through a folding door to the basement and, placing a ladder against the wall of the hotel court on Seventh street, made good his escape.

STIKERS ARE HANDLING FIRE ARMS

Serious Turn of Labor Troubles in Kentucky

STATE TROOPS ORDERED OUT

Attorney General Declares He is Determined That Lawlessness Shall be Suppressed

Madisonville, Ky., Nov. 18.—Two companies of state troops have been ordered out in connection with the labor troubles. The Madisonville company is doing patrol duty in the outskirts of the city, and the Hopkinsville company of the Kentucky State Guard reached here last night. Adjutant-General Murray issued a statement in which he declares that lawlessness shall be suppressed. A detail of twenty men has started for the Providence mine. As the train last night having the troops aboard passed the Nortonville camp, located in the woods near the railroad, camp fires could be observed, and the scene was one of bustle. Several shots were fired, but not at the train. At the Madisonville camp the strikers are astir. The searchlight recently placed on top of a coal tipple near Madisonville was thrown on the camp. About 150 men were there, handling their arms and walking about between their tents.

WORLD'S GREATEST ELECTRIC DYNAMOS

Generators Which Will Have a Capacity of 10,000 Horse Power

THE LARGEST EVER DESIGNED

The Ultimate Output at Niagara Falls Will Be Three Hundred and Ten Thousand Horse Power.

Niagara Falls, Nov. 19.—The electrical and scientific world was somewhat startled a few years ago when the International Niagara Commission, sitting in London, Eng. adopted generators of 5000 horse power capacity for the at that time proposed development of Niagara power. Such mammoth generators had never been manufactured. In fact their size was a great leap forward, and many wondered what the result would be. Turbines of the same wonderful capacity were adopted for the wonderful installation and it was apparent to all thatt he development of Niagara power was to go forward on truly startling lines. Several years have passed since then, and the installation then projected and adopted has been placed in operation with grand success. In the central station of the Niagara Falls Power Company there are now in operation 10 huge generators each 5000 horse power capacity, making the total output capacity of the station 50,000 horse power. These mammoth generators are unequalled in the world. They are the greatest power producers ever built by man. Five thousand horse power is a tremendous amount of force for any single machine to develop. It is more than many cities have at their command. It represents the combined energies of an army of men, but even with all this to their credit, they are but of half the capacity of the generators that are to be installed in the new power house of the Canadian Niagara Power Company. As remarkable as it may seem, it is a fact that the Canadian Niagara Power Company has accepted plans for generators of 10,000 horse power capacity, and it is this size generator that will be placed in the new power house at Canadian Niagara. In approving generators of this tremendous output capacity, the Canadian Niagara Power Company followed the recommendations of Mr. Buck, electrical director, and the big electrical companies are now figuring on their construction.

It seems incredible that the generators of 5000 horse power capacity now in the station of the Niagara Falls Power Company have not yet ceased to be world-wonders, but still generators of double their capacity are about to be built. Those who viewed the glorious illumination of the Pan-American exposition and witnessed the many applications of electricity about the grounds possibly learned that the exposition company got 5000 horse power from Niagara Falls. This was the product of one of the generators in the big power house. The New 10,000 horse power generators will have an individual capacity sufficient to supply two expositions like the Pan-American.

When the Niagara tunnel was built it was designed to develop 120,000-horse power by the use of units of 5000-horse power. In the present station there is 50,000 developed horse power, and in station No. 2 of the Niagara Falls Power Company, there will be 55,000-horse power, making a total of 105,000-horse power. This does not quite exhaust the capacity of the tunnel as a tail race in carrying off the waters from the turbines, which is the only service the tunnel performs, it being in fact a big sewer. The Niagara Falls Power Company has a franchise for a second great tunnel under the city of Niagara Falls, but if the capacity of generators is to be increased with such wonderful bounds as from 5000 to 10,000-horse power, and the turbines that operate them do not use water to any greater extent, it is evident that the installation of 10,000-horse power generators in the stations of the Niagara Falls Power Company, in place of the 5000-horse power generators, would serve to double the output capacity of the stations, making it 210,000-horse power in place of 105,000-horse power.

Then added to this will be the output capacity of the new station of the Canadian Niagara Power Company, where the initial development projected is 100,000-horse power, to be increased as demand makes it necessary. The three stations, two of the Niagara Falls Power Company, and one of the Canadian Niagara Power Company, have cable connections so that when in operation under the above basis they would have a total output capacity of 310,000-horse power. This is such a stupendous amount of force that the human mind could not but be astonished at what could be accomplished by its application.

WIRELESS TELEGRAPHY

There are men now living to whom the early developments of the Morse telegraph were as wonderful as a story from the "Arabian Nights." As the electric telegraph gradually became part of the warp and woof of our civilization this attitude of wonder and amazement was replaced by complacent satisfaction in the triumphs of science.

Probably a similar experience is ahead of the development of wireless telegraphy. He might be a rash prophet who would say that a generation hence men will converse thousands of miles apart without connecting aids other than those mysterious atmospheric wave currents that are now being harnessed to man's bidding.

Yet it will be no more stranger or more marvelous developments for men to talk on different continents with the aid of the wireless telegraph a few decades hence than have been the development of electric telegraphs and the modern long distance telephone from their crude beginnings.

On a recent trial trip of one of the Atlantic liners messages were exchanged by means of the Marconi wireless telegraphy system with a sister vessel of the same line 170 miles away. These messages were sent and received at intervals during a period of eight hours, or while the ships were within the radius mentioned.

On this same ocean trip some of the passengers sent messages to absent ones at home while in mid-ocean. Ten years ago such a feat of telegraphy without wires would have been considered the vagrant dream of an unbalanced enthusiast.

Science is exact and one accomplished step leads to another. It is now a regular procedure for incoming vessels, after a trip across the Atlantic to announce their arrival and safety by wireless telegraphy twenty-four hours before they make port. Even with the present stage of development it would be possible to send continuous messages between distant ports by means of relay lightships. It is possible that future experiments will result in lengthening the distance at which the atmospheric wave currents can be set in continuous motion and recorded.

At present the scientific enthusiasts are justified in their claim that the wireless telegraph is one of the greatest triumphs of the age.

A Race With a Tiger.

A RACE for life on a bicycle from a man-eating tiger sounds more like a passage from a novel of adventure than it does like an actual event. Yet Monsieur H. Reany, the noted French author, traveler and sportsman, claims to have taken part in just such a race in the Malay Peninsula. He says:

A bicycle gleaming under a shed caught my eye that first morning at Nieuwenhuys plantation. I could not resist the temptation—I had not ridden since leaving France. So I sped along among the rice and coffee-fields for about six miles, until I found myself in the heart of a forest.

While I was enjoying the beauty of the place there was a crunching of branches, and I became conscious that something massive but light-footed was approaching. Thirty yards from where I sat a tiger had issued from the jungle.

I dared not move a finger. To reach my bicycle I must get to the road. This was impossible without attracting the attention of the brute, and in two leaps he would be upon me.

With extreme nonchalance the tiger at length turned toward the depths of the forest. I could bear it no longer. I tore from my hiding-place, clambered over intervening obstacles, caught the bicycle, and ran alongside, my hands on the handlebar.

In a flash, as I was mounting, I caught sight of the great body crouching for the leap. I heard the tiger at the first bound land not far behind me. In the minute space between the first and second bound I got myself well started and balanced for the struggle.

His fourth bound brought the tiger very near. The next time I felt the wind of his fall. A second later his shoulder or paw touched the tire and made me swerve.

What I no longer feared or even thought of now happened—I lost one pedal, then both. I regained them with some trouble, but on account of the delay a claw once more grazed my rear tire.

At this instant we came to a very narrow bridge—two boards side by side over an irrigation canal. The wheels went over it true as an arrow. The passage must have slightly retarded the awful thing behind me, for although I dared not look behind I felt him to be farther off.

We were now between two fields of bananas. A small tree had been cut and thrown on the road so that it completely barred the way. There was nothing to do but try to go over at top speed. I sailed right in furiously, and although nearly thrown over, I succeeded in recovering my balance—went on, on, reached a smart decline, and rolled down like a cannon-ball. At a turning of the road the plantation buildings came in view.

I cannot say when the tiger abandoned the race. But when I shot amid the group of my friends, fell and scrambled to my feet, completely out of breath and my eyes bulging out, my first instinct was to look around in the expectation of finding the brute at my heels, ready to slay us all.

For a week afterward I ran that race again in day-dreams and awful nightmares; and every time I passed in front of my mirror I saw myself as haggard as a lunatic.

Topsy-turvy.

That's a favorite attitude of the small boy. And in this again "the child is the father of the man." The man does not essay to walk through life on his hands, but he creates for himself a kingdom of topsy-turvydom. He turns night into day. He eats regardless of time and physical necessities. He makes a pleasure of his business and a business of his pleasure. In fact, he effectually reverses the order of natural living. The result is physical disability generally introduced by "weak" stomach. The food he eats does not nourish him because the stomach and its associated organs are not able to extract the nourishment from the food. Hence, the body is under nourished and disease develops in one form or another.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It cures through the stomach diseases which originate in a diseased condition of the stomach and its allied organs. Hence, it cures "weak" lungs, "weak" heart, "weak" nerves and other forms of so-called weakness.

"I had been troubled with catarrh of the stomach and heart trouble," writes Mr. W. D. Merchant, of Tylersburg, Clarion Co., Penn'a. "Had doctored for some time without relief, then I began to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I took seven bottles. Before I began to take it I weighed 119 pounds, and now I weigh 176. I am working steadily and feel like a well man. I send you many thanks."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation.

A Few Pointers That Advertisers Would Do Well to Remember.

Josh Billings: "I luv a rooster for two things—one is the crow that is in him and the other is the spurs that air on him to bak up his craw with."

The Times has become a popular paper, not only amongst the people of the town and Ashburnham, but also amongst the residents of the surrounding towns and villages.

Mr. G. B. Hilliard, of Lakefield, says the Times is regarded in Lakefield as the brightest paper that comes to that burg, and is read by very many in the village.

Wm. O'Brien, the genial clerk of Douro, who has long been a subscriber to the daily edition, says that the Times is the popular paper in that township, 75 per cent. of the people being readers. He hopes that it may long keep up its onward pace.

Mr. Wm. Gallon, Reeve of Burleigh and Anstruther, states that the whole back country reads the Times, and regard the paper as one of the very best. He says that it is always full of good things.

Mr. P. P. Young, Young's Point, says everybody reads the Times in that locality. It is admirably conducted.

Mr. James Stevenson, ex-M. P., says the Times is the brightest and best newspaper published in Peterborough.

Commodore Calcutt says he would sooner miss his breakfast than miss getting the Times. It is a famous appetizer only equalled by Calcutt's celebrated ale.

Mr. J. M. Thornton, Omemee, says the Times is very popular in that village and is widely read.

Hon. Mr. Bastedo thinks the Times deserves great credit for its progressive spirit. It is up-to-date, giving all the news up to four o'clock each morning. North Smith, brought us in a couple of Recently Mr. Sage and another of clubs for the Weekly Times of 10 names. Here are 10 names from one section of Smith, that are constant readers of the Times.

Mr. Harry Garbutt, Reeve of Smith, says that the Times is the popular paper in that locality.

Mr. James Baptie, Springville, gives similar evidence, and says you can hardly go into a house in his locality that the Times is not present.

Mr. Pearson, the great horse buyer, of Montreal, told the Times the other day that he has better results from the advertisement in the Times than from any other paper. He says he finds the Times is read by almost everybody in the district. He knows this, for almost every horse he buys is the product of the Times advertisement.

Mr. T. Donaldson, Cavan, member of the Counties' Council of Northumberland and Durham, says that the Times is very popular in Cavan.

Mr. James Chambers, Manvers, bears similar testimony in regard to Manvers Township.

David Healy says that in Asphodel, Hastings and Norwood, everybody literally reads the Times.

Dr. Bingham, the popular city Medical Health Officer, missed his Times the other morning, and came to the office for a copy. He said he was not feeling well, and wondered what was the matter, until he remembered he had not had his Times.

The above are a few of the many evidences we have in our possession of the high regard in which this great family journal is held by the people. Merchants and other advertisers should remember that hundreds upon hundreds of families throughout the town and country cannot be reached by any other such means through the Times.

"MATT."

A TALE OF A CARAVAN

a weasel's long-coat. More's coming if the wind don't come up from the norrard. The moon's full to-night and to-morrow. I'll tell the old 'un and keep a sharp lookout off the Caldron Point."

Matt rowed on steadily until they came within a quarter of a mile of the shore, when William Jones stood up again and reconnoitered the prospect inland.

"Pull in, Matt!" he said, after a minute. "All's square!"

Soon afterward the boat reached the rocks. William Jones sprang out and, running up to the platform above, took another survey. This being satisfactory he ran down again and lifted the box out of the boat, carrying it with ease under one arm.

"Make the boat fast," he said, in a husky whisper, "and bring them bits o' wood along with you for the fire. I'll out on to the cottage with this here. It ain't much, but it's summat; so I'll carry it clean out o' sight before them precious coast-guards come smelling about."

With these words he clambered up the rocks with his burden, leaving Matt to follow leisurely in his wake.

CHAPTER V.

Concludes With A Kiss.

Not far from the spot where William Jones had landed, and removed some little distance from the deserted village, with its desolate main street and roofless habitations, there stood a low, one-storied cottage, quite as black and forbidding-looking as any of the abandoned dwellings in its vicinity. Over the door was placed, like a sign, the wooden figure-head of a young woman, naked to the waist, holding a mirror in her hand and regarding herself with remarkable complacency, despite the fact that accident had deprived her of a nose and one eye, and that the beautiful red complexion and jet black hair she had once possessed had been entirely washed away by the action of the elements, leaving her all over of a leperous pallor. The rest of the building, as I have suggested, was of sinister blackness, though here and there it was sprinkled with wet sea-sand.

To this cottage William Jones ran with his treasure-trove, and, entering in without ceremony, found himself in almost total darkness; for the light which crept through the blackened panes of the small window was only just sufficient to make darkness visible. But this worthy seaside character, having in addition to a cat's predatory instincts, something of a cat's power of vision, clearly discerned everything in the chamber he just entered—a rude, stone-paved kitchen, with an open fireplace and no grate, black rafters overhead, from which suspended sundry lean pieces of bacon, a couple of wooden chairs, a table, and, in one corner, a sort of bed in the wall, where a human figure was reposing. Setting down the trunk on the floor he marched right over to the bed, and unceremoniously shook the individual lying upon it, whom he discovered to be a man, muttering in a heavy sleep. Finding that he did not wake with shaking William Jones bent down and cried lustily in his ear:

"Wreck! wreck ashore!"

The effect was instantaneous. The figure rose up in bed, disclosing the head and shoulders of a very old man, who wore a red cotton nightcap, and whose hair and beard were as white as snow.

"Eh! Where? Where?" he cried, in a shrill treble, looking vacantly around him.

"Wake up, old 'un!" said William, seizing him and shaking him again. "It's me, William Jones."

"William! is it my son William?" returned the old man, peering out into the darkness.

"Yes, father. Look ye now, you was a-talking again in your sleep, you was. A good thing no one heard you but your son William. Some o' these days you'll be letting summat out, you will, if you go on like this."

The old man shook his head feebly, then, clasping his hands together in a kind of rapture, he looked at his son and said:

"Yes, William, I was a-dreaming. Oh, it was such a heavingly dream! I was a-standing on the shore, William, and it was a-blowing hard from the east, and all at once I see a ship as big as an Indiaman, come in wi' all sail set, and go ashore; and I looked round, William dear, and there was no one nigh but you and me; and, when she broke up, I see gold and silver and jewels come washing ashore just like floating weeds, and the drownded, every one of 'em, had rings on their fingers, and gold watches and cheens, and, more'n that, that their hands were full of shining gold; and one on 'em—a lady, William — had a bright diamond ring, as big as a walnut; but when I tried to pull it off, it wouldn't come; and just as I pulled out my knife to cut the finger off, and put it in my pocket, you shook me, William and woke me up. Oh, it was a heavingly dream!"

William Jones had listened with ill-disguised interest to the early part of this speech, but, on its conclusion, he gave another grunt of undissembled disgust.

"Well, you're awake now, old un; so jump up. I've brought summat home. Look sharp and get a light."

Thereupon the old man, who was fully dressed, in a pair of old woolen trousers and a guernsey, slipped from the bed, and began fumbling about the room. He soon found what he wanted—a box of matches and a rude, home-made candle, fashioned of a long, coarse reed dipped in sheep's tallow; but, owing to the fact that he was exceedingly feeble and tremulous, he was so long in lighting up, that his gentle son grew impatient.

"Here, give 'un to me!" said William. "You're wasting them matches just as if they cost nowt. A precious father you are, and no mistake."

The candle being lighted and burning with a feeble flame, he informed the old man of what he had found. In a moment the latter was down on his knees, opening the box, and greedily examining its contents. But William pushed him impatiently away and closed the lid with a bang.

"There, enough o' that, old 'un! You hold the light while I carry the box in and put it away."

"All right, William dear—all right," returned the old man, obeying gleefully. "I know'd we should have luck, by that beautiful dream."

The two men— one holding the light and the other carrying the trunk— passed through a door at the back of the kitchen and entered an inner chamber. This chamber, too, contained a window, which was so blocked up, however, by lumber of all kinds that little or no daylight entered. Piled up in great confusion were old sacks, some partly full, some empty, coils of rope, broken oars, broken fragments of ships' planks, rotten and barnacled, a small boat's rudder, dirty sails, several oilskin coats, bits of iron ballast, and other flotsam and jetsam. But in one corner of the room was a small wooden bed, with a mattress and coarse bed-clothing, and hanging on a nail close to it was certain feminine attire which the owner of the Caravan would have recognised as the garb worn by Matt on morning of her first appearance.

Placing the box down, William Jones carefully covered it with a portion of an old sail.

"It's summat. But it ain't much," he muttered, discontentedly. "Lucky them coast-guards didn't see me come ashore. If they did, though it wouldn't signify; for what's floating on the sea belongs to him as finds it."

A sound startled him as he spoke, and, looking round suspiciously, he saw Matt entering the room, loaded with broken wood. But she was not alone; standing behind her in the shadow was a man— none other, indeed than Monk, of Monkshurst.

While Matt entered the room to throw down her load of wood, Monk stood in the doorway. His quick eye had noted the movements of father and son.

"More plunder, William Jones?" he asked, grimly.

In a moment William Jones was transformed. The keen expression of his face changed to one of mingled stupidity and sadness; he began to whine.

"More plunder, Mr. Monk!" he said. "No, no; the days for finding that are gone. Matt and me has been on the shore foraging for a bit o' firewood—that be all. Put it down, Matt, put it down."

Matt did as she was told; opening her arms, she threw her load into a corner of the room; then William Jones hurried the whole party back into the kitchen.

The men seated themselves on benches; but Matt moved about the room to get a light. The light as well as everything else, was a living illustration of the meanness of William Jones. It consisted, not of a candle, but of a long rush, which had been gathered from the marshes by Matt, and afterward dried and dipped in grease by William Jones. Matt lighted it and fixed it in a little iron niche which was evidently made for the purpose, and which was attached to a table near the hearth. When the work was finished, she threw off her hat and jacket, retired to the further end of the hearth, and sat down on the floor.

During the whole of this time Mr. Monk had been watching her gloomily; and he had been watched in his turn by William Jones. At last the latter spoke:

"Matt's growed," said he; "she's growed wonderful. Lord bless us! she's a bit changed sin' that night when you found her down on the shore. Why, her own friends wouldn't know her!"

Mr. Monk started and frowned.

"Her friends!" he said — "what friends?"

"Why, them as owns her," continued William Jones. "If they wasn't all drowned in the ship what she come ashore from, they must be somewheer. Mayhap some day they'll find her, and reward me for bringin' her up a good gal— that's what I allus tell her."

"So that's what you always tell her, do you?" returned Monk, grimly. "Then you're a fool for your pains. The girl's got no friends— haven't I told you that before?"

"Certainly you have, Mr. Monk," returned William Jones, meekly; "but look ye now, I think—"

"You've no right to think," thundered Monk; "you're not paid for thinking; you're paid for keeping the girl, and what more do you want? Matt," he continued, in a softer tone, "come to me."

"Where have you been to-day," he said, "to have on that frock?"

"I put it on to be took!"

"To be took?" repeated Monk.

"Yes," returned Matt; "to have my likeness took. There be a painter chap here that lives in a cart; he's took it."

It was curious to note the change in Mr. Monk's face. At first he tried to appear amiable; then his face gradually darkened into a look of angry suspicion. Matt never once withdrew her eyes from him — his very presence seemed to arouse all that was bad in her; and she glared at him through her tangled locks in much the same manner as a shaggy terrier puppy might gaze at a bull which it would fain attack, but fearful on account of its superior strength.

"Matt," said Mr. Monk again, "come here."

This time she obeyed; she rose slowly from her seat and went reluctantly to his side.

"Matt, look me in the face," he said. "Do you know who this painter is?"

Matt shook her head.

"How many times have you seen him?"

"Twice."

"And what has he said to you?"

"A lot o' things."

"Tell me one thing."

"He asked me who my mother was, and I told him I hadn't got none."

Mr. Monk's face once more grew black as night.

"So," he said, "poking and prying and asking questions. I thought as much. He's a scoundrelly vagabond!"

"No, he ain't," said Matt, bluntly.

"Matt, my girl," said Mr. Monk, taking no notice of her interruption, "I want you to promise me something."

"What is it?"

"Not to go near that painter again!"

Matt shook her head.

"Shan't promise," she said, "'cause I shall go. My likeness ain't took yet— he takes a time, he does. I'm going to put them things on to-morrow and be took again."

For a moment the light in his eyes looked dangerous, then he smiled and patted her cheek— at which caress she shrunk away.

"What's the matter?" he asked.

"Nothing," said Matt. "I don't like to be pulled about, that's all."

"You mean you don't like me?"

"Don't know. That's telling."

"And yet you've no cause to hate me, Matt, for I've been a good friend to you— and always shall, because I

Put Everything in the Contract

Lindsay Post: A very interesting case was argued yesterday before His Honor Judge Harding at the Court House. It will be remembered that the 57th Regimental band of Peterborough ran an excursion from that town to Sturgeon Point in August last, the Str. Crandella being engaged to convey the excursionists from Lindsay to the Point. The crowd was so large that the above steamer was unable to accommodate them, and about 150 passengers were obliged to board the Str. Esturion in order to reach their destination. Mr. Jas. Crowe, manager, on behalf of the band, entered an action against Capt. Crandell, claiming $31, the amount paid to the Trent Valley Navigation Co. It appears that a written contract was made, but in it there was no provision for passengers seeking other boats provided the Crandella was unable to carry them. It was pointed out by Mr. Stewart, who defended Crandell, that he had suggested engaging a barge also, at a further cost of $13, but it was not included in the contract, and he could not see how the band could claim the amount when they had failed to have a proper agreement drawn up. Mr. A. P. Poussette appeared on behalf of the Peterborough boys, and put up a strong fight for his clients. His Honor reserved his decision.

THE DEAF HEAR

No 201 of "The Health World" of 709 Eighth Avenue, New York, contains a description of a Remarkable Cure for Deafness and Head Noises which may be carried out at the patient's home, and which is said to be a certain cure. This number will be sent free to any deaf person sending their address to the Editor.

Sealed tenders, addressed to the undersigned and endorsed "Tender for Alberni-Clayoquot Telegraph," will be received at this office until Tuesday, Dec. 3rd, inclusively, for the supply of telegraph poles for a line from the telegraph office at Alberni, in the County of Vancouver, Province of British Columbia, along the route described, to Clayoquot, a total distance of twenty-five miles, more or less; also for the construction of the above line of telegraph in accordance with the specification.

Contractors are notified that tenders will not be considered unless made on the printed form supplied, and signed with their actual signatures.

An accepted cheque on a chartered bank payable to the order of the Minister of Public Works, equal to ten per cent. of the amount of the tender, must accompany each tender. The cheque will be forfeited if the party decline the contract or fail to complete the work contracted for, and will be returned in case of non-acceptance of tender.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

By order,
FRED. GELINAS,
Secretary.

A MARVELLOUS MEDICINE

"No Cure, No Pay," is the Newest Proposal of the Proprietors of Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—We make the following proposal to the readers of the Times: To any one who is a subject of rheumatism (no matter how long standing) or any blood disease, as enumerated below, and will give Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills a fair trial and do not find a perfect cure we will refund the money paid for the pills. If no substantial improvement is observed, we will in addition, pay $10 in cash on satisfactory evidence being supplied us to this affect.

We have yet to know of a single case where these wonderful pills have not been almost entirely successful in effecting a cure. CANADA CHEMICAL CO.

Ex-Ald. Bailey, St. John's, writes: I cannot speak too highly of Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills. They worked a miracle in my case, and cured me after many years of suffering. I do not think their equal is to be obtained.

Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills are a positive and certain cure for la grippe, rheumatism, asthma, paralysis, catarrh, eczema, coughs, backache, indigestion, all stomach and liver troubles, female complaints, even when the diseases having been standing for many years, the most stubborn cases will yield. Price 50 cents per box. For sale by Ormond & Walsh. The Canada Chemical Company will forfeit $10 for any case that these pills do not help.

Dr. Clarke's Sure Cure for Catarrh, and Dr. Clarke's Sure Cure for Eczema same price. $10 will be paid for any case they will not permanently cure.

CHAINED FOR TEN YEARS
HAY FEVER
ASTHMA
EVERY BRINGS RELIEF.

There is nothing like Asthmalene. It brings instant relief, even in the worst cases. It cures when all else fails.

The Rev. C. F. WELLS, of Villa Ridge, Ill., says: "Your trial bottle of Asthmalene received in good condition. I cannot tell you how thankful I feel for the good derived from it. I was a slave, chained with putrid sore throat and Asthma for ten years. I despaired of ever being cured. I saw your advertisement for the cure of this dreadful and tormenting disease, Asthma, and thought you had overspoken yourselves, but resolved to give it a trial. To my astonishment, the trial acted like a charm. Send me a full-size bottle."

REV. DR. MORRIS WECHSLER
Rabbi of the Cong. Bnai Israel.
NEW YORK, Jan. 3, 1901.

DRS. TAFT BROS.' MEDICINE CO.

Gentlemen: Your Asthmalene is an excellent remedy for Asthma and Hay Fever, and its composition alleviates all troubles which combine with asthma. Its success is astonishing and wonderful.

After having it carefully analyzed, we can state that Asthmalene contains no opium, morphine, chloroform or ether. Very truly yours,
REV. DR. MORRIS WECHSLER.

AVON SPRINGS, N. Y., Feb. 1, 1901.

DR. TAFT BROS. MEDICINE CO.

Gentlemen: I write this testimonial from a sense of duty, having tested the wonderful effect of your Asthmalene, for the cure of Asthma. My wife has been afflicted with spasmodic asthma for the past 12 years. Having exhausted my own skill as well as many others, I chanced to see your sign upon your windows at 130th street, New York. I at once obtained a bottle of Asthmalene. My wife commenced taking it about the 1st of November. I very soon noticed a radical improvement. After using one bottle her asthma has disappeared and she is entirely free from all symptoms. I feel that I can consistently recommend the medicine to all who are afflicted with this distressing disease. Yours respectfully,
O. D. PHELPS, M. D.

DR. TAFT BROS. MEDICINE CO.

Gentlemen: I was troubled with Asthma for 22 years. I have tried numerous remedies but they have all failed. I ran across your advertisement and started with a trial bottle. I found relief at once. I have since purchased your full-size bottle and I am ever grateful. I have a family of four children and for six years was unable to work. I am now in the best of health and am doing business every day. This testimony you can make such use of as you see fit.

Permanent Cures of Cancer

We here give a few cases, where the efficacy of our Constitutional treatment in curing Cancer, is established beyond all question. We have plenty on fyle.

There is ample proof that where our remedy cures, it cures to stay and saves people from the torture of knife and plaster.

CANCER OF THE BREAST—A lady had Cancer of the breast, which rendered her right shoulder and arm almost helpless. Our remedy cured her over five years ago, and there is not the slightest return of the trouble.

CANCER OF THE FACE—This case of a gentleman who was so bad that his right cheek was almost eaten off with the disease, plasters aggrivated his trouble. Our treatment cured him five years ago and he has been all right since.

CANCER OF THE STOMACH—Doctors pronounced the trouble cancer of the stomach. There was vomiting of material that looked like Coffee grounds, Great weakness and prostration. Cured over four years ago and well to-day.

CANCER OF THE NOSE—A severe case which was cured by our remedy in 1891 and has never returned to this day.

Full accounts of the above cases, together with the names and addresses of the persons, are given in our new book, "Cancer, Its Cause and Cure," sent to anyone, in plain wrapper on receipt of 2 stamps. Stott & Jury, Bowmanville, Ont.

NOTE.—The Times requests its readers to contribute items of news to its columns. Anything that is phoned or sent in writing to the office, of a nature suitable for publication, will be received and published.—Ed Times.)

—The Rugby dance takes place on the 29th.

—The recruit class of the 57th will meet this evening.

—St. Luke's tea will be held on Wednesday, November 20th.

—A new storehouse has been built at the locks by the Government.

—The concert and handkerchief sale will take place in the Y.M.C.A. to-day.

—Dr. Brereton, Bethany, pumped a snake some four inches long out of an Emily boy's stomach.

—Mr. Joseph Mitchell has added three modern chairs to his well-equipped tonsorial establishment.

—The Charlotte street League held its regular meeting last night. The subject was "Prayer," discussed by Miss L. Thomas.

—The Times Bookstore has just opened out a case of magnificent wedding stationery—the very latest thing. "At Home" invitations also received, of the latest design.

—The Royal chorus is being photographed at Whitten's. The photo will be a valuable souvenir to remember when the Royal chorus sang before the future King and Queen of England.

—A few days ago a young and verdant-looking stranger entered one of the Peterborough banks, and presented a check for payment. "What denomination?" the teller asked, as he prepared to count out the money. "Wal," he replied, "I am a Methodist now, but my family's all Baptists." He had evidently never heard the word denomination used in any connection other than religious.

Dogs and Cows.—The Belleville Intelligencer says: "Judge Barron, of Stratford, has warned people that if they allow a dog to run loose which has a habit of running at passing horses, and a runaway takes place, which results in a fatality, the owners of the canine are liable to prosecution for manslaughter. If the owner purposely turns a dog loose to frighten people, and death results, he is liable to a charge of murder." And Chief Justice Armour said, some years ago, from his place on the Bench, that if a cow on a railway track caused an accident to a train, the owner of the cow was responsible for all damages; meaning, of course, if the cow had been wilfully allowed to run at large and the railroad company had not violated any of the requirements of the law. The owners of useless dogs and useful cows will therefore, be wise if they bear the above legal opinions in mind and govern themselves accordingly.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Events Under This Head Transpiring in and Around Peterborough.

NOTE.—The Times requests its readers to furnish this paper with items of a personal and social nature either by phone or in writing.—Ed Times.

—Hon. Geo. A. Cox was in town yesterday attending the funeral of the late James McClellan.

—The many friends of Ald. Sawers will be pleased to learn that his condition is improving.

Port Hope Guide; Rev. Joseph Kilgour, Peterborough, was in town to-day. He is to preach anniversary sermons to-morrow at Zion. The old gentleman will have a crowded house to hear him, as he is very popular on the Welcome Circuit.

A Local Observatory

Mr. Kendry's suggestion, made in the Times of yesterday, that steps be taken to secure a telescope for the use of the pupils of the Collegiate Institute, as well as others who take an interest in astronomy, seems to have struck the right cord. Several prominent citizens told the Times yesterday that they would be pleased to contribute to a fund for the purpose of purchasing an instrument.

Mr. James Stevenson, has, however, taken this matter up, and hopes to procure a telescope without cost, It would be unwise to publish full particulars at present, there is however, a good prospect of getting a very fine instrument for the Institute.

An Irish Hemorrhage

Our genial friend Mr. Jim Dolan usually takes a constitutional short walk each morning, and not long since noticed that the upper parts of the telephone poles in the south end were being decorated with coats of livid green paint.

One morning as he was passing one of the poles an Irishman seated on top carelessly let drop a can of the green paint.

It struck the sidewalk and was liberally spattered about; none of it, however, by exceeding good luck, besmirched the immaculate trousers of Mr. Dolan.

A moment later another Irishman appeared on the scene, and noticing the green paint spilled all over the sidewalk looked up and anxiously inquired of his comrade aloft:

"Doherty, Doherty, hav' ye had a hemorhage?"

Prof. O'Brien's Visit

We call the special attention of our readers to the advertisement of Prof. O'Brien, without doubt Canada's greatest phrenologist and palmist. Prof. O'Brien comes well recommended by the press of Toronto and elsewhere. His methods are approved of by Judge and Jury at Toronto general session, March 14th, 1901. The Globe says. "One of the best known exponents of the science of phrenology in Toronto is Professor E. J. O'Brien, 401 Jarvis street. Mr. O'Brien says he was first guided to a knowledge of his especial fitness for certain studies by the late Professor Fowler, who advised him to attempt artistic wood carving and to study phrenology. Mr. O'Brien considers his success in both these occupations has been enough to justify the claim that by the application of phrenological knowledge the especial fitness of any young man for a particular work in life can be outlined. Mr. O'Brien claims to be the only professor of scientific palmistry in Canada. Feb. 23rd, 1897." Prof. O'Brien will be in Peterborough for a short time only. See advertisement.

How One Million is Spent

Not less than one million dollars is annually spent by people seeking an absolute cure for Catarrh, Bronchitis and Consumption. Numerous are the remedies, but the one standing pre-eminently above all other others is Catarrhozone. It those diseases because it is sure to reach them. Catarrhozone is inhaled into the lungs, throat and nasal passages, and bathes every part of the diseased membrane with its germ-killing, healing vapour. You simply breathe Catarrhozone and it cures. ST. JOHN'S VESTRY MEETING

The Congregation and Wardens Agree to a Separation of All Saint's Church

A meeting of the vestry and congregation of St. John's Church was held in the school house last night to discuss the question of separation of All Saints' Church from St. John's parish. The rector of Peterborough, Rev. J. C. Davidson, explained that in reply to a strongly signed petition from the congregation of All Saints, the Bishop of Toronto had agreed to the separation, providing he received from the wardens of St. John's a written consent thereto. He (the rector), although himself not convinced that such separation would be in the interest of All Saints', rather than oppose the wishes of that congregation, had waved all personal feelings in the matter. The wardens, however, before taking upon themselves so great a responsibility as that of giving their "written consent" to the severance of All Saints' from its mother parish, desired the authorization of St. John's congregation thereto.

A general discussion was here entered into, during the course of which Mr. Harry Long expressed his confidence that the whole congregation of St. John's heartily rejoiced in the prosperity of All Saints' Church, and did not wish to put any obstacle in the way of its further progress. Dr. Boucher moved, seconded by Mr. Walkey, that in the opinion of this vestry the wardens should be asked to give their written consent to the request of All Saints' Church.

The resolution was carried by a standing vote, and the wardens, Messrs. Conway and Bell, acting thereon, will forward to the Bishop their written consent to a separation, which will result in a new Church of England parish being formed, independent of St. John's, and under the jurisdiction of All Saints' Church.

STRONG FOOD

Having the Longest Staying Powers

It is a good thing to know how to select food that will so thoroughly feed and nourish the body that there is no indication of hunger or faintness from one meal to another.

Grape-Nuts Food will carry the user longer, probably than any other food known. A young lady attending business college writes from Atlanta, Ga., saying, "Before I began using Grape-Nuts I got so hungry before the dinner hour that I was faint and almost sick, but since I have Grape-Nuts Food for breakfast I study harder, and wait longer for my dinner without experiencing any of the former trouble.

One great advantage is that it requires no cooking or preparation. I wish everyone knew of the value of Grape-Nuts Food for children in school" I. Parkhurst.

MERCHANTS' ASSOCIATION.

ADDRESS BY MR. E. M. TROWERN OF TORONTO.

Fight to a Finish Against Trading Stamps—Stores Will Not be Kept Open on Christmas Day.

A special meeting of the Peterborough branch of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada was held in the Y.M.C.A. Hall last night.

The occasion fo the meeting was a visit of the General Secretary of the Association, Mr. E. M. Trowern, of Toronto, who delivered a very interesting address to the merchants. Mr. Trowern said that he had been in the retail business for over thirty years and could claim to know something about business. The association began in 1897 in Toronto with a membership of five. It has now over 1,000 members in the city and has made its influence felt in many ways beneficial to traders. In 1899 a convention defiedn the aims and objects of the association, some fo which are to promote clean and good trading and good fellowship among retailers; to secure the co-operation of manufacturers and jobbers so that only legitimate trading shall be done in staple goods; to further regulate transient traders and peddlers; to make it a criminal offence to advertise a lie; to abolish gift schemes; to secure special railway rates for retail merchants such as commercial travellers now enjoy; to secure a fair insolvent act; to have the laws amended so that corporations shall be subject to the same mercantile laws as individuals.

As an instance of what retailers suffered through lack of organization, Mr. Trowern mentioned that in his own trade, jewelry, there were watch movements that cost $23.40 and were sold at retail for $23.45.

In London the law provides that if a man advertises, for instance, "regular price, $12, our price $6" he may be called into the police court to prove that $12 is the regular price.

The speaker gave an account of the successful fight in Toronto to have the departmental stores pay their share of city taxes; also of his own fight against the T. Eaton Co., which he said had not been reported in the newspapers. The company advertised a solid silver set, "worth $12," which they were selling for $6. As a matter of fact the cost price was $3.25. He bought a set and then took the matter into the courts to test their right to so advertise. The Retail Merchants' Association carried the case from court to court until their law costs amounted to $4,000, but they were finally victorious. They wanted the law amended so that such cases could be disposed of by the police courts.

In the matter of trading stamps, the Dominion Trading Company would go to the Privy Council if necessary to test the validity of the law against them, and the Retail Merchants' Association was equally determined to fight to a finish. The trading stamp business, he said, amounted to just this: The Trading Stamp Company collected a percentage from the merchant and gave him nothing in return. They pocketed 90 per cent of this collection, and gave the customer 10 per cent for collecting.

A resolution was adopted to the effect that the Peterborough branch favors the action of the association in upholding the law against trading stamps.

Another resolution favored the adoption of the system of credit reporting and collecting which is in operation in Toronto. Under this system there are two men in each line of trade, who form a board and keep everybody informed about doubtful customers. The names of such are tabulated and each member of the association gets a list. Mr. Trowern instanced a man in Toronto, who, as it appeared by the reports of the tailors, owed every tailor in the association for a suit of clothes, except one who had a suit made up and had not delivered it. He didn't deliver it.

Mr. A. H. Stratton called attention to the fact that Christmas falls on a market day, (Wednesday) and asked with solemnity if it was the intention of the Executive of the Association to get out handbills announcing that the stores would keep open.

Mr. Robert Fair, the President, said that before those King's Birthday hand bills were issued the executive sent messengers to get the views of the merchants and all who were consulted were in favor of keeping open. Stores were kept open in Toronto, Hamilton, Kingston and other places. Christmas Day would not be interfered with, however.

A vote of thanks was tendered to Mr. Trowern and the meeting adjourned.

Taxes

Collector Green has furnished us with the following figures: Amount of taxes taken in last week, $14,976.65; total amount collected up to date, $70,781.46. He also wishes us to announce to those who have statute labor tax and owners of dogs who have not paid their taxes for 1900, that unless settled immediately costs will be incurred.

Are You Aware That

MALT BREAKFAST FOOD

Nourishes the Brain as Well as the Body?

Malt Breakfast Food, owing to the fact that the starch and gluten of the Wheat are changed into forms that are quickly absorbed by the stomach, is the best blood enricher. The enriching and nourishing of the blood builds up all the important nerve centres, and keeps the brain clear and strong. It is for this reason that physicians and food experts recommend Malt Breakfast Food to business and professional men who depend largely on brain work and effort for success in their respective callings.

Malt Breakfast Food is fast becoming the favorite morning dish with all those who are called upon to sharply exercise brain power. Business and professional men will find in Malt Breakfast Food virtues for the production of sustaining energy and strength that oatmeal and other grain foods can never afford. Your Grocer recommends it.

A PARTY ORGAN

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I am pleased to see the Times is taking the lead in all matters of interest to the people. That the days of party papers are numbered, is apparent. The guiding principle of the party organ is to shout for your own side and abuse and misrepresent the other fellows. In other words, the party organ makes no pretense of giving the news in a political campaign. Political capital is what it is after, and its readers search its columns in vain for intelligence of what is going on in the other political camp.

This is why papers like the Times are so popular.

COMMON SENSE.

A SAD ACCIDENT

Seven Year Old Son of Mr. John Deroche Killed

Yesterday a sad accident occurred near the Dickson Company's mill by which a lad named John Deroche, son of Mr. Deroche, an employee of the Rathbun Company, lost his life.

It appears that Mr. W. J. Cox, who lives in Monaghan, just outside the town, was unloading a stick of timber about forty feet in length. He had lowered one end from the truck, and had placed a log under the center, so as to keep it from the ground when he pulled the front wheels out from under the timber. When the stick dropped, it rolled off the log, and fell upon the child, who happened to be standing nearby. Death was instantaneous, the head and arms being frightfully crushed.

The remains were removed to McFadden's undertaking establishment, and Dr. Grey, Coroner, notified. The Doctor did not consider an inquest necessary, and unless it can be shown that carelessness on the part of Mr. Cox was probable, none will be held.

Mr. and Mrs. Deroche, who reside at 495 Bethune street, have the sincere sympathy of the entire community in their sad bereavement.

Unsightly and Foul Diseases Arising from Impure and Poisoned Blood Are Quickly Cured.

PAINES CELERY COMPOUND

Does the Good Work.

A Cured Man Says;

"It Would Mean the Use of Pages to Tell One Half of What Paine's Celery Compound Has Done for Me."

That great and noble genius, Professor Edward E. Phelps, M. D., LL. D., the discoverer of Paine's Celery Compound spent years in perfecting his prescription before he gave it to a world of suffering and disease. Years of severe tests and tens of thousands of precious lives, have all combined to make Paine's Celery Compound the present day popular family medicine.

Paine's Celery Compound has triumphed over numberless cases of foul and deep-seated blood diseases. It effectually cleanses the blood, braces the weak nerves, builds up flesh and a constitution capable of resisting sickness and disease. Mr. A. E. Hammond, Mansonville, P.Q., cured by Paine's Celery Compound, writes thus:

"Some five years ago it was my sad misfortune to be afflicted with scrofula sores, of which I had five on one leg and three on the other. These were running sores for four years. In addition to this I was taken down with rheumatism in the small of my back so badly that I could not get off my bed; and to further intensify my sufferings, I had sick headache in the worst form.

"While in this condition, a friend of mine, Mr. Perkins, a merchant of this place, sold me a bottle of Paine's Celery Compound, with the express understanding that if it did me no good I should pay nothing for it.

"In accepting this offer, I had no idea of ever feeling under any obligation to pay for the Compound, as I had no faith in its doing me good. To my very great surprise, however, I grew better; and by the time I had used three bottles I was as well as ever, and what I never expected to see was realized, viz.: the sores on my legs were entirely healed.

"It would mean the use of pages to tell one half of what Paine's Celery Compound has done for me. This Marvellous cure has been in effect for nearly a year."

SOME POSITIVE PROOFS

What is Being Told of Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills—No Cure No Pay.

Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills cured me of kidney trouble of many years' standing, and after I had tried every other known remedy. Joseph Bagley, Caledonia ave., Rochester, N.Y.

I was afflicted with rheumatism so badly at times that I could not walk. Nothing I took did me much good, until I tried Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills. Fiver boxes cured me entirely.

I had the misfortune to have suffered some years ago from paralysis, sustaining no less than three strokes. I could get nothing to do me any good until I was induced to try Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills. I took nine boxes, and although not by any means well, I think I am in a fair way to recovery. I can now walk with the aid of a stick and feel myself getting better every day. M. F. Mann, Merlin, N.Y.

Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills permanently cured me of backache. I suffered for years, and took two boxes. That is a year ago. I have not had a symptom since. James R. Jackson, Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.

I do not believe there is a medicine to compare with Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills. They cured me of indigestion and catarrh of the stomach, after nine years' suffering. H. S. Macdonald, G.T.R. shops, Montreal.

Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills are a positive and certain cure for la grippe, rheumatism, asthma, paralysis, catarrh, eczema, coughs, backache, indigestion, all stomach and liver troubles, female complaints, even when the diseases have been standing for many years, the most stubborn cases will yield. Price 50 cents per box. For sale by Ormond & Walsh. The Canada Chemical Company will forfeit $10 for any case that these pills do not cure.

A CRISIS IN TURKEY NOW CLOSE AT HAND

Everything Points to War at an Early Date

Will the Eastern Question Bring on a General War is the Question

London, Nov. 19.—The situation in Turkey is steadily growing worse, and everything points to a crisis at no distant date. Indications of the general paralysis are to be found in every direction. In Macedonia, Albania, Armenia, and Yemen anarchy reigns supreme; the relations with most of the Powers can hardly be described as friendly; the State coffers are entirely depleted—in fact, to such an extent that the treasury is unable to pay the State officials and the army one month's salary every three months—and discontent is general among all classes of the population. Corruption in all branches of the administration has attained an unprecedented point, so much so that, although fully conscious of the gravity of the situation, nobody seems to care a straw about it. The Sultan probably is the only man in the Empire who is unaware of the exact state of affairs. The belief so generally held that he is accurately informed of all that is going on in his dominions is certainly incorrect.

Courtiers, ministers high officials, judges, officers, are too busy watching and denouncing each other to think of reporting to their sovereign about the affairs of state. This is no doubt in great part due to the Sultan's peculiar frame of mind, which makes him suspect of disloyalty those of his entourage, even his greatest favorites, who do not indulge in the universal system of espionage. Every high official has his own service for spying his colleagues. At Cabinet councils it is the duty of every minister to watch the others, and address a report to the palace. The result is that nobody cares to report to his Majesty about state affairs, and that consequently he does not learn all that he ought to know. The ambassadors may rest assured that only official communications to the Porte are made known to the Sultan. Ambassadors and ministers frequently address severe remarks to the Minister of Foreign Affairs or the First Secretary of the Palace, thinking that they will be repeated to the Sultan. Neither Tewfik Pasha nor Tahsin Bey take the trouble to inform their master, for fear that they may bear the brunt of the Imperial anger.

Corruption has so completely pervaded governing circles that all sense of honesty, patriotism, and dignity is quite extinct. All officials, high and low, are convinced that the country is doomed, and that their sole preoccupation is to put by enough money to insure their material well-being when the break-up occurs. Much could be expected if the few who love their country, and may be heard in private expressing regret at the state of affairs, were to combine and make an attempt to remedy existing evils. They appear, however to fear that the attempt would be useless, and that its failure would cost them their liberty, and that of their friends, and consequently follow the general example.

The Palace is indignant at France's attitude. The Sultan is reported to have said that it is only natural that France should be mad with rage at the steady decline of her influence and the rise of that of Germany, and that she should be trying to make herself disagreeable; but that he should have thought she would have found some more dignified pretext than the claims of merchants of doubtful origin. The attitude of France is incomprehensible to most people here, and is generally ridiculed. She broke off diplomatic relations, and after threatening to send her fleet and seize Turkish ports, goes on negotiating just as though nothing had occurred.

A month has elapsed since the Austrian Ambassador presented his note about the incidents at Uskub, and no answer has yet been given to it, although the question has been repeatedly discussed at Cabinet councils. The note demanded satisfaction on fourteen points, one of which relates to the removal of the ex-governor of the gendarmery of Uskub. The Ambassador insists that the official journal should state that this officer has been recalled at his demand, and threatens to present an ultimatum unless satisfaction be given on all points. The note denounces the incapacity of the Government and says that Turkish authority has vanished in Macedonia. In the course of a private conversation with the Minister of Foreign Affairs, the Ambassador told him distinctly that, although Austria had hitherto opposed autonomy for Macedonia, his Emperor was now firmly resolved to put it forward at his forthcoming meeting with the Czar, and to support it by all means in his power. On the other hand, M. Zinovieff, the Russian Ambassador, has told Tewfik Pasha that he had not, for some time, told the whole truth to his Emperor about the state of the country, but that, as the Government has done nothing to improve the position, he has been obliged to report everything, and that his Majesty now knows all.

The Turks generally resent the approaching visit of Prince Adalbert of Prussia, who is due here this week on board the schoolship Charlotte. They point out that the treasury, in its present state, cannot afford such luxuries, and that the Kaiser's friendship has not been of sufficient advantage to justify the expenditure which his son's visit will involve.

The financial situation is as bad as it can be. The Government has exhausted its credit, and can no longer obtain advances for the paltriest amount. Efforts are therefore being made to recover the arrears of taxation, which amount to a huge figure, and commission after commission is being formed, both in the capital and provinces, to expedite their collection. This, however, cannot bring much relief to the treasury, and a big foreign loan is imperative, though it is doubtful whether, in the present state of the money markets, such an operation could be carried out, even were the Sultan willing to alienate another of his revenues for the service of the loan.

A BANK ROBBER SHOOTS CASHIER

Desperate Struggle Afterwards with Another Clerk

THE ROBBER SPOOT HIMSELF

Two Dead Bodies Lay Close Together Sensational Tragedy in a London, England Bank

London, Eng., Nov. 19.—A tragedy of a terrible nature took place recently at the Kennington branch of the London and Southwestern Bank. Just before four o'clock, when the bank was on the point of closing, a man, fairly well dressed, of medium height and apparently between thirty and forty years of age, walked in in a leisurely manner and took up a position in front of one of the desks at the center of the counter. Mr. Crawley, the cashier, and the visitor got into conversation near the door of the counter by which the bank officials passed within and without. The lid was raised at the time. Not many seconds elapsed from the moment the conversation opened until a report rang out, and the cashier was seen to fall. The visitor instantly made his way inside the counter and pointed the smoking revolver at the clerks, and told them to hold up their hands; and it seems that two of them obeyed the summons. The third, a young man, named Couche, at once closed with the murderer. He got hold of the hand in which the revolver was clenched, and threw it up towards the ceiling. The man, however, pulled the trigger and a shot went off. In the upward motion the bullet struck Mr. Couche's left cheek, and it tore the skin without, however, entering it, and the shot ultimately lodged in the top of the building.

A desperate struggle followed. In build and strength the men were pretty well matched, the assailant, if anything, being a little taller. The other clerks seem to have gone to raise the alarm. At any rate Mr. Couche was single-handed, but he pluckily held his ground, although the wound he had received, bled copiously. He continued to hold on to the hand which clenched the revolver. Suddenly the struggle ceased and the visitor lay stretched on the floor, while Mr. Couche, utterly exhausted by his great effort, sank down on the nearest chair. The murderer was dead. It is certain that the man was shot, and shot by his own hand and with the bullet he had meant for another. According to the information supplied to the police, when he saw that the struggle was going against him, added to which there was already a murder to his charge, he managed to turn the revolver on

ABYSSINIA'S ARMY AND ITS STRENGTH

Facts About Menelik's Forces Related by British Officers

HOW THE KING RUNS THE ARMY

Hardships Endured During the Expeditions Against the Mad Mullah—Discipline Maintained by Personal Attachment of Men to Leaders

London, November, 19.—Two British officers, Major Hanbury Tracy and Capt. R. P. Cobbold, were sent by the British Government, last spring, to accompany King Menelik, son of Solomon, Negus of Abyssinia, on his Anglo-Abyssinia expedition against the slippery Mad Mullah, the De Wet of Eastern Africa. The two officers, who have just returned, have an entertaining story to tell of the peculiarities of Menelik's army, and of the country in which they have sojourned.

"The Abyssinia army," said Captain Cobbold, "has no system of intelligence, and possesses no maps, and one of our principal objects was to supply this deficiency. That we were enabled to do so is evidence of the friendly feeling existing between our Government and that of the Negus, for, although the latter has often received offers from foreign Governments, he has never hitherto permitted foreign officers to accompany his army on active service. Ras Makonnen, the commander-in-chief, personally expressed his pleasure at our presence, as it would tend materially to improve our mutual knowledge of the country. The force we accompanied numbered some 15,000 men, many of whom fought against the Italians in the later war, and constituted the flower of Menelik's army. We succeeded in driving the Mullah's following in the direction of the British force, and when he himself escaped, after receiving several severe defeats, into the Midjertam country, our supplies having become exhausted, the Abyssinian force withdrew.

"When we reached the Tugfafan River the army was practically starving, and was compelled to kill its transport animals, so a return to Harar was decided upon. The heat during the march was excessive, and the starving soldiers, saturated with malaria and dysentery, died off like rats. In our personal caravan we lost our ponies and half our baggage animals.

"I cannot but speak highly of the Abyssinian troops. I never met with soldiers who can do so much work with so little nourishment. Discipline is maintained almost entirely by the personal attachment of the men to their leaders. The armament of the troops, which is very varied, consists principally of Gras rifles, with a considerable number of Italian magazine rifles captured at Adowah. Martinis and Melfords are carried by the chiefs and the officers of high rank. The marksmanship of the army leaves much to be desired, and the Gras rifles in particular are only accurate up to a very short range.

"Of drill there is none, and parade movements are unknown, but the soldiers are extremely intelligent, and have no fear of death, and if they could be made to submit to the elements of European discipline they would constitute the finest body of light infantry—especially for native warfare—that could be desired. Theoretically every man is mounted, but when the young soldiers lose their mules or horses they find their pay inadequate to replace them. Horses are only used in the presence of the enemy, and while on the march they are led, while the mules are ridden.

"The force we accompanied had no field guns. Those in the possession of the Abyssinian army are kept at Adis Ababa, and consist of the seven batteries and mitrailleuses captured from the Italians.

"The practice of mutilating the slain in battle still exists, especially among the Galla soldiery, to whom it is mainly confined. A soldier who can produce proofs of eleven victims is entitled to wear a silver band round his sword."

Asked regarding the mineral wealth of the country, Captain Cobbold said:

"It is impossible to speak with certainty of the future, or of what may be done when the country is thoroughly explored. At present it is known that the province of Beni Shangul, which is conterminous with the Egyptian Soudan, is highly auriferous. Menelik obtains much of his wealth from this source.

"Prospecting is already going on in this area, and various concessions have been obtained from the Emperor, of which British companies seem to have a fair share. This country can be readily developed from the side of the Soudan, as the Blue Nile is navigable to within a short distance of the gold field, and gold, which now has to be carried on mule back [illegible] miles to Adis Ababa, and a further [illegible] miles to the Red Sea coast, will be able to find its way in steamers down the Nile in a few days.

"It is to the development of commerce with the western provinces of Abyssinia that Great Britain should turn her attention, owing to the facilities afforded by the fine waters of the Sobat and Blue Nile. It is not only for its mineral wealth that I advocate the extension of commerce in this part of Abyssinia, as hundreds of miles of country, in Lekka and Kaffa are covered with the finest coffee within easy reach of the Sobat."

In conclusion, Captain Cobbold said, "At present, French influence in Abyssinia of the Jibutil railway to a point some distance north of Harar, to which place a branch line will be laid, will be effected early next year. The rail head is now within two days' journey of Harar.

"The line will entirely alter the economic conditions of the country, and it is difficult to forecast the effect which this new connection with the outer world will have upon the Abyssinians, who at present are isolated, much prejudiced against foreigners, and have no ambition to change their methods of life.

"The completion of the railway will mean that the whole trade of Harar (one of the richest provinces of Abyssinia), the greater portion of which formerly passed through the British ports of Berbera and Zeila, will be diverted to the French port of Jibutil, and unless the British Government is satisfied with the threatened extinction of its ports on the Somali coast, it must seriously consider the advisability of competing with a British line from Zeila or Berbera.

"Politically it is with England that Abyssinia is chiefly concerned, owing to the fact that except for Erythrea and the small French colony of Jibutil, Menelik's dominions are surrounded by British territory. Our presence with the army seemed to excite an unnecessary amount of comment and curiosity on the part of the French.

"Thanks to the efforts of Cononel Harrington, British prestige stands high in Abyssinia, and the Emperor appears most anxious to increase the friendly feeling existing. Throughout the whole of our mission in Abyssinia we received the greatest courtesy and assistance from all ranks.

"Russian influence in Abyssinia is limited to the Red Cross Mission, which was originally sent out by the Czar to aid the wounded in the late war, and now appears to be permanently established in the capital."

Woman Has Seen Much Fighting

London, Nov. 19.—Some interesting details are to hand of the meeting which took place some weeks ago between the powerful Emir Fatarella, son of the late Sultan Rabah of Bornu, and Major McClintock in the Central Sudan.

Fatarella urgently solicited the interview. He claims to have succeeded to the Kingdom of Bornu, and was anxious to be placed under British protection. The British expedition, which was escorted by fifty native levies, took over a month to reach Fatarella's headquarters from the Niger, says Reuter's Agency.

The Emir's camp was a very extensive one, consisting of thousands of conical huts arranged round the old walls of the town of Bergama. He received the British envoy mounted on a white horse and wearing a white robe. His trained troops 2,000 strong, and all armed with guns were drawn up in line two deep, and fired a salute as the British mission approached.

Major McClintock reviewed the troops, which were formed into companies as he passed. Nine standards headed each section, each standard being preceded by buglers and drummers. The movements were executed with great precision.

Fratrella is described as being a man of great intelligence, some twenty-six years of age, of very black complexion, with features of a pronounced negro type. He wore a white costume very like that of the Dervishes, and carried a couple of revolvers in his belt.

Fatarella's sister Hawa, a girl of nineteen, herself commanded a company. She has seen a great deal of fighting, and last year personally led a strong force against the pagan state of Kilba. She carries a rifle and spear.

The interview was most cordial, and the Emir is now awaiting the decision of Sir Frederick Lugard. On the way back the mission stopped at Holma, one of the highest peaks of the Adamaua Mountains. The king came out at the head of a hundred horsemen, all of whom were native suits of the armor, covered with bright red robes.

COUNT LAUTREG A SECOND DREYFUS

Foreign Aristocrat Tells of His Experience at St. Vincent de Paul

WAS STONED AND ROBBED

Threatens to Expose What He Terms Canadian Tri Colored Justice—Says He Will Bring Suit

Toronto, Nov. 19.—Count Nicolas G. S. de Toulouse Lautrec, who was sentenced to five years in St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary by Judge Desnoyers in Montreal, last fall, for receiving money under false pretences who figured as a witness against the Rutledge gang, in the Aurora bank robbery case here, and who received a pardon a few days ago, is in Toronto. He intends making a public exposure of the treatment he received while in St. Vincent de Paul, which, he says was brutal and unworthy of any civilized nation. As to endurance and persecution, he regards himself a second Dreyfus and intends letting the people of western Canada know by lectures and otherwise the meaning of what he terms Canadian tri-colored justice. It was a crude imitation of French justice, and nothing like what English authorities intend should be meted out to prisoners.

Among other things he was the victim, he says, of a highway robbery right within the walls of the institution. One guard told his wife that if he had some money he could obtain some luxuries. His wife thereupon gave him some, but another guard took it from him immediately. He says he has reason to believe it was a scheme to get the money and divide it between them. At any rate he never got the luxuries, not even the money back, when liberated. The guards refused to give him paper to write upon, and his writings, consequently are in a condensed form, in a few small books given him by his wife. When he told them he wanted to write they answered that he had better keep quiet and crack stones. The latter he refused to do. He had never done it and he was not going to start in then.

KEPT HIS PAPERS.

The Count failed to obtain his marriage certificate naturalization papers or any of the documents taken from him by the authorities when placed in custody. The authorities say they gave them to his wife, but the latter denies it. He has placed the matter in the hands of Mr. E. Taylour English, barrister, of this city, who will take action to ascertain where they are.

The Count regards his liberation more of an acknowledgment by the Minister of Justice that a gross miscarriage of justice has taken place in his case, than as a return for the evidence he gave in the bank case.

THREATENED WITH DEATH.

Before coming to Toronto to give evidence, the count says, he was threatened with assassination by Rice, Rutledge and Jones if he testified against them, but he replied that they were threatening a man who was not a coward; that he already had bullets in his body, received in fighting for what he thought was right, and that he was not afraid of them. On his return to the penitentiary he was stoned twice in the prison yard by fellows who sympathized with Rice and his associates, and were angry because he gave evidence against them. The authorities showed the utmost indifference to these occurrences.

SERGEANT ARMOUR'S INTERESTING LETTER

A Peterborough Boy Who is Making a Hero of Himself in South Africa

DAILY FIGHTS WITH THE BOERS

Tells How Difficult It is to Catch the Wary Enemy—The War Will Last at Least a Year.

The Times has been requested to publish the following letter from Sergt. Armour, who is fighting with the Canadian Scouts in South Africa. Sergeant Armour is a son of Mr. and Mrs. John Armour, town, and speaks for itself:

Pretoria, Oct. 5th, 1901.

Dear Mother,—I received your more than welcome letter yesterday and I was very glad to hear that you are all well. This letter leaves me pretty fair at present. I am in the hospital, but I go out to-morrow, for I won't let the doctors operate on me. My left knee is the trouble. I got it hurt on the 28th of July, but I did not mind it much, and I showed it to a doctor at Dashport the other day and he sent me in here, but I will not let them butcher me.

Well, mother dear, I can't say for sure, but I think I will be home for Christmas, that is if I can get my discharge. My time is up the last of this month, but if they want to keep me for six months more they can in spite of me, for I signed for six months or twelve if required. If they don't let me go at the end of my six months, I will be home in the spring, if God spares me, and I hope He will spare us all to meet again.

I will let you know my opinion on the war; it will last another twelve months and it is in a worse state for us now than ever for we are having more or less sniping every day, and a corps like ours gets near all the fighting now; for when the Boers see our support coming up they trek and we follow at a gallop for five or six miles and at it again until the column comes up and they are off again. We are a picked corps and therefore get in the mix-up more than any other in South Africa and, according to Col. Remington, General Barton, General Alderson and Lord Kitchener and others we are the best men in the field, and I am proud of it, for it came out so in the General Orders. We have as good officers as ever led men into action, and I have had two or three narrow squeaks, but I rather liked them. I have three marks or scars on me to show how the Boers can shoot. On the 1st of July last I celebrated Dominion Day in fine style by getting two horses shot under me and getting a bullet through the calf of my right leg. On that day we started to fight at 7.30 a.m. and finished at dark, covering nearly 30 miles, for it was a running fight with Delarey's commando. We got the best of it. They killed one of our men and we laid out 15 of the Boers, wounded 27 of them; so you see we had the highest score.

Well now, dear mother, I have written to father twice and once to Bob Hart, in Boston, last May, and once to George in Peterborough, last May, and once to George in August last, but I have never received a letter or a paper from any one since a year ago last September. When I was in Orpen's Horse at Upington, Cape Colony, and I wrote four or five letters from Prieska, but I got no answers, and I got discouraged and would not write; but when I got your message it was like an echo from heaven, for I had been longing for some news from home for over a year and had almost given it up, but thank God it did come at last.

Well, dear mother, I wrote to George to watch the Post Office for any mail for me, for I expect to have some sent to Peterborough, for I had some back pay and my medal and gratuity sent there, for I gave the O. C. at Cape Town my address at Peterborough and he said he would send it home for me; so if it comes you can get it and keep it for yourself.

Well now dearest mother and father, I will come to a close for this time, so now good bye and God bless and keep you all.

From your runaway son,
WM. ARMOUR.

GALT BEET-SUGAR FACTORY

Council Meets on Monday to Consider the Free Site

Galt, Nov. 19.—Galt's beet-sugar factory is in sight, and it will be in operation very soon. The preliminaries have been arranged, and financial matters are so far advanced that Mayor Vair has called a special meeting of the Council, when a bylaw will be introduced to provide a free site for the industry. This and exemption from all but school taxes for ten years are all that the company will ask from the town, and in all probability they will be granted without opposition. Three hundred hands will be employed. The required acreage has been subscribed, and the farmers are especially enthusiastic. Mr. P. H. Patterson, who visited Bay City and Caro, Mich., recently reports that beet-growers there are clearing $1,000 a year, and that factories are paying from 15 to 25 per cent. profit. The capital is available, and success seems assured.

Attacked for British Sympathies.

London, Nov. 19.—Mr. Charles Heidsieck, the well known champagne grower, of Reims, who made several large presentations of his wines to the British hospital ships in South Africa, seems likely to suffer severe penalties for his sympathy with the British troops. A London paper recently published Mr. Heidsieck's photograph, with a foot-note mentioning the gifts to British troops. This photograph is now being posted to Mr. Heidsieck from various Continental centres, covered with virulent anti-British criticisms. "Up till this moment I thought your firm was a too high standing one for this kind of humanity advertisements," writes one indignant correspondent. "You may well be proud of such a friendship," the writer continues sarcastically, "and you have the effrontery to call yourself a Frenchman! A member of a free nation! Shame!! It is just like a dirty, snake-like, tradesman!! Bah!! But the Dutch will remember this, I can assure you, and know how to treat you in future."

A Big Quarter's Worth

is always found in a bottle of Polson's Nerviline, the best household liniment known. It cures rheumatism, neuralgia, toothache, headache, sick-stomach, in fact is good for everything a liniment ought to be good for. Mothers find it the safest thing to rub on their children for sore throat, cold on the chest, sprains and bruises. Never be without Polson's Nerviline. It will cure the pains and aches of the entire family, and relieve a vast amount of suffering every year.

CHASING THE BOERS IN ORANGE RIVER COLONY

Cabinet Has the Old Problem of Sending Another Contingent

KITCHENER ACCOUNTED FOR 350 BOERS.

For Christmas in South Africa—Separate Canadian Contingent Save Shot for Officers

London, Nov. 19.—Advices received from Berlin, state that Baron Von Heeckeren, Transvaal representative in Germany, recently addressed an audience in the following strain: "The Boers henceforth will save their bullets for British officers. The latest orders to the Boer troops are that every burgher sharp-shooter shall pick out British officers. Brakenlaagte afforded the first evidence of the new tactics. It is hoped to strip the British army of its commanders and bring the costliness and sadness of war home to Great Britain's first families."

PUBLIC SPEECH.

London, Nov. 19.—In a recent letter to Miss Milner, acknowledging a vote of confidence passed in his Government by a ladies' society, Lord Salisbury said:

"We need such encouragement, for England is, I believe, the only country in which during a great war, eminent men write and speak publicly as if they belonged to the enemy."

MRS. STEYN DEPORTED.

Brussels, Nov. 19.—A local paper asserts that the family of former President Steyn, of the Orange Free State, has been asked to leave South Africa.

350 BOERS ACCOUNTED FOR.

London, Nov. 19.—The War Office has been informed by Lord Kitchener that during the past fortnight 43 Boers have been killed, 16 wounded, 291 captured and six surrendered.

Lieutenant Prince W. N. Radziwell was dangerously wounded at Dweefontein on November 14th.

BRITISH HORSES POOR.

Bloemfontein, Nov. 19.—On Thursday last Ackerman's commando was located by a detachment of Bedford Mounted Infantry, under Cols. Jebb and Hall. The commando divided when the mounted infantry appeared, one galloping in the direction of Reddersburg and the other to Vlakfontein. The British separated in pursuit, twenty-five were captured and the rest escaped. The British horses were in an exhausted condition, but the wiry little Boer ponies were still fresh, when the chase necessarily terminated.

ANOTHER CONTINGENT.

Ottawa, Ont., Nov. 19.—Sir Wilfred Laurier, and Dr. Borden, Minister of Militia, will be back this afternoon, and to-morrow the Cabinet will meet and discuss the question of raising a regiment for service in South Africa. There seems to be no reason to doubt that the British Government will be glad to accept the services of a Canadian cavalry or mounted infantry regiment, and has so informed the Canadian Government, but the manner in which the affair can be arranged so as to save Quebec susceptibility and at the same time satisfy Ontario is the problem the Cabinet is called upon to solve, just as in the case of the first contingent. It is quite evident no scheme to recruit units for service in Imperial regiments would have the slightest chance of success, whereas a call to serve in a separate Canadian regiment would be instantly responded had, including a very large proportion of those who have already served in South Africa.

FOR CHRISTMAS IN S. AFRICA.

London, Nov. 19.—The approach of Christmas brings to mind the fact that a great many persons are desirous of sending out Christmas parcels to "Tommy" at the front. Last year the experience of senders and addressers was melancholy for many soldiers never received the good things sent out to them by loved ones at home.

It is desirable that every one sending parcels should observe the regulations of the War Office, which has set them forth in a carefully compiled circular:—

"Many of those sending parcels forgot two things—first, that the troops were at war and not at a garden party; and next, that it was necessary to fasten things firmly.

"The following list is prepared from the best information available at the War Office, but it does not pretend to be exhaustive, and is published only as a suggestion:—Cardigan waistcoats, woolen drawers and vests, knitted socks, worsted nightcaps, or tam 'o shanters, flannel shirts cholera belts, slippers or canvas shoes, neck mufflers, tobacco, cigars, cigarettes, briar pipes, small lanterns and candles, sweets—jam etc., pocket-knives, portable mincing machines, pocket handkerchiefs, writing materials, i.e., letter books containing sheets of paper, an ink pencil, and envelopes.

"The following will not be conveyed: Bottles of spirits, wine, beer, mineral waters, etc.; matches, fusees, etc., packages of cigars tobacco, cigarettes consigned by firms for trade purposes and not as free gifts; food supplies liable to rapid decomposition; newspapers directed but not stamped.

"If the consignment is one for distribution to troops by the general officer commanding, it should be addressed as follows:

Tobacco
(or whatever the parcel consists of)
for the troops in South Africa.
The Embarking Staff Officer,
Empress Dock,
Southampton.

To be forwarded to the General Officer Commanding, Lines of Communication, Cape Town (or Natal, as may be desired).
For distribution.

"If it be for a particular battalion (or other unit), it should be addressed to that battalion, etc., instead of to the General Officer Commanding, Lines of Communication.

"If for an individual, it should be addressed the officer, non-commissioned officer or man, with rank, name, (number) and corps, Field Force, South Africa (the words 'for distribution' being committed).

"The War Department has been instructed by the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, that his Majesty's Consul at Funchal, Madeira, and the Vice-Consul at Las Palmas will be happy to undertake the distribution to the home-coming troops of any clothes or comforts."

PETERBOROUGH, NOVEMBER 20, 1901

SOUTH AFRICA AND THE PHILIPPINES

No great love, as a rule, is expressed for England by the press of the United States for the manner in which the mother country is conducting the difficult war in South Africa, and many papers continue to jibe at her for the slow progress made in overcoming a "handful of Boers,"— completely ignoring the fact that Uncle Sam has a very similar job on his hands in the Philippines. Occasionally, however, some sheet has the manliness to rebuke the snarlers at England and put things in their proper light before the world. The San Francisco News-Letter, for example, of a recent date, thus trenchantly presents one phase of the situation:

"The press are daily reviling the British for their non-success in capturing the fighting commandos. They are feeding 121 non-combatants, have 25,000 prisoners of war to care for, and have long lines of communication to protect, and have 150,000 soldiers doing it. Yet Lord Kitchener has just been compelled to requisition for more well-mounted men, and he will have to get them before he can finish his task. In this state of affairs a section of our press is trying to stir up President Roosevelt's Dutch blood to the point of intervening in behalf of the Boers. What a mess he would be in with the Philippines on his hands and liable to be attacked! Better keep our hands out of that business, seeing that we have a similar job on hand that is proving just as tough a one. England will people and civilize Africa from the Cape to Cairo, and it will be well for us and the world that she should be left alone to do it. What we shall make of the Philippines remains to be seen. No doubt in the end we shall accomplish whatever we undertake, but meanwhile we must stick to our knitting."

AN ONLOOKER'S VIEW

The Detroit Free Press is published near enough to the Canadian border to be able to absorb something of the spirit of the Canadians, or at least to understand Canadian sentiment much better than many other of the papers published over the line. In a recent issue, the Detroit paper says: "In Canada the English element has not given a sign of wavering. It dominates and it shows stronger than any other colony its determination to stand by its allegiance. Division of sentiment is racial and not national. Whatever the future may hold for Canada, she is now an exemplification of loyalty. This is the more remarkable because she is on intimate terms with the greatest republic in existence, and realizes that our commercial interests are so interwoven that all restraints placed upon them involve a sacrifice. There may come a time when our interests will be identical, but at the present she is more for England than England is for herself. It is more difficult to negotiate a treaty with Canada than with the parent government, and the former opposes conditions in the matter of an isthmian canal that the latter is willing to concede. It is a question whether the Dominion is not closer to the throne than she was before the unfortunate war, to the prosecution of which she has so gallantly contributed."

Let us say, not English but British and our Detroit friend is right. There are many in the Empire who might learn from the Canadian lessons in a loyalty that means more than words.

CEMETERY EVOLUTION

An American contemporary reports that it is the current opinion of cemetery superintendents throughout the Union that tombstones will soon become obsolete, as the tendency is to make the burial grounds more park-like. It is considered to be a desirable reform. Cemeteries with their forests of stone shafts give only a stone-yard impression, and none of the soothing effect of a landscape is possible. The money that has been expended in tombstone erection would create more enduring works of art, placed where they might have a gratifying and educating influence. It is becoming generally recognized, too, that a public library, a college building, or a scholarship is a better memorial than a shaft of cold stone. The conversion of cemeteries into parks will, of course, be an evolution, the first step in which is the dispensing with the mound effect in burial lots. In one Chicago cemetery the limit for headstones was set some time ago at eight inches above the grass level. Later the limit was set at four inches, and a more recent change makes it one inch. This shows the trend of cemetery methods.

How One Million is Spent

Not less than one million dollars is annually spent by people seeking an absolute cure for Catarrh, Bronchitis and Consumption. Numerous are the remedies, but the one standing pre-eminently above all others is Catarrhozone. It cures these diseases because it is sure to reach them. Catarrhozone is inhaled into the lungs, throat and nasal passages, and bathes every part of the diseased membrane with its germ-killing, healing vapour. You simply breathe Catarrhozone and it cures. Price 25c and $1 at druggists, or Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

The doctor sometimes passes a harder sentence than the judge. But the sentence of the doctor is more often set aside or overruled than is that of the judge. In the case of Mrs. Reycraft given below, the doctor sentenced her to about eighteen years of physical punishment and misery. But she rebelled against the sentence, and commenced the use of Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription. In a few weeks she was a well woman.

It's a peculiarity of the cures effected by the use of Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription, that they are generally cures of chronic diseases. A woman suffers with disease peculiar to her sex, she takes medical treatment, gets no better, and has no hope held out to her of improvement. Then in her discouragement she turns to Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and finds a prompt and lasting cure. "Favorite Prescription" establishes regularity, dries unhealthy drains, heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness.

"Four years ago my health began to fail," writes Mrs. Nellie M. Reycraft, of Glenwood, Washington Co., Oregon. "I had a very heavy dragging and weight in the region of the uterus, pain in back and loins, could not lift anything heavy, rest at night very poor; stomach deranged. One physician said I was overworked, another said I had congestion and falling of uterus. He treated me nine months and said I would not be well until I had passed the change of life. I was only twenty-seven years old then. I became discouraged, and began using Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Took a teaspoonful three times a day; began feeling better right away. Am using my third bottle now, and feel I am in good health. I believe Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has restored me to health. If suffering women would give it a fair trial they would give it praise."

Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, paper covers, is sent free on receipt of 31 one-cent stamps to pay expense of customs and mailing only. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

SOME POSITIVE PROOFS

What is Being Told of Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills—No Cure No Pay.

Dr. Clark's Little Red Pills cured me of kidney trouble of many years' standing, and after I had tried every other known remedy. Joseph Begley, Caledonia ave., Rochester, N.Y.

I was afflicted with rheumatism so badly at times that I could not walk. Nothing I took did me much good, until I tried Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills. Five boxes cured me entirely.

I had the misfortune to have suffered some years ago from paralysis, sustaining no less than three strokes. I could get nothing to do me any good until I was induced to try Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills. I took nine boxes, and although not by any means well, I think I am in a fair way to recovery. I can now walk with the aid of a stick and feel myself getting better every day. M. F. Mann, Merlin, N.Y.

Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills permanently cured me of backache. I suffered for years, and took two boxes. That is a year ago. I have not had a symptom since. James H. Jackson, Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.

I do not believe there is a medicine to compare with Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills. They cured me of indigestion and catarrh of the stomach, after nine years' suffering. H. S. Macdonald, G.T.R. shops, Montreal.

Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills are a positive and certain cure for la grippe, rheumatism, asthma, paralysis, catarrh, eczema, coughs, backache, indigestion, all stomach and liver troubles, female complaints, even when the diseases have been standing for many years, the most stubborn cases will yield. Price 50 cents per box. For sale by Ormond & Walsh. The Canada Chemical Company will forfeit $10 for any case that these pills do not cure.

"MATT."

A TALE OF A CARAVAN

like you, Matt. Do you understand, I like you?"

So anxious did he seem to impress this upon her, that he put his arm around her waist, drew her toward him, and kissed her on the cheek, a ceremony he had never performed before. But Matt seemed by no means to appreciate the honor; as his lips touched her cheeks she shivered, and when he released her she began rubbing at the place as if to wipe the touch away.

Mr. Monk then left the cottage, taking William Jones with him. Ten minutes later William Jones returned alone.

"Where's he?" asked Matt.

"Meanin' Mr. Monk, Matt — he be gone!" said William Jones.

"Gone for good?" demanded Matt, impatiently.

"No, he ain't, Matt; he'll be down here to-morrow, he will; and you'd best be at home!"

Matt said nothing this time; she only turned away sullenly and shrugged her shoulders.

"Matt," said William Jones, presently.

"Well?"

"Mr. Monk seems uncommon fond of you, he do."

Matt reflected for a moment, then she replied:

"I wonder what he's fond o' me for, William Jones?"

"Well, I dunno; 'cause he is, I suppose," returned William Jones, having no more logical answer at his command.

"Taın't that," said Matt; "he don't love me 'cause I'm me, William Jones. There's summat else, and I should just like to know what that summat is, I should."

William Jones looked at her, conscious that there was a new development of sagacity in her character, but utterly at a loss to understand what that new development meant.

CHAPTER VI.

Also Concludes With a Kiss.

When Matt awoke the next morning, the first thing she did was to look around for her Sunday clothes, which on retiring to rest she had carefully placed beside her bed. They were gone, and in their place lay the habiliments she was accustomed to wear on her erratic pilgrimages every day.

Her face grew cloudy; she hunted all round the chamber, but, finding nothing that she sought, she was compelled to array herself as she best could.

"William Jones," she said, when she sat with that worthy at a hermit's breakfast of dry bread and whey, "where's my Sunday clothes?"

William Jones fidgeted a bit, then he said:

"They're put where you won't find 'em. Look ye, now, Matt, you'd best be after doin' summat useful than runnin' about after a painter chap. I was down on the shore this morning, and I seen heaps o' wood — you'd best get some of it afore night!"

Matt gave a snort, but said nothing. A few minutes later her benign protector left the cottage, and a little after he had disappeared Matt issued forth; but instead of beating the shore for firewood, as she had been told to do, she ran across the fields to the painter.

She found him already established at his work. The fact was he had been for some time strolling about with his hands in his pockets, and scanning the prospect on every side for a sight of her. Having got tired of this characteristic occupation, he at length sat down and began to put a few touches to the portrait. Seeing that he was unconscious of her approach Matt crept up quietly behind him and took a peep at the picture.

Her black eyes dilated with pleasure.

"Oh, ain't it beautiful!" she exclaimed.

"So you have come at last," said Brinkley quietly, going on with his painting.

She made no movement and no further sound; so he continued:

"Perhaps, now you have come, you'll be good enough to step round that I may continue my work. I am longing to refresh my memory with a sight of your face, Matt!"

"Well, you can't," said Matt, "they're locked up!"

"Eh —what's locked up —my memory or your face?"

It was clear Matt could not appreciate banter. She saw him smile, and guessed that he was laughing at her, and her face grew black and mutinous. She would have slunk off, but his voice stopped her.

"Come here, Matt," he said. "Don't be silly, child; tell me what's the matter, and— why, what has become of your resplendent raiment — your gorgeous Sunday clothes?"

"Didn't I tell you? —they're locked up."

"Indeed?"

"Yes, William Jones done it 'cause he told him. He don't want me to come here and be took."

"Oh! Tell you what it is, Matt, we will have our own way, in spite of them. For the present this picture shall be put aside. If in a day or so you can again don your Sunday raiment, and sit to me again in them —if not, I dare say I shall be able to finish the dress from memory. That portrait I shall give to you. In the meantime, as I want one for myself, I will paint you as you are. Do you approve?"

Matt nodded her head vigorously.

"Very well," said Brinkley. "Then we will get on."

He removed from his easel and carefully covered the portrait upon which he had been working. Then he put up a fresh cardboard, and sat down, inviting Matt to do the same.

With the disappearance of the Sunday clothes, the girl's stiffness seemed to have disappeared also, and she became again a veritable child of Nature. She looked like a shaggy young pony fresh from a race on the mountain- side, as she threw herself on the ground in an attitude which was all picturesqueness and beauty. Then, with her plump, sunburnt hand she began to carelessly pull up the grass, while her black eyes searched alternately the prospect and the painter's face.

Presently she spoke:

"He says you're a pryin' scoundrel," she said.

Brinkley looked up and smiled.

"Who is he, Matt?"

"Mr. Monk," she replied, and gave a jerk with her head in the direction of Monkshurst.

"Oh, indeed," said Brinkley. "It is my amiable equestrian friend, is it? I'm sure I'm much obliged to him. And when, may I ask, did he bore you with his opinion of me?"

"Last night, when he come to see William Jones. He said I wasn't to be took no more, 'cause you was a scoundrel poking and prying."

Brinkley began to whistle, and went on for a while vigorously touching up his work. Then he looked up and regarded the girl curiously.

"Mr. Monk seems to be very much interested in you, Matt?"

The girl nodded her head vigorously; then remembering the odious caress to which Mr. Monk had subjected her, she began to violently rub her cheek again.

"Why is Mr. Monk so interested in you? Do you know?"

"P'raps it's cause he found me when I come ashore."

"Oh, he found you, did he? Then why doesn't he keep you?"

"He do, only I live along o' William Jones."

Again Brinkley began whistling lightly, and working away vigorously with his brush. Presently the conversation began again.

"Matt, what things did you come ashore in?"

"I dunno!"

"You have never heard whether anything was found with you which might lead to your finding your relations?"

"No; no more has William Jones. He says may be they'll find me some day and reward him, but Mr. Monk says they were all drownded, and ain't got no friends 'cept him and William Jones."

"Well, since he found you, I suppose he ought to know; and since you have no relations, Matt, and no claim upon anybody in the world, it was very kind of Mr. Monk to keep you, instead of sending you to the workhouse as he might have done."

On this point Matt seemed rather skeptical.

"Well," continued Brinkley, as he went on lightly touching up his work, "perhaps I have done my equestrian friend a wrong. Perhaps his unamiable exterior belies his real nature; perhaps he is good and kind, generous to the poor, willing to help the helpless —like you for instance."

"Is it him?" exclaimed Matt. "Monk, of Monkshurst! Why he don't give nothin' to nobody. No fear."

"And yet, according to your own showing, he has helped to support you all these years —you, who have no claim whatever upon him."

This was an enigma to which Matt had no solution. She said no more but Brinkley, while he continued his painting, silently ruminated thus:

"It strikes me this puzzle would be worth unraveling if I could only find the key. Query, is the young person the key. If I but knew how to use her? Perhaps, since the amiable Monk evidently dislikes my coming into communication with her. But it would be useless to lay the case before her, since, if she is the key, she is quite unconscious of it herself."

He threw down his brush, rose and stretched himself, and said:

"Look here, Matt, I'm tired of work. The sun shining on those sandhills and on the far-off sea is too tempting. I shall go for a walk and you, if you are in the mood, shall be my guide."

She evidently was in the mood, for she was on her feet in an instant.

"All right, master," she said, "I'll go."

"Very well. Tim, bring forth some refreshment. We will refresh the inner man and girl before we start."

Tim disappeared into the Caravan. Presently he reappeared bearing a small tray, some biscuits and a couple of glasses. This he placed on the camp-stool, which his master had just vacated, and which, when not in use as a seat, served as a table. Brinkley poured out two glasses of milk, then, looking at Matt, he held the little glass on high.

"Brandy, Matt?"

She shook her head.

"Very well, child; I think you are wise. Here, take the milk and drink confusion to your enemies!"

Matt took the glass of milk and drank it down, while Brinkley hastened to dilute and dispose of the other. Then he gave some orders to Tim and they started off.

To the sand-hills they wended their way. Having gained them, they followed a route which Matt knew full well, and which soon brought them to the narrow foot-path beyond. During the walk she was singularly silent, and Brinkley seemed to be busily trying to work out some abstruse problem which had taken possession of his brain.

When they had followed the foot-path for some distance and had gained the greensward on the top of the cliffs, the young man threw himself upon the grass and invited Matt to do the same. It was very pleasant there, soothing both to the eye and to the mind.

"Do you see that house standing all by itself, close to shore?" said Matt, pointing to the cottage where she lived. "That belongs to William Jones. And, look ye now, there be William Jones on the rocks!"

Looking down, Brinkley beheld a figure moving along the rocks, just where the water touched the edge.

"Very lazy of William Jones," he said. "Why isn't he at work?"

"At work?"

"Yes, tilling the fields or fishing. By the way, I forgot to ask you, is he a fisherman?"

"No, he ain't," said Matt. "He's a wrecker, he is!"

"A what?" exclaimed Brinkley.

"A wrecker," continued Matt, as if wrecking was the most natural occupation in the world. Brinkley looked at her, imagining that she must be practicing some wild joke. He had certainly heard of wreckers, but he had always believed that they were a species of humanity which had belonged to past centuries.

"That sea don't look ugly, do it?" she continued, pointing at the ocean. "But it is; there's rocks out there, where the ships split on; then they go all to pieces and the things come ashore."

"And what becomes of all the things, Matt?"

"Some of 'em's stole, and some of 'em's took by the coast- guards. They do say," she added, mysteriously, "as there's lots o' things— gold and silver—hid among them sand-hills. Before the coast- guards come all the folk was wreckers like William Jones, and they used to get what come ashore and they used to bile it in the sand-hills."

South African Affairs.

London, Nov. 18.—The Government may have been lost in the recent fog, but Lord Kitchener knows where the battalions are, and has not been disheartened by repeated failures to overtake or entrap the guerilla leaders. His latest despatches, with the sidelight thrown upon them in the detailed reports of the operations of the army explain what is going on in South Africa. The clearance of the Dutch districts, so that the enemy could not maintain systematic hostilities in them was the chief object early in the year; driving the scattered bands of guerillas against the lines of blockhouses, where the enemy is forced to surrender in small groups is the supreme end of the close of the year.

The magnitude of the system of blockhouse lines has not been appreciated by military writers here. There is a complete network of railway defences for the protection of the lines of communication, and also transverse barriers across the Orange River Colony, from Jacobsdal to Ladybrand, from Aliwal North to De Aar, and thence to Kimberly, and in the eastern and western Transvaal, with Heidelberg and Megaliesberg as centres. The surrenders reported from week to week are mainly due to the sweeping movements of mobile columns toward these blockhouse lines.

A new feature of Kitchener's campaign is apparently the organization of a fresh series of mounted columns, with the lightest possible equipment, and probably without guns, for hot pursuit of the enemy's force, and the capture of the leaders—Steyn, Dewet, Botha, Delarey and Kemp. There are no practical results of the new tactics, but with the reinforcements ordered or already on the way, military men are hoping that the collapse of the Boer struggle will come in due time. It is noticeable that neither the end of the year nor the meeting of Parliament is mentioned as the limit of hostilities, but the coronation in June.

The Boers, with their talent for adapting themselves to new conditions, are reverting from irregular to regular warfare, and after scattering their forces are now massing them for attacks upon rear guards of columns and isolated garrisons. Botha and De Wet are following the same tactics. But the bands of Cape rebels against whom General French is operating are too widely dispersed to co-operate with one another.

CHAINED FOR TEN YEARS
HAY FEVER
ASTHMA
EVERY [illegible] BRINGS RELIEF.

There is nothing like Asthmalene. It brings instant relief, even in the worst cases. It cures when all else fails.

The Rev. C. F. WELLS, of Villa Ridge, Ill., says: "Your trial bottle of Asthmalene received in good condition. I cannot tell you how thankful I feel for the good derived from it. I was a slave, chained with putrid sore throat and Asthma for ten years. I despaired of ever being cured. I saw your advertisement for the cure of this dreadful and tormenting disease, Asthma, and thought you had overspoken yourselves, but resolved to give it a trial. To my astonishment, the trial acted like a charm. Send me a full-size bottle."

REV. DR. MORRIS WECHSLER
Rabbi of the Cong. Bnai Israel.
NEW YORK, Jan. 3, 1901.

DRS. TAFT BROS.' MEDICINE CO.:

Gentlemen: Your Asthmalene is an excellent remedy for Asthma and Hay Fever, and its composition alleviates all troubles which combine with asthma. Its success is astonishing and wonderful.

After having it carefully analyzed, we can state that Asthmalene contains no opium, morphine, chloroform or ether. Very truly yours,

REV. DR. MORRIS WECHSLER.

AVON SPRINGS, N. Y., Feb. 1, 1901.

DR. TAFT BROS. MEDICINE CO.

Gentlemen: I write this testimonial from a sense of duty, having tested the wonderful effect of your Asthmalene, for the cure of Asthma. My wife has been afflicted with spasmodic asthma for the past 12 years. Having exhausted my own skill as well as many others, I chanced to see your sign upon your windows at 130th street, New York. I at once obtained a bottle of Asthmalene. My wife commenced taking it about the 1st of November. I very soon noticed a radical improvement. After using one bottle her asthma has disappeared and she is entirely free from all symptoms. I feel that I can consistently recommend the medicine to all who are afflicted with this distressing disease. Yours respectfully,

O. D. PHELPS, M. D.

DR. TAFT BROS. MEDICINE CO.

Gentlemen: I was troubled with Asthma for 22 years. I have tried numerous remedies but they have all failed. I ran across your advertisement and started with a trial bottle. I found relief at once. I have since purchased your full-size bottle and I am ever grateful. I have a family of four children and for six years was unable to work. I am now in the best of health and am doing business every day. This testimony you can make such use of as you see fit.

Permanent Cures of Cancer

We here give a few cases, where the efficacy of our Constitutional treatment in curing Cancer, is established beyond all question. We have plenty on fyle.

There is ample proof that where our remedy cures, it cures to stay and saves people from the torture of knife and plaster.

CANCER OF THE BREAST—A lady had Cancer of the breast, which rendered her right shoulder and arm almost helpless. Our remedy cured her over five years ago, and there is not the slightest return of the trouble.

CANCER OF THE FACE—This case of a gentleman who was so bad that his right cheek was almost eaten off with the disease. Plasters aggrivated his trouble. Our treatment cured him five years ago and he has been all right since.

CANCER OF THE STOMACH—Doctors pronounced the trouble cancer of the stomach. There was vomiting of material that looked like Coffee grounds. Great weakness and prostration. Cured over four years ago and well to-day.

CANCER OF THE NOSE—A severe case which was cured by our remedy in 1891 and has never returned to this day.

Full accounts of the above cases, together with the names and addresses of the persons, are given in our new book, "Cancer. Its Cause and Cure," sent to anyone, in plain wrapper on receipt of 2 stamps. Stott & Jury, Bowmanville, Ont.

Funeral This Morning

The funeral of the late Johnny Derosher whose tragic death occurred on Monday evening, the particulars of which appeared in yesterday's issue, will take place at nine o'clock this morning from the family residence, 465 Bethune street.

St. Andrews' W. F. M. S.

The thank offering meeting of St. Andrew's Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, was held in the lecture room of the church last night. Miss McIntosh, a returned missionary of Honan, gave an interesting address.

Died in the North West

The remains of Mr. Wm. Greer of Manitoba, arrived on Monday evening per the C.P.R. local and interment took place yesterday in the Little Lake cemetery. The late Mr. Greer was about 79 years of age, and until a few years ago owned and resided on a farm in South Monaghan, near Hales' Bridge. He leaves three sons to mourn his demise. They are Messrs. George, in the States, James of Manitoba and Jos., living in Peterborough.

Tendency of Catarrh is to Spread

Just a slight matter at first, and because slight, neglected; but the seed sown brings forth a dangerous harvest Consumption, which is the harvest of death. Better spend a few moments each day, inhaling Catarrhozone, an aromatic antiseptic that relieves at once, clears the nasal passages, and restores lost sense of taste and smell. The immediate effect of Catarrhozone is magical, so prompt and efficient. Cure is certain and permanent if you use Catarrhozone. Price $1. The Locks' Dam

Mr. Hugh Burnett, the contractor who is building the new dam at the locks, is pushing matters along in good style. The coffer dam will be completed in the course of a week or so, when the concrete work will be commenced. The new dam will be built about 150 feet below the present dam, which has served its purpose for so many years. There is a large gang of men at work drawing gravel, sand and stone, and it is expected that the cement work will start this week or next, if it is not too cold.

Sudden deaths on the increase.—People apparently well and happy to-day, to-morrow are striken down, and in ninety-nine cases out of every hundred the heart is the cause. NOTE.—The Times requests its readers to furnish it with items of a personal and social nature either by phone or in writing.—Ed. Times.

—Ven. Archdeacon Casey is in Brockville attending the funeral of Rev. Father Staunton.

—Rev. J. C. Davidson, Rev. W. L. Armitage and Rev. E. A. Langfeldt are in Lindsay attending the Archidiaconal Conference.

—The many friends of Mr. Harry LeBrun will be pleased to learn that he has fully recovered from his indisposition.

—Mr. James Kendry, M.P., has been confined to his home for several days, suffering from a cold. He is, we are glad to say, gradually recovering.

—Mr. Robert Stewart, of Brockville, spent yesterday in town, and gave the Times a pleasant call. Mr. Stewart was kept busy shaking hands with old friends.

—Mr. W. J. McCallum returned home yesterday from the back lakes with two fine deer, one of them, a buck, being one of the largest shot in this district this season.

—The Times was yesterday favored with a call from Mr. Burton Bennett, the genial Canadian general agent of the Chicago and North-Western Railway, who was in town on business. He left last night for the west.

—The Times had a call yesterday from Mr. A. H. Notman, the popular Superintendent of the Ontario and Quebec Division of the C.P.R., and Mr. Jack Rose, also of the "greatest railway on earth," who were down from Toronto for the day on business. They returned in the evening.

—The New York Herald has the following concerning Miss Ellen Ray, daughter of Mr. Samuel Ray, town, who is attending the Notre Dame convent in New York city: "During her stay she has won for herself many friends and acquaintances. She is an exceptionally clever young girl—gentle, loving and attentive to studies, large-hearted and honorable, frank and outspoken. As a favor and one greatly appreciated by Miss Ray, her teacher tendered her a surprise party, which was held in the spacious dining-hall of Ellen's aunt's residence, 32 13th street. Following is a list of those attending who were entertained at games and amusements for several hours, the night's pleasure concluding with dainty refreshments served by the Misses Ethel Packman, Emma Collins, Flossie Hewitt, Florence Bleyseston, Helen Edwards, Alma Dieckerman, Rose Budd, Lena Tafford (Brooklyn), Eva Taylor, Vera Van Eaton, Hazel Price, Vera Munger, Edith Jones, Lizzie Cole, Lucile Bachman, Amber Walker, Miss Drancho, Ella Bourcy, Ada McHugh, Francha Bedell, Frederica Eyck, Katie Gould, Addie Price, the Misses Kittie and Marguerite Warridien of Albany. An incident worthy of note is the great love which Miss Ellen bears for her parents—particularly strong are the ties of love which binds her to her mother, who is often spoken of by her with pride."

DEATH OF MR. THOMAS LEE

One of Peterborough's Oldest Inhabitants Passes Away Yesterday

The death of Mr. Thomas Lee, although not unexpected by those intimately acquainted with him, will nevertheless come with a shock to his many friends in town and country. The deceased had been ill for some considerable time, and complications arose which gradually sapped his strength until the end came as above.

Mr. Lee was born in the County of Monaghan, Ireland, about 65 years ago, and came to Canada with his parents in 1847, settling in Peterborough. He has continued to reside here ever since, with the exception of a few years residence in Bethany. He married Miss Mary Irwin, of Manvers, who predeceased him 26 years. He leaves to mourn his demise one son and two daughters. The son is Mr. Bert Lee, and the daughters are Miss Emma and Miss Addie, both living at home. There are also Messrs. William and John Lee, of town, and Robt. Lee, of Parry Sound, brothers of the deceased.

The funeral will take place to-morrow afternoon at 2.30 o'clock to the Little Lake Cemetery.

COFFEE COMPLEXION

Many Ladies Have Poor Complexions From Coffee

"Coffee caused dark colored blotches on my face and body. I had been drinking it for a long while and these blotches gradually appeared, until finally they became permanent and were about as dark as coffee itself.

I formerly had as fine a complexion as one could ask for.

When I became convinced that coffee was the cause of my trouble, I changed and took to using Postum Cereal Food Coffee, and as I made it well, according to directions, I liked it very much, and have since that time used it entirely in place of coffee.

I am thankful to say I am not nervous any more, as I was when I was drinking coffee, and my complexion is now as fair and good as it was years ago. It is very plain that the coffee caused the trouble. Please omit my name from public print." Mrs. —— 2051 Ogden Ave., Chicago, Ill. The name of this lady can be given by the Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., Battle Creek, Mich.

Most bad complexions are caused by some disturbance of the stomach and coffee is the greatest disturber of digestion known. Almost any woman can have a fair complexion if she will leave off coffee and use Postum Food Coffee and nutritious, health food in proper quantity. The food coffee furnishes certain parts of the natural grains from the field that nature uses to rebuild the nervous system and when that is in good condition, one can depend upon a good complexion as well as a general healthy condition of the body.

ASHBURNHAM LOCALS

What is Going on Over the River—Items of News

—Everybody in Ashburnham reads the Times.

—Yesterday Photographer R. M. Roy took a number of views of Ashburnham residences and industries, for a book soon to be issued by Messrs. Roy and Garden.

—It is rumored that our local painter, Mr. John Malone, is soon to embark in the grocery business, he having bought out a local grocery store.

Commodore Calcutt had his picture "took" yesterday, when Mr. Roy was taking views of the village.

—There is some talk of Councillor Smith running for reeve. Mr. Smith is an experienced municipal daddy, and what he don't know about village affairs wouldn't wod a gun.

—It is said that there will be a fierce contest at the approaching municipal elections, several new names having been mentioned as candidates. These are Messrs. George Wheeler, Allan McCarthy, Harry Morgan and others. The old council, consisting of Messrs. Sheridan, Smith, Pollock and Johnston, with F. Adams as reeve, will all stand again.

—Mr. Sam Bickle has returned from the west, where he went some months ago. Sam has not yet decided as to his future movements.

—A strong desire exists for placing some of our best men in the Council next year, and it is reported that a requisition is to be presented to our three local philantropists—Messrs. John James Lundy, William Irwin and David Conroy—asking them to run. This combination would make a powerful local government, that would only be surpassed in financial strength by J. Pierpont Morgan's syndicate.

—Mr. Billy Collins, our genial grocer, reports business in his line good. Billy has been pushing ahead so well that the completion of the lift lock will be no opportunity for him to rise in the world.

—Our esteemed townsmen, Mr. J. C. Sullivan, Vice-President of the Villagers' Association, told the Times representative the other day that there would be work for the Association this winter. It might be a good idea for Mr. Sullivan to start the ball rolling by delivering his long-promised lecture before the Association on Trading Stamps—Their Uses and Abuses."

—A good many noticed our village tip up a little the other night when "The People's Jimmy" stepped off the Otonabee bridge on his way to preside at the entertainment given by St. Mark's Church, in the Town Hall. Mr. Stratton makes an ideal chairman, and ran the show to the satisfaction of everybody.

—The new Rector of St. Luke's is becoming very popular with the villagers. His genial and kindly manner, added to his cleverness as a preacher, makes him much sought after. Rev. Mr. Langfeldt is a worthy successor to Rev. Dr. Symonds.

—There will be no hum at the Ashburnham shipyard this winter, as there was last. The steamers of the Peterborough Navigation Company will undergo the usual repairs towards the opening of navigation in the spring, but no new vessels will be built.

THE LATE T. M. WILLAN

Death of One of South Monaghan's Most Esteemed Citizens

The death of Mr. Thomas M. Willan occurred on Monday evening at the family residence, North Monaghan, after an illness extending over a year. Mr. Willan was 64 years of age, and was one of the most prominent men in South Monaghan. He was for many years a member of the township Council, occupying the position of Reeve, as well as various other offices of trust in the municipality. He was a consistent member of the Episcopal church. Mr. Willan was stricken with appoplexy on September 15, 1900, while at work in the harvest field, and gradually became worse, slight attacks following each other at intervals until the end. His suffering he bore with Christian fortitude, and was never heard to complain.

He leaves a grown-up family of three daughters and two sons, as follows: Mrs. F. Dunbar, Millbrook; Mrs. David Hutchinson, Otonabee; Miss Lottie, at home, and Marshall, and John.

The interment will take place this afternoon at two p.m., in the English Church Cemetery on the 4th line of Cavan.

THE TRADING STAMP CASE

Court of Appeal Judges Hear Argument To-Day on the Stated Case

The Court of Appeal, Toronto, heard argument on Monday in the trading stamp stated case. The question is whether the Ontario Legislature has power to pass an amendment to the Municipal Act giving municipalities power to prohibit the operation of trading stamp companies.

Mr. W. R. Riddell, K.C., appeared for the Government, and the Dominion Stamp Company was represented by Mr. J. B. Clarke, K. C.

The clauses passed by the Local House were as follows:

"Prohibiting the giving, selling, distributing or receiving of trading stamps, or other similar devices, or dealing therewith by any person, firm, or corporation engaged in trade and business.

"No such bylaw shall apply to any merchant or manufacturer who places in or upon the packages of goods, or delivers to the purchasers of goods sold, tickets or coupons to be redeemed by such merchant or manufacturer either in money or goods."

Mr. Riddell's argument is that the Legislature is perfectly competent to deal with the question, which affects property and civil rights. Mr. Clarke points out that in several States of the Union, notably New York, such a law had been declared invalid. The matter was trade and commerce, and came under the purview of the Federal Government.

ITEMS OF INTEREST

London, Nov. 19.—A proposed strike for the right to keep dogs is to be considered at the next meeting of the Northumberland Miner's Association. At several collieries in the country workmen are being forced by the owners to do away with their dogs, or, as an alternative, leave the colliery themselves. It is now suggested that wherever such an issue is raised, if the majority of the workmen favor a strike, they would have the sympathy of the public.

PROHIBITION OF BARMAIDS.

Calcutta, Nov. 19.—In pursuance of the recent order of Sir John Woodburn, Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, prohibiting the employment of European barmaids in Calcutta, the Board of Revenue has ruled that the following condition shall be inserted in every license in Bengal, whether held by European or native: "That in the place for which this license is granted no female shall be employed in connection with imported wines or spirituous or fermented liquors in any capacity whatsoever.

LIFE-SAVING CHAMPION.

London, Nov. 20.—For the second year in succession Scotland yesterday supplied the winning team in the life-saving competition, which is annually held under the auspices of the Life-Saving Society, South Side, S. C., of Glasgow, defeating Eastbourne in the final tie, which was held at the St. George's Baths, Victoria. Last year Aberdeen proved successful, so that Scotland would appear to possess a monopoly of ability in the art of life-saving.

The winners proved superior to the Englishmen both in the way in which they rescued apparently drowning men and in the celerity with which they restored them to animation, and well deserved their victory.

During the evening an attempt was made by J. A. Jarvis, of Leicester, the world's amateur swimming champion, to lower the 500 yards record, but he failed by two seconds to beat his own figures set up a few years ago.

Odessa, Nov. 119.—The Kharkoff branch of the Banque de la Noblesse, a financial institution originally created by Alexander III. for the redemption of the impoverished nobility, foreclosed the other day on sixty-three estates hopelessly mortgaged by their aristocratic proprietors. At all the other provincial agencies of the bank, as well as its headquarters in the capital, these periodical foreclosures are every half-year becoming more numerous. Now comes the proposal as a second and last means of salvation, to apportion large grants of land—twelve thousand acres being the minimum—in Siberia to the more destitute class of nobles whose properties have passed under the auctioneer's hammer. It is officially suggested that these land grants take the form of free leases for ninety-nine years. There is a good deal of growing opposition to this scheme on the part of the peasantry and other small holders, whose representative elders not unjustly charge the nobility with having exploited the great agricultural industry of this country to support its own prodigality. The hundreds of thousands of peasants regularly and steadily emigrating to the Siberian demur, naturally, to the prospect of being exploited in their new Northern settlements in the same manner as they were in European Russia. With comparatively few exceptions, considering their enormous number, the Russian nobles have over and over again, since the Serf Emancipation in 1863, proved their utter incapacity for the lucrative development of great landed estates. This is an incontrovertible fact, upon which, it is urged, the Imperial Government should seriously reflect before proceeding further with its Siberian scheme of noble colonization. A pauper nobility would retard, rather than assist, the development of Siberia.

How to Get up an Appetite

Distaste for food often follows Grippe and fevers and is associated with a general weakness of the system. To impart a real zest for food and give power to the stomach to digest and assimilate, no remedy can equal Ferrozone. This is a new and startling discovery. It strikes at the root of disease, and by removing the cause, cures quickly and permanently. Ferrozone will quickly enable you to eat and digest anything. Ormond & Walsh druggists, can tell you a great deal more about Ferrozone, how it cures, and why it cures. Call to-day and see him.

SOME POSITIVE PROOFS

What is Being Told of Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills—No Cure No Pay.

Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills cured me of kidney trouble of many years' standing, and after I had tried every other known remedy. Joseph Begley, Caledonia ave., Rochester, N.Y.

I was afflicted with rheumatism so badly at times that I could not walk. Nothing I took did me much good, until I tried Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills. Five boxes cured me entirely.

I had the misfortune to have suffered some years ago from paralysis, sustaining no less than three strokes. I could get nothing to do me any good until I was advised to try Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills. I took nine boxes, and although not by any means well, I think I am in a fair way to recovery. I can now walk with the aid of a stick and feel myself getting better every day. M. F. Mann, Merlin, N.Y.

Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills permanently cured me of Backache. I suffered for years, and took two boxes. That is a year ago. I have not had a symptom since. James R. Jackson, Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.

I do not believe there is a medicine to compare with Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills. They cured me of indigestion and catarrh of the stomach, after nine years' suffering. H. S. Macdonald, G.T.R. shops, Montreal.

Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills are a positive and certain cure for la grippe, rheumatism, asthma, paralysis, catarrh, eczema, coughs, backache, indigestion, all stomach and liver troubles, female complaints, even when the diseases have been standing for many years, the most stubborn cases will yield. Price 50 cents per box. For sale by Ormond & Walsh. The Canada Chemical Company will forfeit $10 for any case that these pills do not cure.

Dr. Clarke's Sure Cure for Catarrh, and Dr. Clarke's Sure Cure for Eczema, same price. $10 will be paid for any case they will not permanently cure.

PUBLIC NOTICE.

PUBLIC NOTICE is hereby given pursuant to Section 632 of the Municipal Act, that the Council of the Town of Peterborough intend at a meeting to be held at the Council Chamber in the Town of Peterborough on Monday the 2nd. day of December 1901 at the hour of 8 o'clock P.M., to pass a By-law for stopping up and closing that part of the Street known as Mill Street between Hunter Street and Murray Street in the Town of Peterborough, and to open in lieu thereof a new street as shown on the office of the Town Clerk and the Westerly boundary of which new street may be otherwise known and described as follows that is to say:—Commencing on the North side of Hunter Street in the Town of Peterborough at the distance of 61 feet 10 inches Easterly from the South East angle of Lot Number Six North of Hunter Street and East of Water Street, Thence North at right angles to Hunter Street 150 feet, Thence in a North Easterly direction in the arc of a circle having radius of 250 feet for the distance of 100 feet. Thence North 34 degrees 55 minutes East (magnetic) 700 feet more or less to the Southerly boundary of Murray Street, Thence in the arc of a circle having a radius of 120 feet and curving to the Northward 200 feet more or less to the present Westerly boundary of Mill Street and the Easterly boundary of said new street is a line drawn parallel with said Westerly boundary and distant 40 feet therefrom and extending from Hunter Street to the present Westerly boundary of Mill Street, and to convey to the Peterborough Hydraulic Power Company Limited, their successors and assigns the part of Mill Street so stopped up and closed, as compensation for the land on which such new street is to be laid out.

AND TAKE NOTICE that at the said time and place the Council will hear in person or by Counsel or Solicitor anyone whose land might be prejudicially affected thereby and who petitions to be so heard.

Dated the 28th. day of October 1901.

REDMOND HOLDS HIS TONGUE IN CANADA

Irish Pro-Boer and Agitator Afraid to Discuss The War

Says That Fre Long Britain Will be Forced to Grant Home Rule

British Government will be Defeated and Replaced by Coalition Government

Montreal, Nov. 20.—Irish delegates, John Redmond, O'Donnell and McHugh, M. P.'s, arrived this morning from New York and were met at the Windsor depot by a delegation of prominent Irish residents and escorted to the Windsor Hotel. Subsequently, Redmond held a levee, which most of the Irish-Canadians in the city of any prominence attended. The Irish leader was in the best of spirits, and expressed himself confident that ere long—Great Britain would be forced to grant Ireland home rule. He would not discuss the war not the attitude of the Irish Parliamentary party towards the Boers, but predicted that the Salisbury Government would be defeated and replaced by a coalition Government before twelve months had passed. The three delegates will speak in Windsor Hall this evening, and are promised a bumper house.

Lese Majesty Cases Grow

Berlin, Nov. 21.—The cases of lese-majeste, which were greatly diminished during the summer again begin to assume serious proportions. It is remarkable that the offense increases whenever there is an industrial depression, as now. Two of the strangest cases are those of a newspaper which condemned the Kaiser's reception of Prince Chun and of a man who would not rise from his seat when a "hoch" was called for the kaiser at a meeting he attended. The editor got six months, the other man three.

The Critical Age

Height of vigor past—nature's power slowing down, vitality less, recuperative power less, endurance less. Stop the progress of decay, tone up the weakened nerve centers, impart vigor to the tiring brain, prepare for the crisis. A means of remarkable potency in the renewal of decreasing vigor is found in Ferrozone. It brightens up the whole being, imparts a sense of power and strength. By the use of Ferrozone old age is pushed back twenty years. Ferrozone gives strength, vigor, endurance vim. Your druggist has it. Get a box to-day.

FILIPINO MURDERERS ORDERED TO DIE

How America's "South Africa" Is Being Treated

PRIEST AMONG THE CONVICTED

The Stern Measures That the Yankees Are Taking in the Philippine Islands.

Manila, Nov. 21.—The military commission has passed sentence of death upon the Presidente, The Chief of Police, the sergeant of police and a native priest who were convicted in the notorious Taytay case of stabbing 7 of their countrymen and burying them before they died in obedience to orders from insurgent leaders, although the town was under an American garrison. There did not at first appear to be evidence of the priest's guilt, but the other men confessed when they were on the brink of the grave. All were defended vigorously by civil counsel. General Chaffee has commuted the death sentence on the priest to a term of twenty years imprisonment.

Reports from Samar describe numerous engagements and a few abortive attempts at ambush, resulting in considerable losses to the insurgents. In these the Americans had one killed and four wounded.

Although Gen. Hughes's ultimatum expired on Nov. 10, peace commissioners still continue to negotiate. The latest committee is composed of relatives of the insurgent chief Lukban, and they, with several officers, entered the interior on Friday, giving a pledge that they would secure a general surrender witin a fortnight. This is considered doubtful.

Agents of Hawaiian planters are here to investigate the feasibility of importing Filipino laborers from Visayas. Such project seems at present to be undesirable, owing to the general scarcity of unskilled agriculturists. In Negros alone last year 4,000 were employed from the island of Panay, while growers in the Camarines, in Leyte, and Luzon complain that they are unable to work their present crops through want of labor.

Private Pollard of the Thirtieth Infantry has been tried by court-martial for declaring that he was glad President McKinley had been killed. Pollard was sentenced to five years' imprisonment at hard labor and was discharged from the army.

FENIANS CAUSE GREAT 'ANXIETY.

Their Movements the Origion of Report as to Yukon Revolt

HOSTILE TO THE BRITISH.

Bitter spirit Towards British Institutions in the Yukon said to be Caused by Their Machinations.

Victoria, Nov. 19.—Recent arrivals from the north confirm the statements appearing in a San Francisco despatch in so far that Inspector Corrigan arrived from White Horse on the evening of the 6th and held a consultation with United States officers at Skaguay. It appears to be generally accepted as a fact that some mischief was brewing and it is attributed to the head centres of New York and Chicago. Leaders of this local centre are very well known to the authorities and have been watched for some time in connection with their workings among the local populace and their communications with head centres. The exceedingly mean and hostile spirit which prevails in Skaguay towards everything Canadian and British is said to be largely due to the plotting of this local centre. The recent insults to the British flag culminating in the actual tearing of it down by a mob on one occasion, as well as certain well-carried-out plots to bring Canadian officials into disgrace, are all traceable to the same gang. The informants aver positively that the report is not all fake and buncombe, that watchful officials of the Government know it is not, and that the country now and always stands in need of great alertness and preparation.

A Vancouver despatch says that some hair brained Americans drew up plans for forcibly deposing the Government and police in the Yukon sommewhat similar to the historical Jameson raid in the Transvaal. Major Wood, N. W. M. P., discovered the scheme and took prompt steps to suppress it, American officials at Skaguay co-operating. When the scheme was first discovered Maxim and Colt guns were mounted at White Horse, which was the first place to be attacked. Major Snyder, in charge of the police there, also received reinforcements and patrols were kept on the alert night and day. It is said the scheme originated in Seattle, and two hundred and fifty thousand dollars was available to aid the venture. This information has been obtained from ex-police officers of the Yukon force and members of the gambling fraternity who have come to the coast cities for the winter, and is guardedly confirmed by the officials who have just come down frmo the north.

TOMMY ATKINS' MANY HARDSHIPS

Military Authority Answers Critics Who Reflect on Soldiers

CROSSING OVERFLOWING RIVERS

The Everyday Work of Thousands of British Soldiers—Sniping Boers—Hard Experiences

London, Eng., Nov. 20.—H. H. S. Pearse, a military authority, writing in the Daily Mail, defends the British soldiers in South Africa from attacks accusing them of "funking" charges on the enemy. He says:

"A young officer sends me every week a diary replete with interesting details. It begins with the march of the column from Heidelberg, in the Transvaal, on July 27th, and ends for the present with operations against Botha on the eastern frontier of Natal a month ago. Between those dates the column had trekked many hundreds of miles, crossing the Vaal River, the drifts of many other streams, and countless spruits, thebanks of which were so high and rotten that practicable inclines for wagons had to be cut before the column could go on. At these times and on the rare days when a halt was made for resting transport animals the mounted infantry columns were at work scouring the country on each flank or far ahead in circles that intersected at certain points. Thus the men and horses got practically no rest until they reached Kroonstad after a fortnight's trek, on August 12. There the force halted two days for supplies. With wagons refilled, they started again, and the young diarist is so little enamored of life in town that, on getting orders to move, he writes 'Vive le trek,' and closes his notes cheerfully for that day.

Here let me say one word to critics who ask, Why not leave the wagons behind? They cannot realize what that would mean. The columns are moving through a hostile country, often a hundred miles from the nearest railway. Unlike the Boers, they can get no supplies locally. Men cannot carry food for a fortnight on their saddles. The wagons are their movable base, to which detached columns must fall back from time to time but their mobility is not to be measured by the pace of a slow convoy. While it is covering twenty miles the different mounted infantry columns dependent on it for their food will have traversed arcs of four times that length driving the Boers from them sometimes into the constabulary areas, where Baden-Powell's men can deal with them, and occasionally catching a few between two columns that are marching from opposite directions towards the points of contact previously arragned. All this is not haphazard, but part of a concurrent scheme, covering the whole Transvaal and Orange River Colony.

ON HALF RATIONS.

"From Kroonstad the column with which my diarist deals started for a march which was intended to last only one week. At the end of that time they received fresh orders, but no more supplies, but troops had to be put on half rations, and, as captured or surrendered Boers with their families and many Kaffirs had to be taken along and fed, Tommy's allowance became proportionately smaller, until at the end of the month they were back again at Kroonstad. Within a few days the column was off on another trek northwards. Every other day, or oftener, an entry records how a few Boers sniped at their rear guard from safe distances, or kept up an unaimed but harassing fire on the camp at nightfall. Accompanying his diary are photographs of the guns of batteries crossing under water in the flooded rivers. Such is the work being done every day by thousands of British soldiers whom anonymous writers calumniate."

A YEOMAN'S LETTER FROM SOUTH AFRICA

Description of the Boer War by a British Soldier.

BOER WOMEN ADEPT AT LYING

How the War Is Run According to the Idea of the British Regular Soldier.

London, Nov. 18.—Mr. P. T. Ross, late a corporal in the Sixty-ninth, Sussex Company of Yeomanry, has written the liveliest letter about the war which has yet appeared. He seems to be one of those high-spirited and versatile young men who noticed the humorous side of everything and can add to the jollity of a company by a story, a song, an "impromptu" poem, or a penciled caricature. The author enlisted in the "dark days" of 1899, and his first experience of South Africa was at Maitland Camp:

"This place is a perfect New Jerusalem as regards Semites, every civilian about the camp appearing to be a German Jew refugee. They have stalls and sell soap, buns, braces, belts, etc. Every now and again a big Semitic proboscis appears at our tent door, and the question, 'Does anybody vant to buy a vatch?' is propounded."

By the end of May the company had reached the Vaal River—a unit in the swarm of horse, foot and artillery moving toward Johannesburg. After the occupation of Pretoria, the men were marched up and down the country, covering enormous distances and sharing in many minor engagements. Here is a little picture of General Mahon, and a characteristic story of him:

"The night we stopped outside Pretoria, before coming this way our curiosity was roused by suddenly hearing three hearty British cheers from some lines not far from ours. On making an enquiry as to the cause of the outburst of feeling, we were informed that the battalion had just received news that their adjutant, who was absent on leave, had been made a prisoner by the Boers. Of course, some officers, especially the regular ones who have seen previous service, are decidedly popular, our present general, 'Mossy' Mahon, being an instance. There is no gold lace or cocked hat about him. He is in attire probably the strangest figure in the campaign. Picture to yourself a square-built man of middle age, wearing an ordinary brown cap (not a service one), a khaki coat, with an odd sleeve, breeches, and box-cloth gaiters, carrying a hooked cherrywood stick, and smoking a brier, and you have General Mahon.

"And now listen to this little story about him. A few days ago a Tommy was chasing a chicken near a farm on the line of march. Suddenly the cackling, fluttering, feathered one dashed in the direction of a plainly dressed stranger. 'Go it, mate; you've got un!' yelled the excited Tommy. Then, to his horror, he recognized the general, and, confused, tried to apologize. 'Not at all,' said the chief, and helped him to kill the bird. Then, telling him if he liked he could take it to his colonel, and say the general had helped him to kill it, he sauntered away.

"His favorite corps in the I. L. H., and he deems quite pained when they miss an opportunity of obtaining good loot, which once or twice they have done, owing to a stringent order from some one else against it."

The author shared, of course, in the hunt for De Wet, and in the course of his travels entered a good many farmhouses (the Sussex Company seems to have contained a fine lot of fowl looters) but never found the "good man" at home. This, he says, was the usual scene:

"Farmhouses of a humble order. A few timid Kafirs loitering around, also a few fowls and sleek-looking mongrels. Gentleman in khaki rides up, and in the door appear two or more round-faced women, wearing headgear of the baby bonnet mode, dirty-faced children in background.

"G. in K.—Where is your husband?

"Women.—Niet verstand.

"G. in K.—Where is your brother?

"Women.—Niet verstand.

"G. in K.—Is he on those kopjes, potting at us?

"Women.—Niet verstand.

"G. in K.—How many Boers have been past here?

"Women.—Niet verstand.

"G. in K.—(after more interrogatories and more 'Niet verstands')—Oh, hang it, good-by.

"Women (in distance)—Niet verstand.

"Verily, the 'niet verstand' or 'no savvee' game is a great one out here.

"Mr. Ross gained promotion to Corporal in a gallant attempt to save Lieutenant Stanley, the Somerset cricketer, who had been badly wounded in an affair from which it is surprising that any of the little party of Yeomen came out alive.

"Sir Elliot Lees, the other man, and myself were the only ones left in the donga, then, so the captain, taking hold of poor Stanley by his shoulders, and I his legs, we started to carry him off. As we picked him up, he insisted, in a voice like that of a drunken man, on somebody bringing his carbine and hat. 'Where's my rifle an' hat? Rifle an' hat!' The third man took them and gat. I heard this later. You have no idea what a weight a mortally wounded man is, and the poor fellow was in reality rather lightly built. On we went, stumbling over stones, a ditch, and into little chasms in the earth. Once or twice he mumbled, 'Not so fast, not so fast!' The bullets buzzed, whistled, and hummed by us, missing us by yards, feet and inches, knocking up the dust and hitting the stones and thorn bushes we staggered through. We, of course, presented a big mark for the Boers, and were not under any covering fire, so far as I am aware. The captain, who is grit all through, soon found it impossible to carry the poor fellow by the shoulders the weight being too much for him, so I offered, and we changed places, Sir Elliot taking his legs, and on we went, pausing, exhausted, perspiring and breathless, now and again, for a rest.

"At last, turning to our left, we reached a little bit of cover, thanks to a friendly rise in the ground, and, falling into a kind of deep rut, with Stanley's body on top of me, I waited while the captain went to see if he could get assistance. Presently he returned with a Somerset man, and a minute or so later a Fife fellow, a medical student, came up. The former and I then got him on a little further. After a few minutes' deliberation, the captain said reluctantly, 'We must leave him.' We all three asked permission to stay, to which Sir Elliot replied, 'I don't want to lose an officer and three men. Come away, men! We then moved the poor fellow into a cutting about two feet deep and three feet wide, and arranged a haversack under his head. As we loitered, each unwilling to leave him first, Sir Elliot thundered at us to come on, saying, 'I don't know why it is, but a Yeoman never will obey an order till you've sworn at him.' Then reluctantly we set off in single file."

ISTHMUS OF PANAMA IN HANDS OF REBELS

Colon Has Fallen Before a Sudden Attack, and Panama Is Now Being Assailed

FIGHTING TOOK PLACE IN THE STREETS.

Twelve Men Killed and Thirty Wounded in the Battle—U. S. Gunboat Present During the Fight

Colon, Columbia, Nov. 20.—The Liberals made an unexpected attack on Colon at 8 o'clock last night The Government was not prepared and there was little resistance. After some fighting in front of the Quartell and in certain streets for an hour and a half, the Liberals gained possession of all the public offices and the town of Colon.

The prefect, Guardia, is a prisoner.

There has been no telegraphic communication with Panama since last evening, and it is surmised here that Panama is now being attacked.

OFFICIALLY CONFIRMED.

Washington, Nov. 20.—The State Department has received officials confirmation of the capture of Colon by the Liberals. Transit was interrupted for a brief period, but is now restored. Captain Perry, of the Iowa, the senior naval officer at Panama, has been instructed to land marines to maintain transit across the Isthmus.

Was Reduced in Rank

Windsor, Nov. 20.—Lieut.-Col. Guillot, of the 21st Regiment, Essex Fusiliers, has reduced Staff-Sergt. Victor Roper in rank for refusing to obey the order of the commanding officer to dress in uniform for a church parade. On the day following the parade Roper sent in his resignation, which, however, was not accepted Instead, a summons was served upon him to appear in the police court for being absent from parade without leave. The magistrate found him guilty and imposed a fine, which was afterwards remitted. Lt.-Col. Guillot then referred the whole matter to Col. Peters, at London, commanding the district, and from him it went on to the militia authorities at Ottawa, with the result as stated above.

THE CHEMONG LAKE BRIDGE

Return of the Deputation from Ottawa—The Matter Settled

Warden Fitzgerald, County Councillor Anderson and Hawthorn, and Mr. J. B. McWilliams, returned yesterday from Ottawa, where they had an interview with the Minister of Railways and Canals, regarding the Mud Lake Bridge matter.

The Dominion Government, when the arrangement was made, agreed to pay one-third of the total cost. The Minister of Railways and Canals, in whose department the matter lies, in some way understood that the total cost was $22,000. However, it was $35,000, and the deputation went down to point this fact out. They were quite satisfied with their interview, and will, they believe, receive pretty nearly what they asked for.

GERMAN METHODS IN FRANCE DURING WAR

Levied Contributions Took Hostages, Shot Non-Uniformed Combatants

London, Nov. 20.—The Daily Chronicle, in replying to the charges of British severity in South Africa, says: "The German professors and students who are making such an outcry against the comparison between British methods in South Africa and German methods in France seem to have forgotten the history of their own country. The conduct of the German troops in France in the great Prussian war was regulated by 'Prussian Military Code,' which is not published, but which is believed to have served as the basis of the 'Instructions for the government of the armies of the United States in the field,' and this code certainly permits of greater rigor in the treatment of an enemy than has ever been applied to the Boers by British commanders.

"It is true that the German troops in France obtained the bulk of their supplies by the system of 'requisition', i.e., insisting on their delivery and paying for them, giving a paper acknowledgment where they had no ready money; but, on the other hand, they revenged themselves on certain towns and communities for their spirit of resistance by the levying of money and contributions. Thus, for example, Dieppe was fined £2,000 for a few shots fired from the deck of a French steamer at some Prussian dragoons riding along the beach. Paris itself was sentenced to pay a war fine of 200,000,000f. When General von Goeben occupied Dieppe he seized the tobacco factory, a Government building, as a lawful 'prize of war,' and, being unable to raise money on it by any other means, he threatened to burn it down unless the municipality redeemed it for 75,000f. Thus the Prussians exacted £3,000 from Dieppe, while still ranking it among the towns which had not yet been called upon to pay a regular war contribution.

MILITARY SEVERITY.

"In fact, the war was conducted with all possible severity from a military point of view, and fortified towns, with their women and children, were reduced by 'simple bombardment,' except in the case of Strassburg, where the attempt failed, and of Metz, where the system was impracticable. Any village in an occupied district harboring troops of any kind making an attack by surprise, was burned. The Prussian war code denies to the civilian the right under any circumstances to take up arms. In order to be treated as a soldier he must wear uniform, act under officers bearing commissions from the Government, and belong to a corps carrying on regular operations of war. All ununiformed guerillas were treated by Germans without mercy, and shot or sent to prison.

"Persons in plain clothes, fighting without authorization from their Government, would, if captured, be brought before a court-martial and sentenced to ten years' imprisonment in a German fortress, or, in aggravated cases, shot. On taking possession of a town, the invaders issued a proclamation promising security to the inhabitants on the following conditions: (1) All arms to be given up at the Mairie within two hours, each arm labelled with the name of the owner, so that it might be restored to him at some future time; after the lapse of two hours patrols would visit every house, when, if arms were discovered, the occupier would be treated with 'all the severity of military law.' (2) No groups to be formed in the streets (3) Shutters to be kept open, blinds drawn up. (4) The inhabitants to supply troops marching through the town with water. (5) No impediment to be offered to the advance of troops; anyone offering impediments to be offered to the advance of troops; anyone offering impediments of any kind will be at once taken and shot. The inhabitants were further warned that they must not cut the telegraph, or injure the railway, the penalty in every case being death. If the railway or telegraph was injured and the offender could not be discovered a heavy fine was imposed on the town or commune; and if the fine or the usual money contribution was not forthcoming hostages were taken and detained until it was paid.

UNDER MARTIAL LAW.

"Every invaded district was at once placed under martial law, and a Prussian administration of the severest kind set up. The truth is that in their dealings with the inhabitants of occupied districts the Prussians were influenced by reasons of what was expedient rather than what was just.

"In their war with the French the Germans practised, among other severities (1) the levying of contributions; (2) the taking of hostages; (3) the shooting of non-uniformed combatants and the non-commissioned combatants and the non-toleration of authorized levies en masse; and (4) the practice of military executions, whether by pillage or incendiarism. The late General Sheridan, during the course of that campaign, gave it as his opinion to Bismark that war, in what would ultimately prove to be the most merciful form, should be conducted in such a way as to leave nothing to the enemy but their eyes to weep over their miseries, but though the Germans did not altogether act upon this principle, they certainly believed in such a manner as to render ridiculous the present outburst of moral indignation on the part of the professors and students of Griefs-

BURGLARS AT WORK.

They Visited Valentia and Little Britain on Monday Night

Burglars entered the hotel of Joseph Jenkins on Monday night and stole $16 which they found in the till. Mr. Jenkins suspects that a stranger who spent some time about the hotel Monday evening was acting as a spy, and that the robbery was the work of a gang of thieves who are driving about the country. A vehicle was heard going south at an early hour yesterday morning, and in all probability it contained the men wanted.

Postmaster Wm. Sutton, of Valentia, is also a sufferer, and thinks the gang stopped long enough in their flight to pay him a most unwelcome visit. He mourns the loss of $15 in cash and $13 worth of stamps. No letters were taken.

Chief Nevison, of Lindsay, has been informed of the burglaries and has sent cards at once to the police of the district giving a description of the strange guest seen at Jenkins' hotel, and urging the arrest of any suspicious-looking parties. The description is as follows: "Sandy complexion, full beard and moustache, with a little shaved off under the lip, beard turning grey, red nose, dark clothes and dark overcoat, light colored soft felt hat."

GREAT COAL FIELD IN ALASKA

Enough Fuel to Supply the World for Many Years.

Port Townsend, Wash, Nov. 21.—An immense bed of bituminous coal, 300 miles along the Alaskan coast from the northern shores of Kotzebue Sound to the Arctic Ocean, is reported to exist by Captain Charles A. F. Brouards who has just returned from Point Hope.

Captain Brouards declares that there is enough coal to supply the world for many years to come. It is of but little value for steaming purposes, but is all right for household use.

HYPNOTIST IS BURIED ALIVE

Carl Atheno to Stay Under Ground a Week in Kansas City.

Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 21.—Carl Atheno, hypnotist, was buried in a vacant lot in the business center of Kansas City to-night while in a state of self-induced hypnosis. A watch was swung in front of his face and Atheno began to sway backward and forward until his body became rigid and he fell into the doctor's arms.

He was laid in a coffin and lowered into a grave and the dirt was shoveled in. The glass on the coffin, which was lighted by electricity, was not covered and through a shaft running down to the head the spectators could see the face of the hypnotist six feet below the surface.

Atheno is to lie under ground for a week. Local physicians are deeply interested in the burial.

"Boxers" Rob Christians

Brussels, Nov. 21.—Bishop Bermyn writes from Santaobotsu, in the province of Kansu, that the many Christians in that region are on the verge of starvation owing to the seizure by "boxers" of the ground formerly cultivated by them.

The bishop asserts that only the military assistance of the allies can avert a catastrophe.

A SMITH WEDDING

Marriage of Mr. Samuel McConkey to Miss Eunice Etta Cromie

A very pretty home wedding took place at the residence of Mr. Chas. Cromie, Smith, on Wednesday evening, Nov. 13th, when his eldest daughter, Miss Eunice E., was united in marriage to Mr. Samuel McConkey, of the same township.

The nuptial knot was tied by Rev. Mr. Nickle, in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends.

The bride, who was given away by her father, looked lovely in a dress of white silk, with veil and orange blossoms, and carried a bouquet of white chrysanthemums. She was assisted by Miss Annie McConkey, who was prettily attired in white organdie, and carried a bouquet of pink chrysanthemums. Mr. A. Lorne Cromie, brother of the bride, supported the groom.

Miss Cullen, of Peterborough, played the wedding march, and at the conclusion of the ceremony a wedding dejeuner was served, after which a very pleasant time was spent in social amusements. The Times joins in extending hearty congratulations.

CHARGE AGAINST THE BRITISH

Said to be Impressing American Boys Into Service in South Africa.

Washington, Nov. 21.—Frank Porter of Logansport, Ind., paid a visit to the State Department to-day and asked its assistance in securing the return home of his son. Lenon Porter, 15 years old, who sailed from New Orleans to Cape Town, South Africa, on Oct. 18. Mr. Porter said that, according to information received by him, the business of shipping boys to South Africa is being carried on by an employment agency in St Louis. The boys are engaged as muleteers and placed on board the British animal transports, which are engaged in carrying horses and mules to the British forces in South Africa. Just before reaching Cape Town, Mr. Porter is informed, the boys are told that they cannot go ashore unless they sign the ship's papers as British subjects. Only too glad to get on any land the boys sign, and Mr. Porter's informants say that they are immediately pressed into the British military service.

Mr. Porter said that he had received letters from young Americans who shipped from New Orleans on British animal transports, who asserted that many boys under 17 years of age were being secured for this service by the St. Louis employment agency. This agency, said Mr. Porter, received a commission of $3 for every boy employed by it for the British Government. He believes that hundreds of American minors have been forced to go into the British military service through the method referred to. His investigations have convinced him that for the past eighteen months transports have sailed from New Orleans for Cape Town at the rate of one a week, each carrying an average of eighty Americans shipped as muleteers.

The transport on which Lenon Porter shipped is due at Cape Town and the State Department sent a telegram to the United States Consul-General there to apprehend the boy when he comes ashore and send him back to the United States at Mr. Porter's expense.

BOER COMMANDS IN THE TOILS.

Beyers' and Badenhorst's Forces Rounded Up North of Pretoria

KILLED 3 AND CAPTURED 54

Much Stock and Munitions of War Also Captured — Campbell-Bannerman Attacks the Government

London, Nov. 20.—A despatch from Lord Kitchener, dated from Pretoria, to-day, says Lieutenant Colenbrander's column has rounded up Beyer's and Badenhorst's Boer commands 30 miles northwest of Pretoria. The troops killed three men, wounded three and captured fifty-four, including two field cornets. The column also captured much stock and munitions of war.

SUPPLIES TO THE BOERS.

London, Nov. 20.—The authorities are detaining a steamer at Victoria Docks, under the suspicion that she carries contraband of war. The captain stated that his ship was going on a pleasure cruise, and that he had orders to call at Hamburg. Subsequently the agents of the Government searched the vessel and discovered four field guns and quantities of other materials for the manufacture of explosives. The upper decks were fitted with bunks for the accomodation of five or six hundred men.

A COMPLICATED SITUATION.

London, Nov. 20.—The Times correspondent in Natal has written a lengthy statement on the aspect of the war. He says that the problem is a very complicated one and that both sides do not hesitate to exaggerate their victories and depreciate their defeats. Continuing, the correspondent reminds the English people that we have to deal with a very peculiar people, whose education consists largely of the belief that, as the chosen of God, they are called to be supreme in South Africa, and that the Amalekite Britisher is doomed to be eventually driven into the sea. They desire the return of the conditions existent in the days of the Great Trek, when they were left with the blacks as their slaves.

The condition in Natal is entirely different from the state of affairs in Cape Colony. In the former, the correspondent declares, the people are either thoroughly loyal or self-confessed rebels, but in the Colony thousands of Afrikanders do not know where they stand. He insists that there has been too much sentimental humbug; the Boers must be thoroughly beaten. The time for the British to be generous will be after the peace of the country has been assured.

GOVERNMENT ATTACKED.

London, Nov. 20.—The present Liberal leader, Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, made a strong attack on the Government's war policy last night. A Liberal Government would have prevented the Jameson raid, he declared, which was the determining cause of the present war. He maintained that unless the British changed their methods in South Africa, all the Dutch would become alienated violently.

Might Injure Canada

Ottawa, Nov. 20.—Mr. Tarte has been consulting leading grain men on the lakes with respect to the Montreal application to extend the privelige of American steamers to carry grain between Canadian ports till the close of the season, and he finds the weight of opinion is against the application being granted. Mr. Tarte regards the question as one of national policy, rather than expediency and takes the view if American steamers are again admitted to Canadian trade it may have serious effects upon Canada's efforts to establish a mercantile marine.

REQUEST FROM MONTREAL.

Montreal, Nov. 20.—A number of the leading Montreal grain men have communicated with Sir Wilfred Laurier and Mr. Tarte with a view to having the coasting laws so far as affects the carrying of grain from one Canadian port to another in foreign bottoms, abrogated for the remainder of the season. The severe storms which have recently prevailed on the lakes have caused practically all the vessels in the grain-carrying trade to lose a trip, the consequence being that skippers are now at a loss to fill their contracts before the season of navigation closes on the inland seas. According to the present Canadian laws no foreign bottom can carry merchandise from one Canadian port to another, this business being the monopoly of the Canadian vessels. This is done with the idea of protecting and fostering Canadian shipping and ordinarily works quite satisfactory. At the present time, however, this law, it is claimed, is found to work great harm to the trade as the delays occasioned by bad weather on the lakes have so crippled the exporter in the way of time that he finds that Canadian bottoms available are altogether insufficient to move the grain contracted for delivery.

Weather Notes

Probs: To-day—Light to moderate winds; fair, not much change in temperature.

Perfect Cure for Bronchitis

This can be treated only by a remedy carried to the affected parts along with the air breathed, for nature intended these organs for the passage of air alone, and sprays, atomizers and internal medicines utterly fail. But Catarrhozone doesn't fail, for it goes wherever the air breathed goes, and its healing antiseptic vapor is sure to reach every affected part. Catarrhozone is inhaled at the mouth and after passing through every air cell of the breathing organs is slowly exhaled through the nostrils. Catarrhozone protects and heals the inflamed surfaces, relieves congestion, allays inflammation, and perfectly cures all bronchial affections. Price $1. Small size, 25c. At druggists or from Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

PETERBOROUGH, NOVEMBER 21, 1901

A MAYOR DISQUALIFIED

Mayor Morris, of Ottawa, and Chief of Police Powell, of the same city, have had a misunderstanding and Powell threatened to use the police force to defeat the chief magistrate at the next municipal elections. A complaint laid before the commissioners resulted in the chief being told that he was not in New York, and that in Canada, and especially in Ottawa, wise civic servants did not meddle with municipal politics. Smarting under this deserved rebuke, the chief looked for revenge. He caused Mayor Morris to be served with a summons, asking him to tell the magistrate how it was that he came to purchase liquor after hours at the Russell House. Mayor Morris confessed that he had bought liquor after hours in what he considered the duty of hospitality belonging to his position as mayor, and which could hardly have been avoided in the circumstances he was placed. Rather than divulge the names of the gentlemen with him at the time he accepted the responsibility and was, according to the law, disqualified for two years from holding any municipal position.

A careful reference to the act revealed the true inwardness of the case, says the Citizen. Chapter 215, section 71, R. S. O., reads as follows:

If a member of any municipal council is convicted of having knowingly committed any offence under this act he shall in addition to any other penalty to which he might be liable under this act thereby forefit and vacate his seat, and shall be ineligible to be elected or sit or vote in any municipal council for two years thereafter; and if any person, after the forfeiture afore said, sits or votes in any municipal council he shall incur a penalty of $40 for every day he sits and votes.

The Citizen remarks that the idea of a public man with a record of twelve years' service in municipal politics, and one who has done such good service, as even his opponents are constrained to admit, being expelled from the position of chief magistrate and disqualified from holding office for two years on such trivial provocation is revolting to all feelings of justice and fair play.

A Dearth of "Hold-ups."

PREVIOUS to Mr. McKinley's first inauguration, his acquaintance with the members of his Cabinet was a very slight one, only Mr. Sherman being at all intimate with the Chief Executive. The getting acquainted was rather of slow progress, as all were engrossed in their new and intricate duties. One evening the conversation chanced to turn upon the youthful ambitions of the members. Each related his early plans for the future, and when Secretary Wilson's turn came, the Iowan said: "My ambition has not yet been realized. I wanted to be worth $1,000,000 and have two good pairs of suspenders at the same time. As yet, I have neither." The Cabinet unofficially laughed at this frank confession, and Secretary Gage, after a minute, confessed that he had never simultaneously possessed two pairs of dependable suspenders. Secretary Long remarked that when he graduated from Harvard he had two pairs of new trousers, each with good new galluses, but that the experience had never responded to an encore; while the now Justice McKenna said that, although he came from the Pacific Slope, two pairs of "hold-ups" were unknown to him. Others made similar confessions, and finally Secretary Bliss, the wealthiest man present, said with a laugh: "This seems to be a strange coincidence. Last Saturday evening Mrs. Bliss came in to my study and said: 'Papa, are you going out at all this evening?' I replied that I did not so intend, and asked the reason of her question. 'Oh, nothing,' she replied, 'only if you are not, Ed'—our son—'wants to use your only good suspenders.'"

As a sort of final course to this tale, Mr. McKinley tells that Secretary Wilson related this conversation at the breakfast table the morning following. Three of his children were present. It was in the early holiday season. Each of the children sat interested and observing. Christmas came, and in the stocking of the Secretary of Agriculture were found three dozen pairs of suspenders of a high degree of excellence. The children had remembered the story. All Secretary Wilson then needed to realize his youthful ambition was the $1,000,000.

And this is one of the very few humorous stories the late President told repeatedly with gusto.

APSLEY

The Apsley Hunting Club arrived home on the 13th inst. with nine fine deer. They were camped at Wolf Lake. The party who took part in the hunt were as follows: Benny Jones, (who being the only member with skill as a pratical dog hunter sent deer in all directions and the shooting of his party resembled the South African War); F. Dullied, (done as well as could be expected from a newly married man); Josie Eastland, (made out to capture one fine fawn, but he says he can do as well as that in Apsley); Carley Lan (he says if he could get the deer out on the hills he could make them come to his terms do—you mind!) M—d Coones, (who assisted Benny in starting the dogs but the dogs would not run from a "Coon", but had to take up a tree); Leeny Coones, (with his new gun, did not cut mutch of a shine,—he thinks it would make a better prop for a milk can than he would himself—he means it would not affect the contents).

—The building of a new church is also being started on the suburbs of the town. The choir is to be composed of the finest trained voices that Apsley can produce. Mr. Readhouse is taking a great intrest in the choir. By the way he has two tame raccoons who will come up to him and eat corn out of his hand.

—Mr. Wm. Gallon, our popular ex-Reeve, went to Peterborough this week. Mr. Gallon will again be a candidate for Reeveship. —Dr. Bell, our genial township clerk, is having plenty to do these days, considerable sickness being noted.

Building

Requires a foundation. That is just as true of the building up of the body as of the building of a house. The foundation of a strong body is a strong stomach. No man can be stronger than his stomach. A weak stomach means a weak man.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It enables the perfect digestion and assimilation of the food which is eaten. Thus it builds up the body and restores strength in the only way known to Nature or to science—by digested and assimilated food.

"While living in Charlotte, N. C., your medicine cured me of asthma and nasal catarrh of ten years' standing," writes J. L. Lumsden, Esq., of 211 Whitehall Street, Atlanta, Ga. "At that time life was a burden to me, and after spending hundreds of dollars under numerous doctors I was dying by inches. I weighed only 131 pounds. In twenty days after I commenced your treatment I was well of both troubles, and in six months I weighed 170 pounds and was in perfect health. I have never felt the slightest symptom of either since. Am sixty-five years old and in perfect health, and weigh 160 pounds. No money could repay you for what you did for me. I would not return to the condition I was in, in October, 1872, for Rockefeller's wealth."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets assist the action of the "Discovery," when a laxative is required.

SOME POSITIVE PROOFS

What is Being Told of Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills—Nature he Pay.

Dr. Clark's Little Red Pills cured me of kidney trouble of many years' standing, and after I had tried every other known remedy. Joseph Begley, Caledonia ave., Rochester, N.Y.

I was afflicted with rheumatism so badly at times that I could not walk. Nothing I took did me much good, until I tried Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills. Fiver boxes cured me entirely.

I had the misfortune to have suffered some years ago from paralysis, sustaining no less than three strokes. I could get nothing to do me any good until I was induced to try Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills. I took nine boxes, and although not by any means well, I think I am in a fair way to recovery. I can now walk with the aid of a stick and feel myself getting better every day. M. F. Mann, Merlin, N.Y.

Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills permanently cured me of backache. I suffered for years, and took two boxes. That is a year ago. I have not had a symptom since. James H. Jackson, Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.

I do not believe there is a medicine to compare with Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills. They cured me of indigestion and catarrh of the stomach, after nine years' suffering. H. S. Macdonald, G.T.R. shops, Montreal.

Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills are a positive and certain cure for la grippe, rheumatism, asthma, paralysis, catarrh, eczema, coughs, backache, indigestion, all stomach and liver troubles, female complaints, even when the disease have been standing for many years, the most stubborn cases will yield. Price 50 cents per box. For sale by Ormond & Walsh. The Canada Chemical Company will forfeit $10 for any case that these pills do not cure.

Dr. Clarke's Sure Cure for Catarrh, and Dr. Clarke's Sure Cure for Eczema, same price. $10 will be paid for any case they will not permanently cure.

"MATT."

A TALE OF A CARAVAN

"Indeed! Then, if that is the case why don't they take the treasure up and turn it into money?"

"Why? 'Cause them sand-hills is allus changing and shifting about they are; though they know well enough the things is there, there's no findin' of 'em!"

"I always thought William Jones was poor?"

"So he is, he says!" replied Matt "cause, though he be allus foraging, he don't find much now on account o' them coast-guard chaps."

After they had rested themselves they went a little further up the cliff, then they followed a narrow winding path which brought them to the shore below. Here Matt who seemed to be pretty well grounded in the history of the place, pointed him out the wonders of the coast. She showed him the caves, which tradition said had been formerly used as wreckers haunts and treasure-stores, but which were now washed by the sea, and covered with slimy weeds; then she brought him to a promontory where they told her she herself had been found. This spot Brinkley examined curiously, then he looked at the girl.

"I suppose you had clothes on when you came ashore, didn't you Matt?"

"Why, of course I had. William Jones has got 'em!"

"Has he? Where?"

"In his cave, I expect."

"His cave! Where is that?" asked Brinkley, becoming very much interested.

"Dunno," returned Matt; "perhaps it's somewhere here about. I've seen William Jones come about here, I have, but I never could track him!"

Matt's information on the subject was so vague that it seemed useless to institute a search; so, after a regretful look at the rocks, Brinkley proposed that they should saunter back along the shore.

"By the way," said he, "I want you to introduce me to William Jones."

"To William Jones?"

"Yes. Strange as the fancy may seem to you, I should like for once in my life to stand face to face with a real live wrecker."

They made their way back along the coast, until they reached William Jones' cottage.

"William Jones," said she, "here be the painter!"

By the light of the flickering rushlight Brinkley now looked about him. At a glance he noted some of the details of the queer little room; then his eyes fell upon the occupants whom, from Matt's description, he recognized as William Jones, and the grizzly author of his being.

The old man, who, Brinkley perforce admitted, certainly bore some resemblance to the Rembrandtish head which Matt had recognised, sat dozing fitfully by the hearth, while his son was busily employed in mending an old lantern.

Upon the entrance of Brinkley, the lantern was quickly thrown aside, and William Jones, assuming a most obsequious manner, hastened to give a welcome to the stranger. Brinkley was amused. He accepted William Jones' offer of a seat, then he lit up his brier-root pipe, and while smoking lazily, he put a few questions to his host. But if he expected to gain information of any kind he was soon undeceived. William Jones was no fool. Combined with excessive avarice, he possessed all the cunning of the fox, and the moment he saw that the stranger was pumping him, he was on his guard.

Presently, however, his curiosity gained the day. Categorically, in his turn, he began to question Brinkley about his doings.

"I suppose now, master," said he, "you travel about a deal in that cart o' your'n?"

Brinkley explained that the "cart" in question had been in his possession only a few months.

"But I traveled a good deal before I got it," he explained. "This time last year I was in Ireland."

"In Ireland, master?"

"Yes, on the west coast; do you know it?"

William Jones shook his head.

"There be plenty wreck there, ain't there?" said he suddenly.

"Wreck?" repeated Brinkley.

"Yes, I've heard tell o' wonderful storms and big ships breaking up. Look ye now, they do tell wonderful tales; and I wonder sometimes if all they says be true."

Brinkley looked at his host for a minute or so in silent wonder, for the little man was transformed.

"Wreck!" said the father. "Ay, there it be, driftin' in wi' the wind and the tide, William— driftin' in wi' the tide."

"Shut up, old man," said William, giving his father a nudge; then turning again to Brinkley, he said, "Be them tales true, master?"

"Eh? Oh, yes; perfectly true," said Brinkley, being in a lively humor and determined to give his host a treat.

The expression in the eyes of William Jones became even more greedy.

"P'raps," he said, "you've seen some of them wrecks?"

"Dear me, yes," answered Brinkley, determined to give the reins to his imagination. "I've seen any number of them. Huge ships broken up like matchboxes, and every soul on board them drowned; then afterward—"

"Ah, yes, mister," said William Jones, eagerly, as the other paused; "arter—"

"Well, afterward, my friend, I've seen treasures come ashore that would have made you and me, and a dozen others such, rich for life."

"Dear, dear! and what become of it, mister— tell me that?"

"What became of it?" repeated Brinkley, whose imagination was beginning to give way; "why, it was appropriated, of course, by the population."

"And didn't you take your share, mister?"

"I?" repeated Brinkley, who was getting muddled; "well, no;— firstly, because I did not wish to — I have a superstitious horror o' wearing dead men's things; and secondly, because I could not have done so had I wished. The people are clannish; they wanted it all for themselves, and would have killed any interfering stranger."

"I suppose, mister, there be no coast-guard chaps there?" said William Jones.

"Oh, dear, no! No coast-guards."

"Ah!" sighed the old man, coming out of his trance. "It warn't so long ago when there warn't no coast-guard chaps here neither. Then times was better for honest men. On a dark night 'twas easy to put a light on the headland, and sometimes we got a prize or two that way, didn't we, William dear? but now—"

"You shut up!" roared William, giving his parent a very forcible dig in the ribs. "You don't know what you're talkin' about, you don't. The old 'un is a bit queer in the head, master," he explained; "and he's allus a-dreamin', he is. There ain't no prizes here, the Lord knows; it's a'most as much as we can do to git a bit o' bread. Matt knows that; don't ee', Matt?"

But whatever Matt knew she evidently meant to keep to herself, for she gave no reply. Presently, after a little more general conversation, Brinkley rose to go. He offered a two-shilling piece to William Jones; and, somewhat to his amazement, that worthy accepted it gratefully.

"Good-by, Matt," said Brinkley. But in a trice Matt was beside him.

"I'm going to show you the way," she explained as she went out with him into the air.

"Whew!" said Brinkley when they were fairly clear of the cabin; "the open air is better than that den; but then William Jones is very poor, isn't he, Matt?"

"He says he is."

"But don't you believe it?"

"P'raps I do, and p'raps I don't; it don't matter to you, does it?"

"Not the least in the world."

They went on for a while in silence, then Matt, who had been furtively watching his face all the while, spoke again:

"You ain't angry, are you, master?" she asked.

"I angry— what for?"

"'Cause I said that just now."

"Dear me, no; whatever you might say, Matt, wouldn't offend me."

If he expected to please her by this he was mistaken.

"That's cause you don't care. Well, I don't care neither, if you don't."

She ran a little ahead of him, and continued to precede him until she gained the last sand-hill, and caught a glimpse of the Caravan. Then she paused.

"You don't want me to go no further, do you?"

"No."

"All right— good by."

She gave a bound, like a young deer, and prepared to start for a swift run back, but the young man called her.

"Matt, come here!"

She came up to him. He put his arm about her shoulders, bent over her upturned face, and kissed her. In her impulsive way, Matt returned the kiss ardently; then, to her amazement, she gave one strange look into his eyes— blushed violently, and hung her head.

"Come, give me another, Matt," he said.

But Matt would not comply. With one jerk she freed herself from him; then, swift as lightning she ran back across the hills toward the sea.

CHAPTER VII.

Matt Grows Matrimonial.

That night the young man of the Caravan had curious dreams, and throughout them all moved like a presiding fairy, Matt of Aberglyn. Sometimes he was wandering on stormy shores, watching the wrecks of mighty argosies; again, he was in mysterious caverns underneath the ground, searching for and finding buried treasure; still again, he was standing on the decks of storm-tossed vessels, while the breakers thundered close at hand, and the bale-fires burned on lonely headlands. But at all times, and in all places, Matt was his companion.

And, curiously enough, Matt in his dream was very different to the Matt of waking reality; taller and brighter —in fact as beautiful as a vision can be; so that his spirit was full of a strange sensation of love and pity, and the touch of the warm little hand disturbed his spirit with mysterious joy. So vivid did this dream become at last, that he found himself seated on a sunny rock by the sea, by Matt's side; and he was talking to her like a lover, with his arm around her waist; and she turned to him, with her great eyes fixed on his, and kissed him over and over again, so passionately that he awoke!

It was blowing hard, and the rain was pelting furiously on the roof of the Caravan. He tried to go to sleep again, but the face of Matt (as he had seen it in his dream) kept him a long time awake.

"Now young man," he said to himself, "this is idiotic. In the first place, Matt, is a child, not a young woman; in the second place, she is a vulgar little thing, not a young lady; in the third place, you ought to be ashamed of yourself for thinking of sentiment at all in such a connection. Is your brain softening, youngster? or are you laboring under the malign influence of William Jones? The kiss you gave to this unsophisticated daughter of the desert was paternal, or say, amicable; it was a very nice kiss, but it has no right to make you dream of stuff and nonsense."

But the influence of the dream was over him, and in that half-sleeping, half-waking state, he felt like a boy in love. He found himself calculating the age of his own friend. Let him see! it was fifteen years since, in her own figurative expression, she "come ashore," and the question remained, How old was she on that interesting occasion? As far as he could make out from her appearance, she could not be more than sixteen. For a damsel of that age, her kiss was decidedly precocious.

At last he tumbled off again, and dreamed that Matt was a young lady of beautiful attire and captivating manners, to whom he was "engaged;" and her speech, strange to say, was quite poetical, and refined; and they walked together, hand in hand, to a country church on a green hillside, and were just going to enter, when who should appear upon the threshold but Mr. Monk, of Monkshurst? But they passed him by, and stood before the altar, where the parson stood in his white robes, and when the parson asked aloud whether any one saw any just reason or impediment that they should not be joined in holy matrimony, the same Monk stepped forward, with a Mephistophelian smile, and cried, "Yes, I do!" On which the young man woke again in agitation, to find that it was broad daylight and a fine fresh summer morning.

Whom should he find waiting for him when he had dressed himself and stepped from the house on wheels but Matt herself! Yes, there she was, as wild and quaintly-attired as ever quite unlike the ethereal individual

South African Affairs.

Bloemfontein, Nov. 19.—On Thursday last Ackerman's commando was located by a detachment of Bedford Mounted Infantry, under Cols. Jebb and Hall. The commando divided when the mounted infantry appeared, one galloping in the direction of Reddersburg and the other to Vlakfontein. The British separated in pursuit, twenty-five were captured and the rest escaped. The British horses were in an exhausted condition, but the wiry little Boer ponies were still fresh, when the chase necessarily terminated.

Brussels, Nov. 19.—A local paper asserts that the family of former President Steyn, of the Orange Free State, has been asked to leave South Africa.

London, Nov. 19.—The War Office has been informed by Lord Kitchener that during the past fortnight 43 Boers have been killed, 16 wounded, 291 captured and six surrendered.

Lieutenant Prince W. N. Radziwell was dangerously wounded at Dwecfontein on November 14th.

BRITISH HORSES POOR.

from Berlin, state that Baron Von Heeckerin, Transvaal representative in Germany, recently addressed an audience in the following strain: "The Boers henceforth will save their bullets for British officers. The latest orders to the Boer troops are that every burgher sharp-shooter shall pick out British officers. Brakenlaagte afforded the first evidence of the new tactics. It is hoped to strip the British army of its commanders and bring the costliness and sadness of war home to Great Britain's first families."

London, Nov. 19.—In a recent letter to Miss Milner, acknowledging a vote of confidence passed in his Government by a ladies' society, Lord Salisbury said:

"We need such encouragement, for England is, I believe, the only country in which during a great war, eminent men write and speak publicly as if they belonged to the enemy."

A MARVELLOUS MEDICINE

"No Cure, No Pay," is the Newest Proposal of the Proprietors of Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—We make the following proposal to the readers of the Times: To any one who is a subject of rheumatism (no matter how long standing) or any blood disease, as enumerated below, and will give Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills a fair trial and do not find a perfect cure we will refund the money paid for the pills. If no substantial improvement is observed, we will in addition, pay $10 in cash on satisfactory evidence being supplied us to this effect.

We have yet to know of a single case where these wonderful pills have not been almost entirely successful in effecting a cure. CANADA CHEMICAL CO.

Ex-Ald. Bailey, St. John's, writes: I cannot speak too highly of Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills. They worked a miracle in my case, and cured me after many years of suffering. I do not think their equal is to be obtained.

Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills are a positive and certain cure for la grippe, rheumatism, asthma, paralysis, catarrh, eczema, coughs, backache, indigestion, all stomach and liver troubles, female complaints, even when the diseases having been standing for many years, the most stubborn cases will yield. Price 50 cents per box. For sale by Ormond & Walsh. The Canada Chemical Company will forfeit $10 for any case that these pills do not help.

and Dr. Clarke's Sure Cure for Eczema same price. $10 will be paid for any case they will not permanently cure.

REV. DR. MORRIS WECHSLER
Rabbi of the Cong. Bnai Israel.
NEW YORK, Jan. 3, 1901.

DRS. TAFT BROS.' MEDICINE CO.:

Gentlemen: Your Asthmalene is an excellent remedy for Asthma and Hay Fever, and its composition alleviates all troubles which combine with asthma. Its success is astonishing and wonderful.

After having it carefully analysed, we can state that Asthmalene contains no opium, morphine, chloroform or ether. Very truly yours,

REV. DR. MORRIS WECHSLER.

AVON SPRINGS, N. Y., Feb. 1, 1901.

DR. TAFT BROS. MEDICINE CO.

Gentlemen: I write this testimonial from a sense of duty, having tested the wonderful effect of your Asthmalene, for the cure of Asthma. My wife has been afflicted with spasmodic asthma for the past 12 years. Having exhausted my own skill as well as many others, I chanced to see your sign upon your windows at 130th street, New York. I at once obtained a bottle of Asthmalene. My wife commenced taking it about the 1st of November. I very soon noticed a radical improvement. After using one bottle her asthma has disappeared and she is entirely free from all symptoms. I feel that I can consistently recommend the medicine to all who are afflicted with this distressing disease. Yours respectfully,

O. D. PHELPS, M. D.

DR. TAFT BROS. MEDICINE CO.

Gentlemen: I was troubled with Asthma for 22 years. I have tried numerous remedies but they have all failed. I ran across your advertisement and started with a trial bottle. I found relief at once. I have since purchased your full-size bottle and I am ever grateful. I have a family of four children and for six years was unable to work. I am now in the best of health and am doing business every day. This testimony you can make such use of as you see fit.

Home address, 235 Rivington street.

S. RAPHAEL,
67 East 129th st., City.

Trial Bottle Sent Absolutely Free on Receipt of Postal.

Do not delay. Write at once, addressing DR. TAFT BROS.' MEDICINE CO., 79 East 130th St., N. Y. City.

Permanent Cures of Cancer

We here give a few cases where the efficacy of our Constitutional treatment in curing Cancer, is established beyond all question. We have plenty on fyle.

There is ample proof that where our remedy cures, it cures to stay and saves people from the torture of knife and plaster.

CANCER OF THE BREAST—A lady had Cancer of the breast, which rendered her right shoulder and arm almost helpless. Our remedy cured her over five years ago, and there is not the slightest return of the trouble.

CANCER OF THE FACE—This case of a gentleman who was so bad that his right cheek was almost eaten off with the disease. Plasters aggravated his trouble. Our treatment cured him five years ago and he has been all right since.

CANCER OF THE STOMACH—Doctors pronounced the trouble cancer of the stomach. There was vomiting of material that looked like Coffee grounds. Great weakness and prostration. Cured over four years ago and well to-day.

CANCER OF THE NOSE—A severe case which was cured by our remedy in 1891 and has never returned to this day.

Full accounts of the above cases, together with the names and addresses of the persons, are given in our new book, "Cancer, its Cause and Cure," sent to anyone, in plain wrapper on receipt of 2 stamps. Stott & Jury, Bowmanville, Ont.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

Local Happenings Picked Up Here and There by The Times.

NOTE.—The Times requests its readers to contribute items of news to its columns. Anything that is phoned or sent in writing to the office, of a nature suitable for publication, will be received and published.—Ed. Times.

—Navigation has been closed in the Lindsay river.

—Laborers are scarce in Peterborough just now.

—Three big novels by the very best authors for 25 cents at Times Bookstore.

—When a dentist, separates a man from a tooth the parting gives him pain.

—Mr. Frost, the popular local jeweller, is a firm believer in printer's ink. Read his ad. in to-day's issue.

—The Dan Spence Memorial subscribers meet this evening in the Council Chamber.

—Saturday bargain day at Times Bookstore, double trading stamps given on purchases of 25 cents or over.

—The band has secured two new players lately. The latest acquisition was a cornet player, who is said to be a fine musician.

—We ask as a special favor that the thousands of readers of the Times will give the advertisers in this journal the preference when making their purchases.

—A fakir was around taking orders from local dressmakers for a fashion journal. Several dressmakers paid the sum $3.50, and are out just this amount.

—The argument in the Trading Stamp case was before the Court of Appeal yesterday, and is continued to-day. It is, of course, purely technical.

—Have your Xmas photos taken at Whiten's as soon as possible, if you want them finished before the Holidays. Studio corner George and Hunter streets, west side.

—The entertainment in St. Luke's Church last night was a great success. A most entertaining programme was presented, and a very enjoyable evening spent.

—Messrs. Grant & Ross are opening out in the Grand Central hotel block, where they will carry on business in electrical supplies. The firm are practical mechanics, and desire liberal patronage.

—Mr. and Mrs. George Thomas and three children of Lindsay, had a narrow escape from being burned to death on Monday night, having made their escape from their burning blazing home in their night clothes.

—Partridges may be killed for your own use or you can give them away, but they cannot be sold. The earliest date at which they can be sold is September 15, 1905, four years hence, and no partridge can be supplied until that date as part of a meal by any hotel or restaurant keeper, even if specially licensed to supply game in season at meals.

—A good many people, during the last week or two, have been annoyed to discover the taste of grass or garlic in their butter. They are accustomed to such tastes in the spring, but to come upon them now in the late fall fills them with surprise and anger. "How about this?" they ask, and the dairymen reply: "It is the peculiar mildness of the season that is to blame. We have had no fall, no fall, at all, and, deceived by the strong sunlight and the mild airs, garlic, grass and a hundred other little springtime vegetables have shot up in the pasture fields. The cattle have eaten them, and the butter has been made grassy or garlicky. This is the first time in many, many years that grass or garlic butter has been on the market in November."

An Item of Interest

Many interesting plays and concerts will be presented at Bradburn's Opera House this winter, but none are likely to become more popular than the Star Series of Entertainments, to be presented by the Great Eastern Lyceum Bureau. There will be five concerts in all, and a more pleasing and interesting assortment would be hard to find. The talent has been brought from all over Canada and the United States, and is the best that can be secured. The prices will be reasonable: $1.00 for the entire course. Prospectus at Ormond & Walsh's drug store or at Gordon's printery.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Events Under This Head Transpiring in and Around Peterborough.

NOTE.—The Times requests its readers to furnish it on paper with items of a personal and social nature either by phone or in writing.—Ed Times

—Mr. Louie Fobert was in town yesterday on his way to Toronto on business.

—Mr. M. Cain, Bobcaygeon, is in town on business, and favored the Times with a call.

—Rev. W. L. Armitage has been elected assistant secretary of the Archdeaconry of Peterborough.

—Mr. Adam Scott of Tacoma, Washington, is in town, visiting his brother Mr. Walter Scott, Charlotte street.

—Mr. M. T. Ostram, manager of Ontario agencies, of the National Life Assurance Company, was in town yesterday, en route to his business headquarters, Toronto.

An Interesting Meeting

An interesting missionary meeting was held in St. Paul's church last night, and was addressed by Rev. Dr. Robertson, Superintendent of Northwest Missions, Rev. J. A. Macdonald, editor of the Westminster, and Mr. John Penman, of Paris. There was a large attendance and much interest manifested.

Protestant Home

The committee of management of the P. P. Home gratefully acknowledge the following donations for the month of October: Mrs. Burnham, Toronto papers; Mr. Wade, basket of grapes; A Friend, two pairs of chickens; Mrs. (Dr.) Halliday, clothing; Mr. Robert Fife, bag of apples; Mrs. J. D. Harper, reading matter; Mrs. Goodfellow, reading matter; Mr. J. A. Cameron, clothing.

Wedding Anniversary

The home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Johnston was the scene of a very pleasant event on Monday evening, when a number of friends joined in reminding them of the 15th anniversary of their wedding, by giving them a surprise party and presenting Mr. and Mrs. Johnston with a number of beautiful presents. A delightful evening was spent, the guests departing in the "wee sma' hours." The Times joins in wishing the host and hostess many happy returns.

Wedding Bells

At St. Peter's cathedral on Tuesday afternoon Miss Amelia Ranger, daughter of Mr. Moses Ranger, Parnell street, was united in marriage to Mr. James Houlihan, of town. The bridesmaid was Miss Adelaide Ranger, sister of the bride, and the best man Mr. John Houlihan, of Downeyville, brother of the groom. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. O'Brien. Mr. and Mrs. Houlihan will reside on Parnell street. The groom is the genial wine clerk of the [illegible] Hotel, and the many beautiful presents he received only testify to the esteem in which he is held.

Accidentally Killed

Mr. Wm. Gray, Water street, an employee of the Geo. Matthews Co., received a sad message yesterday afternoon announcing the death of his adopted father, Mr. L. Sharp, of [illegible] (near [illegible]), who died from the effects of a kick of a horse. Mr. Gray left last night on the nine o'clock train to attend the funeral, which takes place Friday at one o'clock. The family, who are four in number, (the youngest a boy of seven), will have deep-felt sympathy, all the more so on account of their double trouble, having a few short months ago buried their mother.

A Presentation

Miss Clara Clark, a graduate of the Nicholls Hospital Training School for Nurses, was on Tuesday evening presented by the members of St. John's choir, with a clinical thermometer enclosed in a handsome sterling silver case. Miss Clark left yesterday for New York, where she will fill a position in St. Andrew's Convalescent Home. She carries with her the hearty good wishes of a very large circle of friends.

A Cathedral Wedding

A wedding of considerable local interest took place yesterday at St. Peter's cathedral, when Mr. Bert Kennedy, of the Queen's hotel, was united in marriage to Miss Maggie McCarthy, daughter of Mr. Jeremiah McCarthy, Lake street. The Ven. Archdeacon Casey tied the nuptial knot, in the presence of a number of invited guests.

The bride was charmingly attired in a gown of blue silk velvet, with point lace and carried a bouquet of flowers. She was supported by her sister, Miss Annie Mr. Timothy Carnahan acted as groomsman.

After a wedding breakfast, the happy couple departed for Toronto, Hamilton, Buffalo and Rochester, carrying with them the hearty good wishes of a very large number of friends.

EASY FOOD.

Ready for Instant Use Without Cooking.

Almost everyone likes a cereal food of some kind at breakfast and supper, but the ordinary way of cooking cereals results in a pasty mass that requires strong digestive power to get along with, and if not properly digested, the raw mass goes down into the intestinal tract where gas is generated and all sorts of troubles set up.

Everyone knows that good food properly digested keeps the body well, while poor food, or even food of good quality that is poorly prepared and not digested, is sure to bring on some kind of disease.

The easiest food to digest in this line is Grape-Nuts, made from wheat and barley, and cooked thoroughly at the factory, some ten or twelve hours being consumed in the different processes of preparation. The food, therefore, is ready for instant service and the starch has been changed to Grape Sugar, so that it is pre-digested and ready for almost immediate assimilation.

Miss R. E. Phillips, a young lady at 3366 Vernon Ave., Chicago, writes that she suffered for years from indigestion and dyspepsia from the use of food that was not suitable to her powers of digestion.

She says, "I began using Grape-Nuts, and I confess to having had a prejudice, at first, and was repeatedly urged before I finally decided to try the food, but I have not known what indigestion is since using it, and have never been stronger or in better health. I have increased in weight from 100 to 124 pounds."

People can be well, practically without cost, if they will adopt scientific food and leave off the indigestible sort.

Grape-Nuts Food is sold at all first-class groceries. It is crisp and delicious to the taste. It should be served exactly as it comes from the package, without cooking, except in cases where it is made up into puddings and other desserts.

What Became of the Pompeians?

MAX NORDAU raises an interesting question concerning Pompeii. He writes as follows to the "Neue Freie Presse" (Vienna):

"One thing has always been a puzzle to me. Here was a flourishing city of about 30,000 inhabitants, most of whom evidently were well-to-do. A few hundreds, at most, lost their lives in the destruction of the city; the rest escaped. The eruption of Vesuvius continued only a few days, after which the district returned to its usual placid condition. In many places the deposit of ashes and lava was only a yard thick, and it was not more than three yards thick at any point yet excavated.

"How did it happen that these 30,000 homeless persons showed no desire to return to their beautiful houses, so well built that they are standing to this day, and which could have been restored, at the time, with very little labor? Why did they not make the slightest attempt to regain their valuable property in land and buildings, furniture, bronze, gold, silver and jewels? Did the men of that time have so little love of home that they could leave it without a backward glance at the first unpleasantness? Were the Pompeians so rich that the loss of their perfectly appointed homes appeared trivial to them, so that they preferred settling elsewhere to restoring their city? Or did superstition prevent the attempt?

"This indifferent renunciation of their patrimony by a whole cityful is to me an insoluble enigma which forces itself the more strongly upon my attention now as I walk along the finely paved streets between houses which need only new roofs to make them again habitable."

For Sale—An Island Kingdom.

The chance is now open to any millionaire to own an island kingdom or to become a Highland lord and live in an historic castle. The advertisement offering these estates appeared in some United States newspapers, and was signed by the business agent of the Duke of Argyll.

"The Island Kingdom of Tiree," as the advertisement calls it, is one of the Inner Hebrides, an island about thirteen miles long and nowhere more than six miles wide. It is only twenty feet above the level of the sea, and there are hardly any trees on it; but the land is mostly fertile, and the tenants, who live by farming, cattle-raising and fishing, pay the duke rentals aggregating more than fifteen thousand dollars a year.

"Excellent winter bathing, good golf links, splendid beaches, safe bathing and good sea-fishing" are some of the island's attractions that might be expected to appeal to a purchaser.

Inverary Castle, Argyllshire, the ancestral abode of the Dukes of Argyll, is also advertised; but it is not an ancient building. The oldest part of it dates back to a period not earlier than 1750, and much of the castle has been rebuilt since 1877.

The scenes pictured by Scott in the "Legend of Montrose" were supposed to have taken place in what is known as the "old" castle, which stood near the sea and has been quite swept away. No such romantic interest attaches to the present castle.

But the man who buys the island kingdom of Tiree—or Tyree, as some of the books call it—will probably find in modern fiction a good many allusions to it. From the novels of William Black alone might be compiled a pretty good guide-book to the Hebrides, islands that, as another admirer has said, are "beautiful in calm, wonderful in storm."

President Loubet's Wardrobe

A correspondent of the "Cri de Paris" has ascertained certain facts in regard to President Loubet's wardrobe which are being copied with extraordinary avidity by the Parisian and provincial press. It seems that M. Loubet has five Prince Albert coats—two for summer, two for winter, and one extra for grand occasions. This last one has been worn only three times—at the opening of the exposition of 1900, at the reception of the King of Sweden, and at the garden party in honor of the Shah of Persia. This "gala" coat differs from the others in that it has heavy silk lining and lapels. M. Loubet invariably wears a plain, black satin tie—not tied by hand, but sewn together and attached with a clasp. M. Loubet used formerly to wear false cuffs, but one day, while making a sudden gesture, the right-hand cuff slipped off and rolled on the floor. This happened at the Luxembourg Palace, when M. Loubet was president of the Senate. Since then, M. Loubet's shirts have been made with permanently attached wristbands. M. Loubet's trousers are very peculiar. They are black or gray in color, but their cut is of the old-fashioned pattern, with the top of the trousers coming up as high as the armpits. M. Loubet has always worn trousers of this quaint type, and is so accustomed to them that he has an inveterate dislike for evening clothes, which, with low-cut, open waistcoat, render the armpit trousers impossible. The president's wardrobe is, however, provided with several pairs of evening trousers suitable for low-cut, open waistcoats.

Australia's Governor-General

It is feared in some quarters that the Earl of Hopetoun will not be able to complete his term as Governor-General of Australia. His Lordship has never entirely shaken off the effects of the illness which prostrated him in India on his way out to Australia, and though he was really prominent as the host of the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall, he has since, owing to his unsatisfactory health, been unable to fulfil many of his public engagements.

Proof Adduced.

"Everybody says the baby is just like me."

"What nonsense. Why, it hasn't said a word since it was born."

A Hopeless Case.

"Are the Gugglestons in such reduced circumstances?" "Oh, yes. Why, I understand they are obliged now to live within their income."—N.Y. "Life."

Where Medicine Fails to cure rheumatism, and all the time you suffer dreadfully, why don't you get a bottle of Polson's Nerviline and try that? Rub it into your stiff joints, sore arms, lame back, bent shoulders—wherever the pain is. Nerviline has cured plenty of people in this way, and that ought to be proof enough that it will cure you too. It is an unusually strong liniment that cures rheumatism in unusually quick time. Best household liniment known. 25 cents.

Diamonds

Diamonds are the most interesting of all jewels. They've figured in history, poetry and song. They've linked hearts together, provided ready money, and are to-day what they have been in all ages of the world's history—the most precious and beautiful ornaments. Nothing more acceptable or economical as a gift to one's self or one's friend. Diamonds are always worth their money, especially if you buy them from us, and there is no reason for paying more than our moderate price.

The Contract Let

The contract for the machinery for the Central Milling Company's new flour mill has been given to the Stratford Milling Company. The machinery will cost [illegible] and will be modern. In fact the mill will be equipped with all the latest appliances and machinery for the manufacture of the higher grades of flour and other produce. The capacity of the mill will be 175 barrels every 24 hours.

The mill will be 40x40, four stories and will be completed and ready for operation in March next.

Next year an elevator, 40x40, will be erected.

The Central Milling Company is a farmers' institution, the controlling stock being in the hands of 200 of the leading agriculturists of the district. Its success is doubly assured from this fact.

THE CLACHAN SPLORE

Preparations for the Great Scottish Event About Concluded

The Clachan Splore, a Scotch merrymaking, which will take place in the Opera House on Thursday afternoon and evening next (Thanksgiving Day), promises to be a magnificent affair. A programme of unusual merit has been arranged, consisting of Prof. Sheets' trained class of twenty lads and lassies in Highland costume, introducing a series of captivating exhibitions of Scottish and other fancy dances, including the Highland fling, the sailors' hornpipe, Scotch reel, Lorne or ribbon reel, skirt dance, sword dance, tambourine dance, etc. The perfect execution, graceful motions, pretty poses and sylph-like evolutions, will constitute a pleasing feature.

Prof. McKay, the versatile humorist and character delineator, irresistible laughter-provoking mimic in numerous readings, sketches and impersonations.

Madame Palmira Benvine, the brilliant and gifted vocalist, who has been honored by appearing before the crowned heads and distinguished personages of Europe.

Miss Curry, elocutionist, in Scottish readings.

A detachment of Highland pipers from the 48th Highlanders, Toronto, will also be present and render some soul-stirring Scottish airs on the bagpipes.

The price of admission will be 25c., 35c., and 50c. Plan of the hall at Grand Trunk ticket office on and after Saturday.

SOME POSITIVE PROOFS

What is Being Told of Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills—No Cure No Pay.

Dr. Clark's Little Red Pills cured me of kidney trouble of many years' standing, and after I had tried every other known remedy. Joseph Begley, Caledonia ave., Rochester, N.Y.

I was afflicted with rheumatism so badly at times that I could not walk. Nothing I took did me much good, until I tried Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills. Five boxes cured me entirely.

I had the misfortune to have suffered some years ago from paralysis, sustaining no less than three strokes. I could get nothing to do me any good until I was induced to try Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills. I took nine boxes, and although not by any means well, I think I am in a fair way to recovery. I can now walk with the aid of a stick and feel myself getting better every day. M. F. Mann, Merlin, N.Y.

Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills permanently cured me of backache. I suffered for years, and took two boxes. That is a year ago. I have not had a symptom since. James H. Jackson, Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.

I do not believe there is a medicine to compare with Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills. They cured me of indigestion and catarrh of the stomach, after nine years' suffering. H. S. Macdonald, G.T.R. shops, Montreal.

Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills are a positive and certain cure for la grippe, rheumatism, asthma, paralysis, catarrh, eczema, coughs, backache, indigestion, all stomach and liver troubles, female complaints, even when the diseases have been standing for many years, the most stubborn cases will yield. Price 50 cents per box. For sale by Ormond & Walsh. The Canada Chemical Company will forfeit $10 for any case that these pills do not cure.

Dr. Clarke's Sure Cure for Catarrh, and Dr. Clarke's Sure Cure for Eczema, same price. $10 will be paid for any case they will not permanently cure.

SIR CHARLES TUPPER APPROVES ANOTHER AFRICAN CONTINGENT

Hopes for Another Contingent and Endorses Sir Wilfrid and Charlton on Reciprocity.

Thinks the Government Should Raise, Organize and Equip a Regiment.

The Veteran Statesman Believes Canada is Making Splendid Headway.

Sir Charles Tupper passed through yesterday on his way to Ottawa, attended the annual meeting of the Crown Life Assurance Company, of which he is president. He was seen by The Times, in regard to public matters. The veteran politican looked hale and hearty, and appeared to be in the best of health Lady Tupper is in Ottawa, as is also his grandaughter. They will leave for Winnipeg on Monday where they will spend the winter, and where Sir Charles' eldest son, Mr. Stewart Tupper, resides.

In regard to political matters, Sir Charles seemed somewhat reticent. He did not care to speak—on the issues before the elections of the Province, or of Mr. Whitney's chances of success. Although retired from public life, Sir Charles keeps his telescope pointed on all matters pertaining to the development or political attitude oft he Dominion. In Ontario's Provincial politics he professes a passing interest.

In regard to the reciprocity meetings in Boston and Washington, said that as far as Canada was concerned, it was a splendid thing that if we could not have reciprocity of trade. We could have a reciprocity of tariff. He was glad to see Mr. John Charlton of that opinion also. He could not understand Sir Wilfrid Laurier saying that negotiations would be resumed to discuss trade matters, but he believed what he (Sir Wilfrid) said at a banquet subsequently that no more delegates would be sent across the border after the result of the deputation on the Alaskan boundary and other questions. Americans ought to be forced to make overtures first before Canadians, with proper dignity, should consent to open up negotiations with them on trade matters.

Referring to the question of sending another contingent to South Africa. Sir Charles said: "I am very sorry that there is not a Canadian contingent standing alongside the Australians and New Zealanders to fight for the Empire to the end of the war I hope the Government will not only allow a contingent to be raised, but will also organise and equip it."

DR. HARBOTTLE SHOT STEWART

Deliberate Case of Shooting in Burford Village

FEELING OVER THE BOER WAR

Out Come' of Bitterness Against Harbottle Because of His Pro-Boer Feelings—Committed for Trial

Brantford, Nov. 21.—Dr. Robert Harbottle, of Burford, deliberately shot Herman Stewart, a farmer, yesterday morning. The bullet entered Stewart's head at the temple and passed out just behind and slightly above the ear. Although the victim bled profusely, the wound is not at all dangerous and he will recover without a doubt. The shooting is the outcome of a somewhat bitter feeling that has existed against Dr. Harbottle because of the views he entertained as to the war in South Africa. It is stated by dozens of the Burford villagers that the doctor would receive news of British reverses in South Africa with manifestations of delight and that he was openly pro-Boer in his attitude.

Stewart, the man who was shot, came into the village this morning, and, as Dr. Harbottle was going from the corner where Ludlow's general store stands, to the post office to get his mail, Stewart saw him and followed, the two walking almost abreast. Several persons were watching the two, to see whether or not Harbottle would take any offense, it being a well-known fact that they were not on speaking terms. No word passed between them from what is known. The doctor went into the post office, and then started back towards the corner, a distance of about fifty yards or thereabouts. Someone in the crowd shouted, "Brace up, Stewart," the purpose being to call the attention of the doctor to the fact that Stewart was walking behind him. At the corner, withing full view of half a dozen spectators, Harbottle pulled a revolver from his pocket and shot at Stewart, who was then not more than a foot from him.

Dr. Harbottle's house resembles a minature fortress. The windows of the two upper stories are barricaded by being completely boarded over, and the doors and windows on the ground floor are so fixed that they can instantly be closed effectually with sheet-iron barricades. The side of the house bears marks of the regard some of the villagers have for Dr. Harbottle, half a dozen big spots showing that paint in varying quantities has been thrown against it.

Yesterday afternoon Dr. Harbottle was arraigned on a charge of shooting with intent to do bodily harm, and was committed for trial at Brantford.

A WOMAN WORKS AT DIZZY HEIGHT

Mrs. Muskat Aids Husband as Roof and Cornice Builder

SHE LEARNED TINSMITHING

She Saves Her Husband the Cost of an Assistant—An Expert Cornice Pattern Maker.

New York, Nov. 20.—Climbing ladders burdened with a tinsmith's furnace and soldering kit and working at dizzy heights mending leaky roofs and gutters is what Mrs. Matilda Muskat does every day to aid her husband, Henry, in gaining a competence.

Mrs. Muskat is as good a workman as her husband, and in addition is an expert patternmaker for cornices. As a result of her labors she and her husband have just completed a handsome three-storey house. Every sheet of tin on the roof was laid and soldered by Mrs. Muskat, and in addition she designed and manufactured the metal cornice.

More than ten years ago Mrs. Muskat and her husband went to Tremont to live, having only arrived in the country. For a year they struggled along on the slender earnings of Mr. Muskat. Work was hard to find and much of the profits had to go in paying an assistant.

The couple had no children, and Mrs. Muskat suggested that her husband teach her the tinsmithing trade. Muskat was an expert in his business, and, taking his wife as though she were an apprentice, he began teaching her. Within a few months she had mastered practically all the details. She then went out on her first job of aiding her husband in repairing leaky roofs.

Attired in a short skirt and high boots, she mounted a ladder with as much agility as a man. After a year of this training Muskat noticed that his wife had the artistic instinct of designing. Buying machinery, he opened a small shop out of their savings, and Mrs. Muskat, when not out on a "job" with her husband, remained in the shop designing and manufacturing cornices.

Residents of Tremont and Fordham came to know the couple, and soon they were overrun with work. During all the time Mrs. Muskat worked alongside of her husband, oftentimes dangling high in the air on a scaffold repairing cornices and again setting straight a gutter which was all awry.

A Hospitable Black Queen

London, Nov. 21.—A Retuer's Despatch, dated Khartoum, October 23, says:—"Mr. H. C. Kuehlewindt, an old African traveler, arrived here last week, having accomplished an interesting overland journey from Mombassa to Khartoum in ten months. It was Mr. Kuehlewindt who, several months ago, was reported to have been killed with all his followers near Lake Salisbury. He appears to have visited some parts of the Uganda Protectorate which have never been explored by any white man before, and in one of these districts he came across an interesting tribe north of Satuka governed by a black Queen, named Daweng, where he was most hospitably received and entertained, although he had received warnings not to risk he had received warnings not to risk going there. These people had never seen a white man before. Mr. Kuehlewindt was about 180 miles in an easterly direction of Major Austin's party, who were then along the shores of Lake Rudolph, in their attempt to reach Uganda."

SMALL REPUBLIC OF RUSSIANS.

"New California" Formed by Outlaws and Others.

THE PRESIDENT CAPTURED.

Russian Governor Soon Ended the Existence of the Ambitious Republicans—Interesting Story.

Moscow, Nov. 20.—New California was the name of a settlement formed years ago on Chinese territory by lawless outcasts from Eastern Russia. Many better class members of society than the original famous founders came to join it—merchants, clerks of the ill-paid Government services, and enterprising young salesmen, fresh imported from European Russia, who preferred the chance of great and speedy points to the dull path of virtuous office drudgery. These gave the settlement its name, and, being well-read men, introduced a system of Government based on what they had heard or imagined about the United States. It began with Lynch Law, which is well understood in more parts of Russia than might be supposed from what one sees in print about that country. It is especially applied to horse and cattle thieves, and one of the favorite ways of enforcing it is to tie the hapless thief between two stout young trees bent together; when they are released the wretch is torn asunder. Lynch Law led to the necessity of carrying arms, that the eloquence of the tongue might not fail for want of better backing. And wholesale purchases of arms called the attention of the Russian authorities officially to the existence of this "New California." The Governor-General of the Amur territory was also compelled to turn his attention to these dangerous "New California." He sent a trusty official to investigate.

RESIDENTS ALL ARMED.

His report was that the settlement was a regularly organized Republic of some three thousand persons, all armed. It was openly engaged in gold mining and trading in uncoined gold (which then involved penal servitude), and it paid no heed to his authority, nor did it heed the Chinese, upon whose territory it was situated. It had a prejudicial influence upon loyal Russians in the Amur territory; it sold them gold and used the Government freely and openly in its transactions, gold, for this purpose, going by the name of "meal" or "flour." It also held a large section of the Imperial post-road in terror, and made deals in illicit gold with travellers, who sometimes disappeared for ever. It had no religion to speak of, but a satisfactory form of Government, with a public meeting house and an elected President, whose power was wielded according to his views of the wishes of the majority. This President (the first and last) was a young man named Vassi (?), who had arrived a few years before from Odessa.

Baron Korff, the Governor of Russia, was not to be outdone by a handful of Russians splaying at a small United States. To use soldiers would have cost much money and some lives. Evidently the only way to deal with a well-armed Republic is the diplomatic method, in which it is hardly likely to find itself quite the equal of the specialist with centuries of training behind him. So it indeed proved. Korff sent an aide-de-camp who succeeded in getting President Vassi to confer with him "on matters of State." The President never returned, but it is expected was taken to Russia. After the capture of the President, the "Republic" was dispersed by a large force of Chinese troops, which Korff caused to be put in motion from Pekin. Thus Russia saved the situation, without the world being any the wiser, and with her own troops now holding the spot, she can will enjoy the laugh to-day herself, at the daring notion of a "New California" cheek by jowl with the despotism of the Czar.

REDMOND PRAISES EDWARD BLAKE

Gave Irish Cause Benefit of His Intellect

THE FUTURE OF IRELAND

Confident of Large Measure of Self Government at an Early Date—Resolutions Passed in Montreal

Montreal, Nov. 21.—Mr. John E. Redmond, leader of the Irish National Party, and his colleagues, Messrs. P. A. McHugh, M. P., and Thomas O'Donnel, M. P., were greeted by a large audience in Windsor Hall last evening, when they delivered addresses under the auspices of St. Patrick's Society. W. E. Doran, president of the society, introduced the speakers, and among those on the platform were:—Hon. Dr. Guerin, Ald. Gallery, M. P., Messrs. J. A. C. Madore, M.P., R. Lemieux, M. P., Hon. James McShane, M. J. F. Quinn, J. M. G. Bergeron and others.

Mr. Redmond, who was received enthusiastically, said it was now many years since such a gathering had been held in Montreal for Ireland. Since then some dissentions took place, but he and his colleagues had come to assure them that these had absolutely disappeared. They were not unmindful of the fact that one of Canada's ablest and truest sons, Hon. Edward Blake, (loud cheers), made many sacrifices and gave them the advantage of his matchless intellect and untiring ability. Their principles were the same as before. He recalled the time when the people of Canada took up arms, and it was only when granted home rule that rebellious Canada became contented and loyal. The people of Ireland merely asked free institutions and representative government, and as much power over their own Irish affairs as Canadians have over theirs. Representative government Ireland does not possess, and the world is deceived on that point. It was supposed that because Ireland was represented in the English Parliament that it had representative government.

A MINORITY WITHOUT VOICE.

In a description of the Imperial Parliament, Mr. Redmond spoke of the Nationalists as a permanent minority, with no voice or influence. He was convinced that in the near future Ireland would obtain a large measure of self government by the general consent of all the English parties. The reason was that during the last three years Ireland had obtained a certain measure of local self-government, and it was shown that in purely local matters Ireland could govern itself with economy and success. This experience had swept away the chief argument against home rule and set Englishmen of all parties thinking over the problem. All Ireland had to do was to persist in her demands and home rule would soon come. The day was near when, for the safety of the British Empire, it was necessary to lighten the load of Parliament, and remit to different Local Assemblies those purely local affairs, with which Parliament is charged, but has not the time to deal with. Then, again, there are the Irish members of Parliament. He denied that they pursued a policy of obstruction, but they were there against their will, and as English members undertook to discuss and decide Irish matters which did not concern them; surely the Irish members had the right to discuss English questions that did concern them. English statesmen all admitted the breakdown of Parliament, but proposed to remedy it by reducing Irish representation from 80 to 60. This was simply ridiculous, and so were further rules to curtail the liberties of the English Parliament. In conclusion, he made an eloquent appeal for responsible government for Ireland.

THE GAELIC SPEAKER.

Mr. O'Donnell compared the conditions of Ireland and Canada, and caused much laughter by speaking in Gaelic, as he did in the House of Commons last session.

Mr. McHugh, M. P., who is editor of The Sligo Champion, and who was recently released from jail, where he served six months for denouncing jury packing in Ireland, said he believed that they had the sympathy and support not only of the Irish-Canadians, but also of the French-Canadians, for both were Celts, and in their past history there were many episodes which brought them together. They could not forget that when there was a great national struggle in Ireland the French had sent men and fleets to support the Irish people.

Hon. Dr. Guerin then moved the resolutions first, extending hearty congratulations upon the reunion of the Irish Parliamentary Party and the valuable work accomplished in the interests of Ireland, and pledging the support of those present with the same loyalty as to Parnell second, approving of the United Irish League, and pledging their support until there is a National Government for Ireland, and a settlement of the Irish land question on the basis of compulsory sale; third approving and supporting the Gaelic League. The resolutions were seconded by Mr. J. F. Quinn and J. A. C. Madore, M.P., the latter speaking in French, and carried.

NOT ABLE TO REBEL.

In the course of an interview, Mr. Redmond said he meant by home rule, which they expected to obtain, the degree of freedom which Canada enjoyed, and for which Canadians fought. "I certainly think," he said, "we have as much right to rebel as Canada ever had. If we had the means we would be justified in using them. We have not the means under the present circumstances; we have to adopt constitutional means to reach our goal, which will be reached, without doubt, and which we are fast approaching."

THREW HIMSELF INTO A FURNACE

Unknown Man Chooses a Terrible Death in Pittsburg

HE WILL NOT BE IDENTIFIED

Was Pulled Out in Three Minutes, But Was So Badly Burned as to be Completely Disfigured

Pittsburg, Pa., Nov. 21.—An unknown man threw himself headlong into one of the furnaces at Schoenberger's mills Fourteenth and Etna streets, a few minutes after midnight. Almost his entire body was roasted beyond identification, his left foot being the only part not disfigured. A few minutes before the man was seen to enter the mill yards and stand at the foot of the hoisting cage, which carries ore, coke, and other supplies for the furnace. The moment that a warning was sounded for the cage to ascend with its burden three workmen saw the man jump on the platform and stand within a few feet of them. They were confused, and did not know what to think of him, as no one but employees are allowed on these cages. When the top of the furnace was reached, nearly 100 feet from the level, Thomas Lee determined to order him away. The huge crib was opened to allow the car of coke to roll into the furnace, and the bell was lifted, throwing a terrific heat from the fiery substance underneath. Lee had not had time to open his mouth when the man threw himself headlong into the furnace. Quick as a flash, Lee dropped the bell, but all to late. The man was buried head and shoulders in the flames. The end of the bell caught his left foot, saving only it from being consumed. He was pulled out about three minutes later, his flesh half roasted.

It is probable he will never be identified. The body was removed to the morgue. The man was about 35 years old, medium height, sandy moustache, and apparently an American.

TORONTO MEN ARE SHOT IN CHICAGO

Charles Miller Will Die, and John is Seriously Wounded

WERE SUSPECTED OF ROBBERY

Robert Coburn Thought They were About to Rob His Hen Roost—Riddled With Small Shot.

Chicago, Nov. 21.—Charles and John Miller, brothers, of Toronto, Ont., were riddled with small shot here to-day. The former will die, and John was seriously wounded. The shooting was done by Robert Coburn, who thought the men were about to rob his hen roost. John Miller said he and his brother were without money, and were merely seeking a lodging in Coburn's barn. Coburn drove four miles to a police station with the unconscious form of John Miller in the bottom of a wagon. The police found the latter's brother two hours later. Coburn was detained by the police.

KEENE.

—On Monday evening last those interested in Hockey met in the parlours of the Kennealey House to discuss matters concerning the coming season. Many of the old members were present and quite an enthusiastic meeting resulted. It was decided to throw in the club's lot with the T.V.H.L. again this winter. The following officers were elected:

Pres.—Chas. Fife.
Vice.-Pres.—Gordon Laing.
Sec.-Treas.—Jas. McCarthy.
Capt. Vincent McCarthy.
Committee of Management — Jas Quinn, Stewart Fife, Fred Walsh.
Cor. Sec.—T. J. Wallace.
Representative to Association — J. R. McIntyre.

—James Dickson, Jr., has returned from Michigan, an invalid.

—Mr. Robert Brown and family have moved up to the house of Mrs. Burbridge.

—Mrs. Bryce, of Chicago, is visiting with her sister, Miss English.

—The Y.P.S.C.E. held a very successful social in the hall on Friday evening. Mr. Robert McCamus presided. Rev. Dr. Andrews and Rev. Seccombe delivered appropriate addresses, and Master Walter Laing gave a vocal solo. After luncheon was partaken of games were indulged in, and all went away highly pleased

Boer Commandant Captured

Bloemfontein, Nov. 21.—Commandant Tobie and six burghers were captured by part of Hamilton's column near Reddersburg on November 11. Two hundred and fifty men of Ackerman's commando took up a position on a farm in that district and strongly intrenched themselves. Hamilton's men advanced and drove them across the Riet River. Thirty-five more men were captured on the 12th. Some others deserted from the commando the next day and were also taken care of by the British. Thirty rifles, thirty horses, and 1,500 rounds of ammunition were captured.

SCATTERED BY A POM-POM.

Bloemfontein, Nov. 22.—Brand's commando attacked Colonel Holland's regiment of mounted infantry south of Lesburg, recently. Brand retired when Holland opened fire, with a pom-pom.

ANOTHER BOER APPEAL FULL OF FALSEHOODS

Latest Methods of the Boers to Gain Sympathy in the United States.

THEY CALL THE BRITISH FOUL MURDERERS

Evidence That They Are Working Hard to Get President Roosevel to Interfere—Concerted Action Between Redmond and the Boer Committee in the United States.

New York, Nov 22—There is no doubt that John Redmond, M.P., the Irish agitator and the Boer envoys who are now in this country are working together in order to induce President Roosevelt to interfere in the South African war. That their efforts will be in vain, is a foregone conclusion. Redmond visited the President when in Washington the other day, and made an appeal on behalf of the Boers. The President declined to discuss the subject, and the interview ended.

A LYING APPEAL.

Philadelphia, Nov. 21. — That the Boers and their Fenian allies are in desperate straits may be judged from the following appeal to the people of Philadelphia in behalf of the Boer women and children, alleged to be the victims of British brutality in the reconcentrado camps in South Africa. The appeal is issued by Commandant A. J. Liebenberg and Cornet H. D. Viljoen, now in this city. From their headquarters at the Hotel Hanover these men write "in behalf of the cause" as follows.

Our women and children are dying by thousands in the reconcentrado camps of South Africa. In August there died 2345, and in September 3100 women, children and old men. During these two months no less than 2342 children alone perished by starvation and disease. The condition in these camps is appalling; and we are helpless without your aid. The scenes of misery and despair are too horrible for written or photographic description. We are constrained to appeal to you for immediate help, as our country women and children are perishing hourly for the crime of their husbands and fathers—the crime of fighting for the same independence which you enjoy! The British Government is either unable to supply food for those they have imprisoned, or they have determined on a policy of extermination; in either case, we make this appeal to you in the name of our common humanity.

LAWS OF CIVILIZED WARFARE VIOLATED.

We are living in a civilized era, in which we condemn the deeds of cruelty and persecution of the past ages. We have laws of civilized warfare which protect women and children from the rapacity and cruelty of the enemy, also their homes from being ruthlessly and systematically demolished. A civilized nation, a signatory of the Convention of Geneva, and a member of the Peace Conference of The Hague, is violating these laws in its war against a small civilized Christian nation and starving non-combatants to death. We do not ask you for munitions of war nor to help us in the struggle; but ask only for food and clothing for our homeless and starving children.

You are a charitable and liberty loving nation. You have shown that you are always ready to relieve suffering, whether abroad or at home. From this city you have recently sent train loads of food and other requisites to Galveston. You have sent ship loads to the starving people in Russia, India and Cuba. We implore you to help us, too, though it be with only one ship load of food, clothing and other needful things for our suffering women and children. Arrangements are perfected by which such assistance will surely reach our people. We appeal to you who have shown your generosity and charity to others so often heretofore to have compassion on us, too.

NEARLY ONE HUNDRED MEN SUFFOCATED IN MINE

Strong Draft Drew the Smoke from Burning Buildings into the Tunnel

Telluride, Colo., Nov. 21.—Nearly a hundred men were probably suffocated in the Smuggler Union mine in Marshall Basin as the result of the fire which consumed the buildings at the mouth of the Bullion tunnel. Twenty-two miners are known to be dead, and scores of others are either dead or seeking safety in remote parts of the mine until the place shall be cleared of foul gases and smoke.

Fire broke out in the tramway bunkhouse at the mouth of the Bullion tunnel, the principal opening from which the property is worked, and spread rapidly to the boiler and engine house, blacksmith shop the tramway terminal, with its great ore bins, and several smaller buildings, were all soon wrapped in flames.

A strong draft drew the smoke from tunnel and the mile of drifts, upraises and stopes connecting with it began to fill rapidly with the smoke.

MINE WAS FORGOTTEN.

In the excitement of trying to control the fire in the outside buildings the mine was forgotten, and before the situation was realized the workings were fast filling with dense smoke. By this time the buildings about the mouth of the tunnel were all ablaze, and nothing could be done to stop the smoke from going in. As soon as it was possible great bodies of rock were blown down into the tunnel mouth and the opening stopped, but not until the workings had been filled and the smoke was working its way through the shafts to the surface a mile or more up the mountain form the tunnel house.

The day shift, some two hundred men, had gone into the mine, and reached their stations before the fire started. It is known that some of the men escaped through the old Sheridan tunnel and also through the old Union workings, but they are thought to have been but a small part of the force in the mine. The Smuggler Union is the largest mine in the Telluride district, the output being about two-thirds of the total from the camp. It is owned by New York and Boston capitalists.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

London, Nov. 21.—King Edward has checkmated the thrifty British nobles and others who proposed to line their pockets with American and Continental gold by the sale of their seats in Westminster Abbey for the Coronation ceremony, by decreeing that except in an official capacity only British subjects are to be present. He has decided that the mere fact of any seat being sold dispossesses both the holder and the nominee from the right of occupying it. It is understood that large sums have been offered both in America and Europe, for seats on the occasion of the Coronation.

COMMANDANT BUYS CAPTURED.

London, Nov. 21.—A despatch from Lord Kitchener, dated from Pretoria Nov. 21, says Commandant Buys has been captured after attacking a patrol of one hundred railroad pioneers on the Vaal River, near Villiersdorp.

Dublin, Nov. 21.—Andy Hehir, the man who broke out of Limerick Goal some years ago has been arrested on the charge of assaulting the chairman of the local district council. Some councillors who believed that it would be a good thing if Hehir left his country, applied for a grant to aid him in emigrating. The chairman opposed the application and said he would give £1 to hang him. This unfriendly remark led to the assault. Hehir is a remarkable character. He broke out of Limerick Goal and evaded arrest for some three months, during which time large forces of police were drafted into the counties of Limerick and Clark to join in the hunt. Hehir gave them a chase quite as exciting as that which Seav and King recently led the English police in Kent. He did some rather audacious things for a fugitive. One night he slept in the barn of the district inspector charged with his arrest, and on another occasion he called at the Constabulary barracks, where he made himself so pleasant that he was invited to remain for breakfast by the housekeepers. After he had been some weeks at large he wrote to the editor of a local paper, offering to give his reporter an interview. Finally Hehir surrendered to procure the release of two servant girls who had been arrested on the charge of harboring him. Subsequently there was litigation over the cost of the extra police, who were drafted into the county to arrest him.

GOVERNMENT NOTETAKER APPEARS.

Dublin, Nov. 21.—The Government notetaker has begun to appear at the meetings of the United Irish League, which looks like one of the premonitory signs of a bad winter. At a meeting of the league at Ballygawley, Mr. Joseph Devlin, the well known Belfast Nationalist, whom Mr. Redmond recently invited to join the Irish Parliamentary Party, welcomed the presence of the Government notetaker as a proof that the league was a powerful organization, and that once more England intended to fight Ireland in a stand-up fight.

ANOTHER RECORD.

Havre, France, Nov. 21.—The new steamer La Savoie of the Compagnie Generale Transatlantique reached Havre at 4 o'clock this morning from New York, breaking her eastward record by nearly two hours. Her time of passage was about 6 days 11 hours, 2 minutes. Her best previous eastward record was 6 days 13 hours and 2 minutes, made on her maiden voyage on September 19 last. The La Savoie holds the Havre record both eastward and westward.

PETERBOROUGH, NOVEMBER 22, 1901

RUSSIA AND FRANCE

The possibility of an understanding between Great Britain and Russia seems to have aroused the fears of the Parisian press lest France might not be considered by her present ally, and some of the journals are insisting that indispensable conditions of any arrangement shall be, first that Great Britain must cease to thwart Russian policy, and, secondly, that she must cease to thwart French policy where the two powers are destined to live side by side. They have failed, however, to take into account that England, unlike France, is under no necessity to sue for an alliance with Russia, and if she goes into it, it will be as an equal, not as a weak nation paying a price for good-will or protection. Great Britain, moreover, has no reason to seek an alliance with France, and if the latter were included in an Anglo-Russian compact, it would be, so far as Britain is concerned, on the condition that she kept from meddling in affairs that concerned Britain alone. So far, indeed, is France from being in a position to dictate the terms of such an alliance, that it is almost certain that she would have to accept the terms dictated to herself or renounce the alliance altogether. The French treaty is only of value to Russia in so far as the military strength of France increases the Empire's prestige with the other powers, but an arrangement with Great Britain which enabled Russia to secure an outlet for her commerce on the Persian Gulf, or it might be on the Mediterranean, would be in the highest degree profitable, and looking at it on the military side even, England would be of as great, probably of greater assistance in the event of war, than France's army. Russia never permits sentiment to sway her in matters of vital importance to the Empire, and if she found the French alliance a barrier to a still better alliance with Great Britain, we may be sure that she would let France go. The situation is not a pleasant one for a people so sensitive as the French, but they have already endured many humiliations for the sake of the Russian alliance, and it is probable that they will have to put up with many more before they learn that they have nothing in common with their ally except their enmity to Germany.

Mr. Monk, the leader of the Quebec Conservatives, seems to stand upon the same footing as Mr. Bourassa with regard to Canada taking part in Britain's wars, and particularly on the impropriety of sending Canadians abroad to fight without first consulting Parliament. The Tory papers, which have been going for Bourassa, ought to turn their batteries on Monk.

"Shadowed" in Paris.

WHEN a literary fish of any importance is taken nowadays one may be sure that a good many editors and publishers have been dangling their well-baited hooks before its nose. For two years or more Captain Dreyfus has had offers for what he might ultimately choose to publish. The business of offering advances and royalties to authors is not usually attended with a great amount of personal danger. But there is an American woman, a journalist, living in Paris, who could tell a different tale, says the "Saturday Evening Post." Two summers ago, just as the great trial was drawing to its close, she was in London, and there met an enterprising "American" publisher. Conversation turned, as did all conversation that summer, in either England or France, upon Dreyfus, and the publisher confided to the lady his desire to publish something veritably from the pen of Dreyfus. The lady, it happened, was on terms of some intimacy with the inner circle of Dreyfus' friends, and when she left England for Paris she was commissioned to do what she could to get something for the publisher, either from Captain or Madame Dreyfus.

Two days after she left London a man approached the publisher with the positive assurance that he could arrange the whole affair within a fortnight. (In parenthesis it may be said that such men were not uncommon that summer.) The publisher, remembering the proverb concerning a bird in the hand, rushed to the nearest telegraph office and sent a message to the lady in Paris as follows:

"Suspend Dreyfus negotiations for the present. Will write."

The telegram was delivered, but almost simultaneously the lady was waited upon by a polite representative of the police department, with a demand for an explanation. What negotiations was she carrying on and with whom? She told her story and felt that it was received with the blandest incredulity. She promised to show the police the letter from London when it came, and reminded her visitor of her "American" citizenship. The official departed. Unfortunately, the press of business sent the publisher scurrying toward Scotland, and he, not realizing how important it was, neglected to write to the lady in Paris.

She soon discovered that she was being "shadowed," and that her every movement was being watched by mysterious people. At first she laughed, and merely sent a little note of enquiry to London. No answer came, and the watching continued. Her nerves began to give way, and finally she went to the United States ambassador with the whole story. The shadowing ceased. It would be interesting to know by just what diplomatic process this incident was arranged.

MOTHERHOOD

Is a natural instinct which shows itself in the girl as soon as she is big enough to play the mother to her doll. Unfortunately the womanly health does not always keep pace with the motherly instinct, and when real motherhood comes it often comes to mothers who suffer intolerably during maternity and who are unable to nurse the weakling child which frets and moans in their arms.

Motherhood is prepared for and provided for by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It cures nausea, tranquilizes the nerves, gives a healthy appetite and promotes restful sleep. It makes the baby's advent practically painless, and gives the mother abundant strength to nurse her child.

Accept no substitute for "Favorite Prescription." There is nothing "just as good" for weak and sickly women.

"Two years ago I was very sick and began taking your 'Favorite Prescription,'" writes Mrs. Ed. Hackett, of Chardon, Geauga Co., Ohio. "When my baby boy came he weighed twelve pounds and a half. Have had good health ever since, until about three weeks ago, when weaning my baby, I contracted a heavy cold. Am taking your 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I am thankful that poor sufferers have such a grand chance to regain their health by using Dr. Pierce's medicines. It would take pages to tell the good it has done in our family, and in a great many more families under my observation.

"I thank you for your kind medical advice."

Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser in paper covers is sent free on receipt of 31 cents in one-cent stamps to pay expense of customs and mailing only. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

SOME POSITIVE PROOFS

What is Being Told of Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills—No Cure No Pay.

Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills cured me of kidney trouble of many years' standing, and after I had tried every other known remedy. Joseph Bagley, Caledonia ave., Rochester, N.Y.

I was afflicted with rheumatism so badly at times that I could not walk. Nothing I took did me much good, until I tried Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills. Five boxes cured me entirely.

I had the misfortune to have suffered some years ago from paralysis, sustaining no less than three strokes. I could get nothing to do me any good until I was induced to try Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills. I took nine boxes, and although not by any means well, I think I am in a fair way to recovery. I can now walk with the aid of a stick and feel myself getting better every day. M. F. Mann, Merlin, N.Y.

Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills permanently cured me of backache. I suffered for years, and took two boxes. That is a year ago. I have not had a symptom since. James H. Jackson, Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.

I do not believe there is a medicine to compare with Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills. They cured me of indigestion and catarrh of the stomach, after nine years' suffering. H. S. Macdonald, G.T.R. shops, Montreal.

Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills are a positive and certain cure for la grippe, rheumatism, asthma, paralysis, catarrh, eczema, coughs, backache, indigestion, all stomach and liver troubles, female complaints, even when the diseases have been standing for many years, the most stubborn cases will yield. Price 50 cents per box. For sale by Ormond & Walsh. The Canada Chemical Company will forfeit $10 for any case that these pills do not cure.

Dr. Clarke's Sure Cure for Catarrh, and Dr. Clarke's Sure Cure for Eczema, same price. $10 will be paid for any case they will not permanently cure.

"MATT."

A TALE OF A CARAVAN

of his dreams; but for all that, her smile was like sunshine, and her eyes as roguish and friendly as ever.

Conscious of his dream he blushed, while greeting her with a friendly nod.

'Well, Matt? Here again, eh?" he said; adding to himself, "This won't do at all, my gentleman, if the young person continues to appear daily, the Caravan will have to 'move on.'"

Matt had evidently something on her mind. After looking at Brinkley thoughtfully for some minutes, she exclaimed abruptly:

"William Jones don't like you neither. No more does William Jones father."

"Dear me," said the young man. "I'm very sorry for that."

"He says— William Jones says — you fe come here prying and spying. Do you?"

'My dear Matt," replied the young man lightly. "I come here as an humble artist, seeking subjects for my surpassing genius to work upon. If it is prying and spying to attempt to penetrate into the beauties of Nature— both scenic, animal, and human—I fear I must plead guilty; but otherwise—"

She interrupted him with an impatient exclamation, accompanied by a hitch of her pretty shoulders.

"Don't talk like that; for then I know you're chaffing. Talk serious,and I'll tell you something."

"All right. I'll be serious as a parson. Go ahead!"

"Mr. Monk, of Monkshurst, wants to marry me. He said so to William Jones."

The information was delivered with assumed carelessness; but after it was given, Matt watched the effect of it upon the hear with precocious interest. Brinkley opened his eyes in very natural amazement.

"Come, come, Matt; you're joking."

"No, I ain't. It's true."

"But you're only a child— a very nice child, I admit— but to talk of holy matrimony in such a connection is— excuse my frankness— preposterous. People don't marry little girls."

But Matt did not consent to this proposition at all.

"I ain't a little girl," she affirmed with a decisive nod of the head. "I'm sixteen, and I'm growed up."

The young man was amused, and could not refrain from laughing heartily. But the girl's brow darkened as she watched him, and her under lip fell as if she would like to cry.

"If you go on laughing," she said, "I'll run straight back home and never come here no more."

"Well, I'll try to keep my countenance; but the idea is very funny. Really, now! Don't you see it in that light yourself?"

Certainly Matt did not, to judge from the expression of her face. She turned her head away, and Brinkley saw, to his surprise, that a tear was rolling down her cheek.

"Come, Matt," he said kindly, "you mustn't take this so seriously. Tell me all about it— there's a good girl."

"I will—if you won't laugh."

"I won't then— there."

"Well, when I was lying on my bed this morning I heard William Jones a-talking to some one. He thought I was asleep, but I got up and listened, and I heard Mr. Monk's voice; and he said, says he, "She's over sixteen years old, and I'll marry her; and William Jones said, 'Lord, Mr. Monk; what can you be a-thinking about? Matt ain't old enough, and what's more, she ain't fit to be the wife of a fine gentleman.' Then Mr. Monk he stamped with his foot, like he does when he's in a passion, and he said said he, 'My mind's made up, William Jones, and I'm going to marry her before the year's out; and I don't care how soon.' Then I heard them moving about, and I crept back to bed and pretended to be fast asleep."

The young man's astonishment increased. There could be no doubt of the veracity and sincerity of the speaker; and the story she told was certainly puzzling. Brinkley made up his mind, without much reflection, that if Mr. Monk wanted to go through the marriage ceremony with that child, he had some special and mysterious reason for so doing unless— which was scarcely possible— he was of a sentimental disposition and in the manner of many men advanced toward middle age, was enamored of Matt's youth and inexperience.

"Tell me, Matt," said Brinkley, after pondering the matter for some minutes; "tell me how long have you known this Mr. Monk?"

"Ever since I come ashore," was the reply.

"Humph!— is he well-to-do? —rich?"

Matt nodded emphatically.

"All Aberglyn belongs to him," she said; "and the woods up there, and the farms, and the houses up at the big house, and— everything."

"And though he is such a great person, he is very friendly with William Jones?"

"Oh, yes," answered Matt, "and I think William Jones is afraid of him —sometimes; but he gives William Jones money for keeping me."

"Oh, indeed! He gives him money, does he? That's rather kind of him, you know."

At this Matt shook her head with great decision, but said nothing. Greatly puzzled, the young man looked at her, and mused. It was clear that there was a mystery somewhere, and he was getting interested. Presently he invited Matt to sit down on the steps of the Caravan, and he placed himself at her side. He was too absorbed in speculation to notice how the girl colored and brightened as they sat there together.

"You have often told me that you came ashore," he said, after a long pause. "I should like to know something of how it happened. I don't exactly know what this 'coming ashore' means. Can you explain?"

"I don't remember," she replied; "but I know there was a ship, and it went to pieces, and I come to shore in a boat, or summat."

"I see— and William Jones found you?"

"Mr. Monk, he found me, and gave me to William Jones to keep."

"I begin to understand. Of course you were very little— a baby, in fact."

"William Jones says I could just talk some words, and that when he took me now- I called him Papa."

"What was the name of the ship? Have you ever heard?"

"No," said Matt, [illegible]

"Did you come ashore all alone? it is scarcely possible!"

"I come ashore by myself. All the rest was drowned."

"Was there no clew to who you were? Did nothing come ashore besides to show them who you were, or where you came from?"

Matt shook her head again. Once more the young man was lost in meditation. Doubtless it was owing to his abstraction of mind that he quietly placed his arm round Matt's waist, and kept it there. At first Matt went very red; then she glanced up at his face, and saw that his eyes were fixed thoughtfully on the distant sand- hills. Seeing he still kept silence, she moved a little closer to him, and said very quietly,

"I didn't tell William Jones that you—kissed me!"

Brinkley started from his abstraction, and looked at the girl's blushing face.

"Eh! What did you say?"

"I didn't tell William Jones that you— kissed me!"

These words seemed to remind the young man of the position of his arm; for he hastily withdrew it.

"Matt," he said, "this won't do! This won't do at all!"

"What won't do?"

"Well— this!" he answered, rather ambiguously. "You're awfully young, you know— quite a girl, although, as you suggested just now, and, as you probably believe, you may be 'growed up.' You must—ha— you must look upon me as a sort of father, and all that sort of thing."

"You're too young to be my father," answered Matt, ingenuously.

"Well, say your big brother. I'm interested in you, Matt, very much interested, and I should really like to get to the bottom of the mystery about you; but we must not forget we're— well, almost strangers, you know. Besides," he added, laughing again cheerfly, "you are engaged to be married, some day, to a gentleman of fortune."

Matt sprang up, with heaving bosom and flashing eyes.

"No, I ain't!" she said. "I hate him."

"Hate the beautiful Monk, of Monkhurst! Monk the beneficent! Monk the sweet- spoken! Impossible!"

"Yes, I hate him," cried Matt; "and —and— when he kissed me, it made me sick."

"What, did he? Actually. Kissed you?"

As he spoke, the young man actually felt that he should like to assault the redoubtable Monk.

"Yes, he kissed me— once. If he kisses me again I'll stick something into him, or scratch his face."

And Matt looked black as thunder and set her pearly teeth angrily together.

"Sit down again, Matt!"

"I shan't— if you laugh."

"Oh, I'll behave myself. Come!"— and he added, as she returned to her place, "Did it make you sick when I kissed you?"

He was playing with fire. The girl's face changed in a moment, her eyes melted, her lips trembled, and all her expression became inexpressibly soft and dreamy. Leaning gently toward him she drooped her eyes, and then, seeing his hand resting on his knee, she took it in hers and raised it to her lips.

"I should like to marry you," she said, and blushing, rested her cheek against his shoulder!

Now, our hero of the Caravan was a true hearted young fellow, and a man of honor, and his position had become extremely embarrassing. He could no longer conceal from himself the discovery that he had made an unmistakable impression on Matt's unsophisticated heart. Hitherto he had looked upon her as a sort of enfant terrible, a very rough diamond; now he realised, with a shock of surprise and self- reproach, that she possesses, whether "growed up" or not, much of the susceptibility of grown-up young ladies. It was clear that his duty was to disenchant her as speedily as possible, seeing that the discovery of the hopelessness of her attachment might, if delayed, cause her no little unhappiness.

In the meantime he suffered her to nestle to him. He did not like to shake her off roughly, or to say anything unkind. She was certainly very pretty. He glanced down at her hands, which rested in her lap, and again noticed that they were unusually delicate and small. Her foot, which he next inspected, he could not criticise, for the boots she wore would have been a good fit for William Jones. But the whole outline of her figure, in spite of the hideous attire she wore, was fine symmetrical, and altogether—

His inspection was interrupted by the girl herself. Starting as if from a delightful trance, she sprung to her feet and cried:

"I can't stop no longer. I'm going."

"But the picture, Matt?" said Brinkley, rising also. "Shan't I finish it to-day?"

"I can't wait. William Jones wants to sent me a message over to Pencross, and if I don't go, he'll scold."

"Very well, Matt."

"But I'll come," she said, smiling, to-morrow; and I'll come in my Sunday clothes, somehow."

"Don't trouble. On reflection, I think you look nicer as you are."

She lifted up her hat from the ground, and still hesitated as she put it on.

"Upon my word," cried the artist; "those Welsh hats are very becoming. Good-by, Matt."

She took his outstretched hand and waited an instant, with her warm, brown cheek in profile temptingly near his lips. But he did not yield to the temptation, and after a moment's further hesitation, in which I fear she betrayed some little disappointment, Matt released her hand and sprung hurriedly away.

"Upon my word," muttered the young man, as he watched her figure receding in the distance, "the situation is growing more and more troublesome! I shall have to make a clean bolt of it, if this goes on. Fancy being caught in a flirtation with a wild ocean waif, a child of the wilderness, who never even heard of Lindley Murray! Really, it will never do!"

CHAPTER VIII.

The Devil's Caldron.

It so happened that the young man of the Caravan had two considerable faults. The first fault my reader has, no doubt, already guessed: he was constitutionally lazy. The second fault will appear more clearly in the sequel: he was, also constitutionally inquisitive. Here his other constitutional defect came in, and set him prying into matters which in no way seriously concerned him. A little

A MARVELLOUS MEDICINE

"No Cure, No Pay," is the Newest Proposal of the Proprietors o Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—We make the following proposal to the readers of the Times: To any one who is a subject of rheumatism (no matter how long standing) or any blood disease, as enumerated below, and will give Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills a fair trial and do not find a perfect cure we will refund the money paid for the pills. If no substantial improvement is observed, we will in addition, pay $10 in cash on satisfactory evidence being supplied us to this affect.

We have yet to know of a single case where these wonderful pills have not been almost entirely successful in affecting a cure. CANADA CHEMICAL CO.

Ex-Ald. Bailey, St. John's, writes: I cannot speak too highly of Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills. They worked a miracle in my case, and cured me after many years of suffering. I do not think their equal is to be obtained.

Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills are a positive and certain cure for la grippe, rheumatism, asthma, paralysis, catarrh, eczema, coughs, backache, indigestion, all stomach and liver troubles, female complaints, even when the diseases having been standing for many years, the most stubborn cases will yield. Price 50 cents per box. For sale by Ormond & Walsh. The Canada Chemical Company will forfeit $10 for any case that these pills do not help.

and Dr. Clarke's Sure Cure for Eczema same price. $10 will be paid for any case they will not permanently cure.

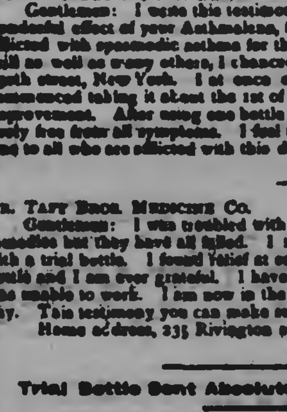
Asthma Cure Free.

Asthmalene Brings Instant Relief and Permanent Cure in All Cases,

Sent ABSOLUTELY FREE on receipt of postal. Write your name and address plainly.



There is nothing like Asthmalene. It brings instant relief, even in the worst cases. It cures when all else fails.

The Rev. C. F. WELLS, of Villa Ridge, Ill., says: "Your trial bottle of Asthmalene received in good condition I cannot tell you how thankful I feel for the good derived from it. I was a slave, chained with putrid sore throat and Asthma for ten years. I despaired of ever being cured. I saw your advertisement for the cure of this dreadful and tormenting disease, Asthma, and thought you had overspoken yourselves, but resolved to give it a trial. To my astonishment, the trial acted like a charm. Send me a full-size bottle."

REV. DR. MORRIS WECHSLER
Rabbi of the Cong. Bnai Israel.
NEW YORK, Jan. 3, 1901.

DRS. TAFT BROS.' MEDICINE CO.:

Gentlemen: Your Asthmalene is an excellent remedy for Asthma and Hay Fever, and its composition alleviates all troubles which combine with asthma. Its success is astonishing and wonderful.

After having it carefully analyzed, we can state that Asthmalene contains no opium, morphine, chloroform or ether. Very truly yours,

REV. DR. MORRIS WECHSLER.

AVON SPRINGS, N. Y., Feb. 1, 1901.

DR. TAFT BROS. MEDICINE Co.

Gentlemen: I write this testimonial from a sense of duty, having tested the wonderful effect of your Asthmalene, for the cure of Asthma. My wife has been afflicted with spasmodic asthma for the past 12 years. Having exhausted my own skill as well as many others, I chanced to see your sign upon your windows at 130th street, New York. I at once obtained a bottle of Asthmalene. My wife commenced taking it about the 1st of November. I very soon noticed a radical improvement. After using one bottle her asthma has disappeared and she is entirely free from all symptoms. I feel that I can consistently recommend the medicine to all who are afflicted with this distressing disease. Yours respectfully,

O. D. PHELPS, M. D.

DR. TAFT BROS. MEDICINE Co.

Gentlemen: I was troubled with Asthma for 22 years. I have tried numerous remedies but they have all failed. I ran across your advertisement and started with a trial bottle. I found relief at once. I have since purchased your full-size bottle and I am ever grateful. I have a family of four children and for six years was unable to work. I am now in the best of health and am doing business every day. This testimony you can make such use of as you see fit.

Permanent Cures of Cancer

We here give a few cases, where the efficacy of our Constitutional treatment in curing Cancer, is established beyond all question. We have plenty on fyle.

There is ample proof that where our remedy cures, it cures to stay and saves people from the torture of knife and plaster.

CANCER OF THE BREAST—A lady had Cancer of the breast, which rendered her right shoulder and arm almost helpless. Our remedy cured her over five years ago, and there is not the slightest return of the trouble.

CANCER OF THE FACE—This case of a gentleman who was so bad that his right cheek was almost eaten off with the disease, plasters aggravated his trouble. Our treatment cured him five years ago and he had been all right since.

CANCER OF THE STOMACH—Doctors pronounced the trouble cancer of the stomach. There was vomiting of material that looked like Coffee grounds. Great weakness and prostration. Cured over four years ago and well to-day.

CANCER OF THE NOSE—A severe case which was cured by our remedy in 1891 and has never returned to this day.

Full accounts of the above cases, together with the names and addresses of the persons, are given in our new book, "Cancer, Its Cause and Cure," sent to anyone, in plain wrapper on receipt of 2 stamps. Stott & Jury, Bowmanville, Ont.

Four Brothers Killed on the Rail

Mr. Edward Moroney, engineer of the Peterborough Lock Company, has received a telegram announcing that his brother Joseph was killed on Wednesday while switching cars at South Quebec. It is a strange and sad circumstance that the deceased was the fourth of Mr. Moroney's brothers to be killed by railway accident. Mr. Moroney left last night for Quebec. The deceased was a married man and left a large family.

An entertainment was given at the Y.W.C.A. last night for the benefit of the furnishing fund. A novel feature was the comedietta "The Peak Sisters," in which twelve young ladies in quaint garb gave amusing dialogue and songs. There was a large attendance.

Tenders Once Again Asked For

The Board of Works has again issued bills calling for tenders for sewer work on Rubidge and Perry streets. Twice previously tenders were asked for, and both times the bids were too high. It has been decided this time to reduce the size of the sewer, making it a nine-inch pipe. Tenders must be in by 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon, and the work must be completed this season.

Deafness is Curable!

Sufferers from impaired hearing will be glad to know that their affliction is probably not due to any organic defect in the ear, but results probably from a thickening of the lining of the middle ear caused by catarrhal inflammation. Hundreds of perfect recoveries as the result of the inhalation of Catarrhozone are reported, and on the highest authority we recommend this treatment to our readers. Catarrhozone quickly restores lost hearing, and its efficiency is placed beyond dispute by the case of Mrs. Foxall, of St. Thomas, who recovered perfect hearing by using Catarrhozone after years of deafness. Price $1. At druggists or by mail from Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

—The Times had a pleasant call from Mr. C. H. Creighton, an old newspaper man, who has recently purchased the Seaforth Sun.

—Mr. W. E. Brooks, Young's Point, was in town yesterday, and was in his usual happy spirits. Billy says that his hunting party secured the limit of deer this year.

—Mr. O. M. Paterson, ledger-keeper at the Canadian Bank of Commerce, has received notice of transfer to the Belleville branch. As an officer of the 57th, a member of the rugby club, and an all-round social favorite, Mr. Paterson will be much missed. Mr. Jack Erskine, of the Toronto branch of the bank, will be his successor. Mr. Erskine is already well and favorably known in Peterborough, having formerly lived in Ashburnham.

PRETTY HOME WEDDING

Nuptials of Miss Emma Hubbell and Mr. D. H. Williamson

A very pretty home wedding took place at the residence of Mr. John Williamson, Water street, on the evening of the 20th instant, when his eldest son, David Henry, was married to Miss Emma Hubbell, of Dummer. The ceremony was witnessed by a small company of near relatives of the contracting parties, who made the bride the recipient of some handsome and useful presents. The nuptial knot was tied by the Rev. H. Mackinght, B.A. After a delicious supper the company dispersed.

THE CLACHAN SPLORE

Hon. Senator Kerr to Deliver an Address in the Opera House

The committee in charge of the great Clachan Splore or Scotch merrymaking, which is to take place in the Opera House here on Thanksgiving day, afternoon and evening, are pleased to announce that Hon. Senator Kerr, of Cobourg, has kindly consented to be present at the evening entertainment and deliver a twenty minutes' address on "The day an' a' wha honor it."

Our citizens who have had the pleasure of hearing Senator Kerr, know what a treat there is in store for those who attend. He is one of the most eloquent speakers in the Dominion, and will handle the subject in a way that cannot but delight the "brither Scot."

TURKEYS PLENTIFUL

The Export Business Has Been Small and the Supply is Good

Turkeys will be plentiful and moderate prices will prevail for Thanksgiving, said Mr. John Kincaid to a Times representative yesterday.

Probably the existence of turkeys in large quantities is due to the fact that this year there are not nearly so many being exported. One large Toronto firm that exported 60,000 last year is sending but one-third of that number this year, owing to the lack of cold storage system. One dealer said there were any amount of turkeys in the country, and around Thanksgiving, according to the present prospects, they would be cheap. Weather conditions might affect to some extent the prices. The wholesale price to-day was eight cents a pound, with a little higher for fancy. Retail prices for turkeys range from nine to ten cents a pound, or a little higher. Another large dealer said there would be any amount of turkeys for Thanksgiving, but as yet they were not very fat, but each week the quality becomes better. Last year, according to one dealer, many lost money on shipments to Europe, and this, in a measure, accounts for the abundance of the feathered beauties. There is an abundance of other poultry as well

POLICE COURT

At the police court yesterday morning Ed. Renton was charged with having wilfully destroyed a fence belonging to Mrs. Ragan on Water street, north. Mrs. Ragan did not put in an appearance in time to prove her case and the charge was dismissed. Wm. Heffernan was fined $2 and costs, amounting to $4.00 in all, for being drunk and disorderly.

FIXED THE MINISTER.

And He Needed Looking After.

"In a minister's family in Los Angeles where I was visiting sometime ago, the wife complained of serious indigestion and dyspepsia. She admitted that she used coffee and said she never had believed that was the trouble. I told her that I knew it was the trouble, for I had gone through with the experience myself and had only been cured when I left off coffee and took up Postum Food Coffee.

She said she had tried the Postum, both for herself and her husband, but they did not like it. With her permission, I made Postum next morning myself, and boiled it full fifteen minutes after the real boiling of the pot began. Then when it was served, it was a rich, deep brown color and had the true flavor and food value that every Postum maker knows. It is all folly to talk about trying to make Postum with one or two minutes' steeping.

You can't get something good for nothing. It must be boiled, boiled, boiled, and to keep it from boiling over, use small lump of butter, perhaps twice the size of a pea. That morning the minister and his wife liked Postum so well that their whole lives were changed on the question of diet and they abandoned coffee at once and for all time.

Now after a hard day's work, they are comforted, refreshed and rested by a cup of well-made Postum for supper. They are both enthusiastic in its praise. The wife had entirely recovered from her dyspepsia. I will not go into the details of my own case, except to say that I was a desperate sufferer with dyspepsia and discovered by leaving off coffee that coffee was the cause of it. I quickly got well when I took up Postum Food Coffee. I earnestly hope many more coffee drinkers may get their eyes open." Name and address given by Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., Battle Creek, Mich.

THE DAN SPENCE MEMORIAL

It Will Take the Form of a Free Ambulance To be Maintained by the Town

The long-pending question of the disposal of the Dan Spence Memorial Fund was definitely settled at last night's meeting of the subscribers. The fund will be used to buy an ambulance.

Mayor Denne, as chairman of the committee, stated the object of the meeting and called for expressions of opinion.

Mr. R. E. Layfield, of the Canadian General Electric Company, stated that a canvass had been made of the 300 subscribers who are connected with the Electric Works and who contributed nearly one-third of the fund, and 95 per cent. of these subscribers were in favor of the money being used for the purpose for which it was subscribed, i.e., the purchase of an ambulance, to be called the Dan Spence Memorial Ambulance. He moved that the original committee be discharged and that a new committee be appointed to carry out this purpose.

Mr. James Kendry, M.P., seconded Mr. Layfield's motion. The employees of the Auburn Mills were unanimously desirous that the fund be used for no other purpose. He personally was in favor of an ambulance.

Mr. D. W. Dumble said that an ambulance would be an excellent thing, but in his opinion not suitable to the purpose of commemorating a good and brave man who gave his life for his country. Inasmuch as a private citizen had supplied the town with an ambulance, he believed it would be more appropriate to devote the fund to a monument or tablet. He was ready, however, to coincide with the majority.

Mr. Geo. W. Powell spoke in favor of an ambulance. It would be a breach of trust to use the money for any other purpose.

Mr. C. W. Robertson, of the C. G. E. Co. strongly supported Mr. Layfield's motion. Only about 12 of all the employees of the company were in favor of the memorial taking any other form.

Mr. J. H. Culverwell added his voice to those in favor of an ambulance.

Mr. J. Green thought an ambulance not a fitting memorial. He preferred a monument. He would undertake to raise the fund to $2,000 or $3,000 for that purpose.

Alderman Shortly, speaking as one of the original committee who obtained some subscribers, said it was a mistake to limit the amount to $1 for each subscriber. He could have got very much more but for the limitation. He was in favor of getting an ambulance.

Mr. Kendry said that if the limit were taken off he would subscribe $25 and he believed every other manufacturer would do the same.

Ald. Roger moved that the limit be taken off, and the motion was seconded by Ald. Shortly and carried. Mr. Roger said that good faith required that the fund be used only to buy an ambulance.

Mr. Layfield's motion was put and carried and the following new committee was appointed: Mayor Denne, Ald. Roger, Col. Edwards, Jas. Kendry, M.P., R. E. Layfield, J. H. Smith, D. W. Dumble, Joseph House, C. W. Robertson. Mr. McHarrie continues treasurer of the fund and Mr. S. R. Armstrong secretary of the committee.

Mr. Layfield stated that he had the C. G. E. Co's. cheque for $25 to add to the fund for an ambulance. This, with Mr. Kendry's subscription, makes an immediate increase of $50, and no doubt a vehicle will be procured that will be an ornament and a credit to the town. It will be maintained by the town and subject to call at all hours of day or night for free use.

HUNTING NOTES

—The Lakefield-Young's Point hunting party had a most successful outing this season at Turtle Lake, having secured ten deer. The party consisted of Commodore P. P. Young, C. Young, John Haddison, George and Wm. Baptie and W. E. Brooks.

—The Jeffry's party have returned from the back country, where they had poor luck. They report the deer very scarce in the Long Lake district, but nevertheless they procured a couple and brought them home. Mr. Jeffry invited his fellow workmen of the Canadian General Electric Works to partake of a venison supper, which was greatly appreciated by them. The toast list was a long one. Mr. Jeffry addressed the boys in a manner that did him credit. The evening's enjoyment was brought to a close in the usual manner by singing "He's A Jolly Good Fellow," and "God Save the King."

THE CLACHAN SPLORE.

Tickets for the great Clachan Splore or Scottish merrymaking at the Opera House on Thanksgiving afternoon and evening may be had from the following members of the Committee: F. D. Kerr, Ald. G. M. Roger, Charles Cameron, R. Glover and W. H. Robertson, or from W. Bunton, G.T.R. Ticket Agent, where plan of hall may be seen.

FOR A BEET SUGAR FACTORY

Mayor Denne Briskly Sets the Ball A-Rolling

Mayor Denne deserves credit for his prompt and vigorous action looking toward the establishment of a beet-sugar factory in Peterborough. He has secured the consent of the Warden and members of the County Council, the Reeve and members of the Ashburnham Council, the officers of the Board of Trade and other representative men to meet with the Town Council on the evening of Tuesday, December 3rd, for the purpose of discussing what action may be taken. The president of a beet sugar company will be present and submit conditions under which his company would establish itself in Peterborough. It is to be hoped that practical action will follow the meeting.

How a Sprain Does Hurt!

But it isn't the pain alone that is dreaded, just think of the loss of time and wages. Sprains without number have been cured by rubbing Polson's Nerviline well into the pores of the skin surrounding the joint. No matter whether it is a sprained wrist, ankle, knee or back, just try Nerviline on it, and see how quickly it will cure. There is only one liniment that can be depended upon to cure sprains, strains and swellings, and that is Polson's Nerviline. Large bottle 25 cents.

"I'd rather be dead than suffer again the tortures of insomnia, palpitation and nervous twitching of my muscles induced by simple neglect of a little indigestion." These are the forceful and warning words of a lady who proclaims that her cure by South American Nervine when everything else had failed was a modern miracle. A few doses gives relief.—93

Diamonds

Diamonds are the most interesting of all jewels. They've figured in history, poetry and song. They've linked hearts together, provided ready money, and are to-day what they have been in all ages of the world's history—the most precious and beautiful ornaments. Nothing more acceptable or economical as a gift to one's self or one's friend. Diamonds are always worth their money, especially if you buy them from us, and there is no reason for paying more than our moderate price.

A TOWN DAM.

Application Made for Dam No. 4 on the Otonabee River.

Mayor Denne and Ald. Roger and Best waited on the Minister of Railways in regard to Dam No. 4, above Nassau, and asked that the power privileges on this dam be surrendered to the town. It is urged that the control of power by the town would be a valuable adjunct to the industrial development of the place, and would be a most effective safe-guard against any such thing as a power monopoly, which is said, to be looming up boldly in the horizon.

The Minister gave the deputation to understand that the matter would be arranged satisfactory to the corporation.

FRAZERVILLE.

—Our waiting room is getting into shape for its winter use now. If we may judge by the numbers waiting for the train this week we may suppose it will soon be needed. Another event may however, have some effect on the waiters. It is yet to be seen what, and how strong attractions may tend to lessen the numbers availing themselves of this waiting room. On Monday evening we observed a large load of sundries passing southward, betokening a change of residence. We marked some boxes, stove and stove-pipes, etc. In fact it reminded us of all the things Johnny was to care for in "The Road to Mauro"—umbrella, bandbox, parasol and fishing rod, or the Irishman's shanty, milk sacks, pigs, etc. We learn that it was the flitting of a Mr. Richardson, who has purchased the Monaghan hotel. There are some who think he would have done as well to have remained a Peterborough cater.. He has started a current of speculation. Tuesday morning another flitting was observed northward bound, and this is supposed to have gone to the place from whence our new-comer hailed, the famous Peterborough town.

—Mr. Howson, agent for the Binder Twine Co., of Peterborough, or The Canada Cordage and Manufacturing Company, Limited, is working in our neighborhood. Our people have faith in both the man and the town, also in the new company, and Mr. Howson promises to do business. Why not? There seems to be room for a good company of the kind.

—A number of the people here got trees recently from the A. G. Hull & Sons, St. Catharines Nursery, and are delighted with the stock. The Messrs. Hull will probably hear from this place again, and Mrs. Waterman, to whom indirectly we owe the privilege of getting the trees, as we did, will not be forgotten by the neighbors. It was an exceptional chance such as may not come this way for some time.

—The Ruby was again an attraction between weeks. Just about as bright as ever.

—Mr. Spafford, elocutionist, cartoonist, etc., is expected to give entertainments here, at Bailieboro, and at Bensfort next week. Mr. Steele hopes that his people may enjoy a rich treat.

—This week will possibly wind up the grain threshing in this neighborhood, at all events "the sound of the thresher is heard in the land."

SOME POSITIVE PROOFS

What is Being Told of Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills—No Cure No Pay.

Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills cured me of kidney trouble of many years' standing, and after I had tried every other known remedy. Joseph Begley, Caledonia ave., Rochester, N.Y.

I was afflicted with rheumatism so badly at times that I could not walk. Nothing I took did me much good, until I tried Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills. Five boxes cured me entirely.

I had the misfortune to have suffered some years ago from paralysis, sustaining no less than three strokes. I could get nothing to do me any good until I was induced to try Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills. I took nine boxes, and although not by any means well, I think I am in a fair way to recovery. I can now walk with the aid of a stick and feel myself getting better every day. M. F. Mann, Merlin, N.Y.

Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills permanently cured me of backache. I suffered for years, and took two boxes. That is a year ago. I have not had a symptom since. James H. Jackson, Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.

I do not believe there is a medicine to compare with Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills. They cured me of indigestion and catarrh of the stomach, after nine years' suffering. H. S. Macdonald, G.T.R. shops, Montreal.

Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills are a positive and certain cure for la grippe, rheumatism, asthma, paralysis, catarrh, eczema, coughs, backache, indigestion, all stomach and liver troubles, female complaints, even when the disease have been standing for many years, the most stubborn cases will yield. Price 50 cents per box. For sale by Ormond & Walsh. The Canada Chemical Company will forfeit $15 for any case that these pills do not cure.

Dr. Clarke's Sure Cure for Catarrh, and Dr. Clarke's Sure Cure for Eczema, same price. $10 will be paid for any case they will not permanently cure.

THE MANITOBA PROHIBITION LAW HELD TO BE VALID

Privy Council Decides Famous Liquor Appeal

Province of Manitoba was Justified in Passing a Prohibitory Law

How Hugh John Macdonald Introduced Prohibition and His Law Argued in Court

London, Nov. 22.—In the appeal case of the Attorney-General of Manitoba versus the Manitoba License-Holders' Association, the Privy Council has decided that the Legislature of Manitoba had jurisdiction to enact Hugh John Macdonald's Prohibition Law.

The hopes of the Prohibitionists of Canada were dashed when Premier Laurier refused to bring in legislation in a line with the plebiscite. He said that the vote did not justify the Government in passing a prohibition law for the whole Dominion. The people of Manitoba, however, took heart again and called on the Government to pass a prohibitory law for the Prairie Province. Great pressure was brought to bear on the political leaders. Hugh John Macdonald was leader of the Conservative Opposition at the time and he promised the people that if they would defeat the Greenway Government and return his party to power that he would bring in the law for the whole Dominion. The prohibition question formed a leading issue in the election. Hugh John Macdonald was successful at the polls. When established in the place of power he was as good as his word. The Government appointed Mr. Aikens K.C., of Winnipeg, to draft a prohibitory bill, which was introduced into the Manitoba Legislature and passed. Then the liquor dealers of the Province raised the question of the constitutionality of the new law. Was it in the power of the Province to pass such a law? The Manitoba License-Holders' Association determined to carry the case to the highest courts. The Manitoba Government submitted the case to the Queen's Bench of Manitoba, as to whether the law was constitutional or not. The new law was attacked on two grounds; first by the license-holders on the ground that the Dominion alone had the right to pass such a law; secondly, by the Hudson's Bay Company, on the ground that when territory was transferred to Canada the rights of trading were reserved to them and that the new law interfered with these rights, as the company was licensed to sell liquor.

AGAINST THE LAW.

The Manitoba court decided against the validity of the law, chiefly on the ground that it interfered with the trade in liquor between Manitoba and the other Provinces of the Dominion and other countries, and was consequently beyond the power of the local Legislature. But this decision did not daunt the Prohibition party in the Province. The Manitoba Government also stood by its law and carried the case to the Supreme Court in the Kingdom, the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. The case was argued before the committee on July 10th, 11th, and 13th. Attorney-General Campbell of Manitoba and R. B. Haldane, K.C., M.P., defending the prohibitory law, and Hon. Edward Blake appearing for the Manitoba License Holders' Association. The name of the law in discussion was the Liquor Act of 1900. When the Manitoba Legislature passed the law the liquor sellers were given a certain length of time to dispose of their stock and retire from the business. The law was to have come into force on May 1st of this year, but owing to the case being carried to the Privy Council, a proclamation was issued suspending the Act until the Privy Council handed down their judgement. The Privy Council reserved judgement in July, and rendered their decision today, a decision which has just come in time to enable the prohibitionists of Manitoba to celebrate Thanksgiving Day with great enthusiasm.

JAPAN'S POSTAL SERVICE

Representative in Montreal Studying Canadian Methods

Montreal, Nov. 22— Japan is studying Canadian postal methods. A representative of the Mikado's Government is now in Montreal, looking for information as to postal matters. He is Mr. D. Aoki, and besides the Canadian system, he will look into the United States' methods of handling mails, and will afterwards study the English and Continental postal systems. He visited the C. P. R. telegraph headquarters to-day and was given all information by Mr. Kent, manager of C. P. R. telegraphs.

Not Convenient to See Him

One of the Times' canvassers had an amusing example of suspicion the other day while canvassing in a certain district. He was working in a tenement. He knocked at a door, and after considerable time the door was pushed open a crack and he felt himself being carefully scrutinized. Evidently the result was not unfavorable, for presently a feminine voice queried:

"Wot do you want?"

"Is your man in?" inquired the canvasser, politely.

"Vot you want of my man?"

The Times' man explained that he wished to talk with her husband, if he would see him.

"Vot you talk to my man about?" the wife questioned doubtfully.

The canvasser explained that he wished to talk about this great family journal. A look of intense relief passed over the woman's face.

"You can't talk with him," she explained.

"Why?" asked the visitor impatiently.

"Because," she explained with a benign smile, "he's dead."

Will Premier Ross Redeem His Pledge?

Toronto, Nov. 22.—The attitude of Mr. Ross on the prohibition question will now excite keen interest.

Premier Ross, when interviewed this morning, could say nothing; he stated that he could make no announcement until he had given the question due consideration.

Prominent temperance workers in Toronto, however, are quite confident that Mr. Ross will keep the promise that he made to the large deputation that waited upon him last March, when he assured the prohibitionists that he would adhere to Sir Oliver Mowat's policy. As Mr. Spence points out, the Mowat pronouncement was for prohibition to the fullest extent when the laws would allow.

Mr. F. S. Spence, Secretary of the Dominion Alliance, said this morning that the decision of the Privy Council would be hailed with satisfaction by temperance workers in every part of the Dominion. "It will," said he, "give a definiteness to their work, and its objects. Lately the uncertainity as to the power of a Province coupled with the direct refusal of the Dominion Parliament to enact a prohibitory law, has interfered with agitation and campaign efforts. The result will probably be increased activity among the prohibitionists in every Province except Quebec.

ENTIRE PROHIBITION.

"The Manitoba Act, sustained by this decision, entirely prohibits the sale of liquor for beverage purposes in the Province. Sale is permitted for scientific, sacramental, and industrial purposes, to be made only by licensed druggists, who are placed under rigid restrictions. The law does not interfere with the manufacture of liquor in Manitoba for export or for sale to other Provinces. It was prepared with great care, with the view of being as comprehensive as the fullest expected powers of the Province would warrant.

"This decision also practically affirms the validity of the Prince Edward Island prohibitory law, and will no doubt govern the decision shortly to be given by the Supreme Court of Prince Edward Island as to the constitutionality of that measure.

"A vote was taken in the Province of Ontario in January, 1894. At the municipal elections of 1894 the following question was submitted to all persons qualified for the Legislative Assembly, or Municipal Council: "Are you in favor of the immediate prohibition by law of the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage?"

The votes polled on this question were as follows:

"Following this vote a deputation waited upon the Government to urge the enactment of a prohibitory law and to that deputation Sir Oliver Mowat, the then Premier, made the following statement:

"If the decision of the Privy Council should be that the Province has the jurisdiction to pass a prohibitory liquor law as respects the sale of intoxicating liquor, I will introduce such a bill in the following session, if I am then at the head of the Government.

"If the decision of the Privy Council is that the Province has jurisdiction to pass only a partial prohibitory bill as the decision will warrant, unless the partial power is so limited as to be ineffective from a temperance standpoint.

"At that time certain questions had been submitted to the Courts by the Dominion Government for the purpose of ascertaining the extent of Provincial jurisdiction in regard to the question of prohibition. And the validity of a local option law was constitutional, but made some objection to answering academical questions about possible powers not embodied in actual legislation, and stated that answers to such questions were to be deducted from the argument in the somewhat extensive judgment in which they upheld the local option law. When this decision was rendered the Ontario Government claimed that it did not definitely state that a province had prohibitory power.

POWER OF THE GOVERNMENT.

"There can now be no doubt as to the power of the Ontario Government and Legislature. Hon. Mr. Hardy, when Premier, and Hon. Mr. Ross in March last, stated that the Government adhered to Sir Oliver Mowat's position that it is a temperance Government, has taken and will take no backward step; in fact has given temperance workers to understand that he can be relied upon to carry out the policy declared by Sir Oliver Mowat.

"A great many temperance people will now be better pleased that Mr. Ross cordially and fully accepted Sir Oliver Mowat's pledge than they would be had he made a personal statement in some different form, as some members of the deputation that waited upon him last March desired."

J. S. ROBERTSON'S VIEW.

Mr. J. S. Robertson, president of the Canadian Temperance League, interviewed in regard to the decision, said: "I suppose that the decision on the Manitoba law practically fixes the status of prohibitory legislation for the provinces. So far as the decision permits the people of Manitoba to go in the matter of prohibition, I think that we should certainly expect the Government of this province to go fully as far. I believe that that is expected of the Government of Ontario. I think the understanding of the temperance people is that the Ross Government were prepared to give as full prohibitory legislation as the law would permit. This decision, to a considerable extent, settles the questions that have been uncertain. If Manitoba is to have prohibition to the extent of the law passed by the Hugh John Macdonald Government, then Ontario should have as good a law from the Government in power in this province."

REV. DR. GRIFFIN.

Rev. Dr. Griffin, Secretary of the Methodist Superannuation Fund, expressed himself thus:

"The position that the Provincial Government has always taken is that if it were found to be within the jurisdiction of the Legislature to enact a prohibitory law for the Province they would do so. That was the position taken by the Hardy, the Mowat, and the Ross Government, as I understand it. Therefore, we have every reason to expect that we shall have a prohibitory law for this Province in the near future. That is the general impression. Ross himself is a thoroughgoing advocate and leader in temperance work. He is one of the pillars on which we have leaned. There can be no doubt that so far as he is concerned, at all events . . ."

Breaking off in the middle of his temperance, and leaning back, laughing, the Doctor said:

Hard to Match

After a meeting of the members of the Peterborough Poultry Association, held a short time since, there was some small talk, and a gentleman, who happened to come in was heard to say:

"That just reminds me. Speaking of jokes, I think I am as good-natured as any one when I get caught, but a little more than a month ago some of the men at the office played one on me that gives just cause for exasperation, especially as I discovered only that the jokers had me for their victim. One of my hens had gone 'broody,' and a chicken fancier whom I knew well presented me with thirteen eggs from one of his prize hens, all done up neatly in a box. At dinner time while I was out the deed was perpetrated. Innocently I gave those eggs to my boy, with special instructions for setting the hen. That fowl worked faithfully with those eggs, even putting in overtime on some days. Finally when the three weeks were up she began to grow impatient, and would cackle about that nest in a most disturbed fashion, eyeing the eggs suspiciously. She would, however, get on the nest again and patiently await results. Several days ago I went to the hen house to investigate, and a more bewildered fowl than that hen was I never did see. She had as a last resort, and probably in anger, pecked every one of those eggs. The whole lot had been hard-boiled by my fresh office associates, which fact immediately made clear to me why they were all so much interested in that particular hatching."

WEATHER NOTES

Probs: To-day—Fair and decidedly colder, with moderate north to northwesterly winds.

The cold wave that appeared all over the Northwest and Manitoba has at last reached Ontario, and colder weather may be looked for.

AFGHAN RULER BUSY

Reassures the Afridis—Many Refugees Return to Cabul

London, Nov. 22.—A despatch from Allahabad to The Times says Ameer Habib Ullah is busily engaged in state affairs, the period of forty days' mourning for his father having expired.

Replying to a message of condolence on the death of the late Ameer, and of congratulation on his own accession, Habib Ullah has informed the Afridis that he will follow in the footsteps of Abdur Rahman in all things relating to the Afridi position.

Afghan refugees from India are now journeying to Cabul in large numbers, the only those with passports are allowed to pass Jamrud (at the foot of the Khyber Pass).

When the Baby Cries at Night

there is a cause for it. Perhaps it is gas on the stomach, may be cramps or diarrhoea. Don't lose sleep, anticipate such contingencies by always keeping handy a bottle of Polson's Nerviline. Just a few drops in water given inwardly, then rub the little one's stomach with a small quantity of Nerviline, and perfect rest is assured for the night for both mother and baby. You may not need Nerviline often, but when you do need it you need it badly. Get a 25c bottle to-day.

Why Catarrhozone Cures Catarh

It goes to every affected part and kills the germs that keep up the disease condition. Catarrhozone never irritates, but stimulates the mucous lining of the nose, throat and lungs to normal action, and keeps the nasal passages free from offensive discharges. Catarrhozone contains no dangerous drugs or opiates, and is delightfully pleasant certain cure for any form of Catarrh and sells for dollar at druggists, small size 25c. Temperance Men Confident of Ross' Promise.

They Hold That the Premier is Pledged to Introduce Prohibition

F. S. Spence Says That Premier Promised to Stand by Mowat Pronouncement

"Would not there be a hot time if on the eve of election the Government took the position that some years ago a plebiscite was taken in favor of a prohibitory law, and if you are of the same mind still, and prove when the question is again submitted to you at the election, we will pass such a law. It would sweep the country."

REV. DR. BRIGGS.

Rev. Dr. Briggs, the Methodist Book Steward, was inclined to be non-committal. Hon. Mr. Ross, he said, was a good temperance man, and would try to do what he had promised. As a statesman he might find some difficulty in a practical carrying of it out.

The position taken by many Liberals is like that of a prominent Alderman, who when met on the street, said, "The Government will have to carry a prohibitory law at the next session. They are pledged to do so," but when he was told that his opinion would be better to say that the Ross Government would no doubt carry out the pledge they made, whatever that might be.

REV. DR. POTTS.

Rev. Dr. Potts said the result of the appeal was most encouraging to prohibitionists. The next step would be to secure a prohibitory Act in Ontario. The doctor anticipates that the example of Manitoba will be followed by every province in the Confederation, except Quebec.

REV. WM. FRIZZELL.

Rev. Wm. Frizzell expressed his pleasure at the result of the appeal, because it opens the way to provincial prohibition, which will ultimately, he thinks, lead to total prohibition.

POSITION OF PREMIER ROSS.

Mr. T. M. Humble states that on October 1 last, Mr. Ross, Premier of Ontario, made an important statement to him on the question of Provincial prohibition, as representing the Royal Templar Committee on political action. Mr. Humble said that there was a question which he would very much like to ask Mr. Ross, which the Premier might not prefer to answer. Mr. Ross asked for the question to be stated. Mr. Humble said it is this: "Many temperance men claim that in your answers to the prohibition deputation last spring you pledged yourself in the event of favorable decision, on the Manitoba Prohibitory Law, to bring in a bill giving Ontario the fullest measure of prohibition possible, under the Privy Council's decision." Mr. Ross replied with considerable vigor in these words: "I did; that is the promise I will stand by."

At a social function in Mayor Howland's residence on Wednesday evening, Mr Humble, in conversation with Mr. Ross, incidentally referred to the above statement made in October, and the Premier expressed himself in entire accord with what had already been stated and observed emphatically that the Government desired to do what was right with the temperance people.

DAWSON POLICE WERE SUSPICIOUS

They Shadowed a Man Who Finally Disclosed the Plot

TO RUSH THE YUKON POSTS

Then Take Possession of the Country—Expected American Citizens of Yukon to Help Them

Ottawa, Nov. 22.—Official reports of the alleged plot of Fenians to invade the Yukon have been received by the Minister of the Interior. The story of the affair is as follows:

About three weeks ago the police at Dawson, under the direction of Superintendent Woods, shadowed a man whom they deemed a suspicious character. The police got into this man's confidence, and he finally disclosed a plot, which he said had been formed by people at Skaguay and Seattle. The idea was to rush the posts in the lower part of the Yukon and then take possession of the country. The conspirators reckoned upon the American citizens in the Yukon not assisting the Canadian authorities, so that the raid, in their opinion, would be a comparatively easy matter. News of the plot was quickly sent from Dawson to White Horse and the police there soon had under surveillance all suspicious characters. The headquarters of the conspiracy was located in Skaguay, and it was ascertained who the characters associated with it were, and where the papers bearing upon the plot were kept. There was nothing however, to show any overt act of treason to the United States or Canada, and consequently the authorities could not take any proceedings. Canadian officers went down to Skaguay, nevertheless, and consulted with United States officers and concerted action was agreed upon in case of necessity. In the meantime the parties connected with the plot are closely watched.

It appears that information of the conspiracy reached the Government here some time ago, and reinforcements of police were quietly moved up to the Yukon and stationed at White Horse to prevent any movement of freebooters across the border. A Government official stated last night that no respectable Americans were associated with the plot.

Seattle, Wash., Nov. 22.—The Times claims to have in its possession documents and seals of the "Order of the Midnight Sun," the secret society which was organized for the sole purpose of accomplishing the overthrow of Canadian rule in the gold fields.

Ireland is Disaffected

Ottawa, Nov. 22.—Sir Wilfred Laurier, Hon. Clifford Sifton, and Hon. R. W. Scott were among the prominent men who listened to the address of the Irish Nationalist leader, John Redmond, in the Russel Theatre last night. The speaker candidly admitted that the large bulk of the Irish population is disaffected to the present system of English rule, but the granting of free Parliamentary government would tend to obliterate existing differences and help to make the Irish people happy and contented. The Irish party were under an obligation to Canada for the resolution passed by its Parliament in favor of home rule in Ireland. The Irish people would not rest satisfied until they had been conceded a free, representative system of government. "We are also a disaffected people," said the speaker. "We have not arms in our hands, and we have not taken the field against British rule. We are practical men, we are working within the lines of the constitution, and we believe that if we obtain material and moral support from our own race throughout the world, and from the lovers of liberty in every land, we will be strong enough in the near future to obtain the triumph of our cause." Mr. Redmond made a bid for Canadian support in these words:—"Canada has her own matters to attend to, and we don't ask any sacrifice from her. But Canada has to-day a position of power, for reasons I will not touch upon, in the councils of the British Empire, which, I believe, she did not possess when last she spoke upon this question. (Applause.) And I am perfectly convinced of this; that when the moment comes that this matter may be hanging in the balance, if Canada comes forward with a declaration that in her view the cause is just and the means are honorable, and the demand should be granted that the action by her free Parliament will have an enormous influence in the settlement of this question." (Loud cheers).

TWO MAXIM GUNS ARE IN POSITION

Government Guarding Against an Attempt to Invade Yukon

A COUPLE OF SEVEN-POUNDERS

No Fear That There Will be Any Further Developments in the Alleged Conspiracy to Seize the Territory

Ottawa, Nov. 22.—To guard against any attempt to invade the Yukon the force of Mounted Police at White Horse has been increased and a couple of Maxim guns have been placed at advantageous points. At Dawson the authorities have a couple of seven pounders ready in case of an emergency. There are four hundred stand of arms and lots of ammunition available for the local militia, and special police if it is found necessary to equip and arm them. It is not thought, however, that there will be any further developments in the conspiracy to seize the Yukon. A prominent Government official said yesterday: "We have known of this conspiracy for three months past, and have been quietly preparing to checkmate it." The man who disclosed the plot was formerly a grocer in the Western States. The story leaked out when one of our officers went down to Skaguay to consult with the United States authorities. Unfortunately, the ringleader of the whole business escaped with the papers, and is now in Seattle. The plot never had any chance of succeeding, because the individuals behind it were obscure and without means. No respectable Americans lent themselves to the scheme. The bubble has been burst, and I do not think there will be any further attempt to proceed with the conspiracy."

Indians Given Land

Helena, Mont., Nov. 21.—The Indians of the Northwest are taking from the shoulders of President Roosevelt his self-appointed burden of trying to find a solution to the problem of making the Indian a self-sustaining citizen of the United States. President Roosevelt's long residence in the West has made him especially interested in this problem. Washington despatches state that he has been holding long conferences with Indian Commissioner Jones.

Commissioner Jones, like an economical official, is looking at the financial aspect of the situation. He believes that the present annual appropriation of $15,000,000 for the care and maintenance of the various Indian tribes could and should be cut down. He proposes that every Indian be given 160 acres of good agricultural land and told to go it alone. He wishes the President to urge Congress to take action along these lines.

Joins British Army

New York, Nov. 22.—According to the London representative of The Tribune The Standard's South African correspondents are authority for the statement that General Andries Cronje, a brother of the famous Boer leader, now a prisoner in St. Helena, is among the ex-Burghers who are enlisting men against the Boers, and who are taking up arms against their former companions in arms and in favor of the British.

AMERICANS ARE MORE FRIENDLY THAN GERMANS

Chamberlain's Comparisons Are Still Engaging Public Attention

HATRED OF MAJORITY REGARDING BOER WAR

The German Outbreak—German Emperor has Blinded English Eyes as to Doings in the Fatherland.

London, Nov. 22.—The outbreak of anglophobia over the Colonial Secretary's comparison of Germany's mode of waging war in 1870 with the present action of the British army against the Boers is still engaging close public attention. The newspapers take a party view of the question.

Liberal journals reproach Mr. Chamberlain with gaucherie and lack of tact, and couple the reference to the Franco-German war with the "long spoon," and "mind you manners" phrases. The Unionist press describes the Edinburgh passage as a mere commonplace which could be verified by chapter and verse from the official records of the German operations in 1871, and which ought not to have produced resentment. A second letter from Mr. Chamberlain is more judicious than the first, but there is no evidence in the despatches from Berlin, Cologne and Frankfort that German prejudice against Great Britain has been appeared. The same English journals are adding tinder to the flames by making citations from German military histories showing what was done during the final stages of the war with France.

It is certain that the friendship of the German Emperor has blinded English eyes to what has been going on in the fatherland. It has been an open secret to everyone recently travelling in Germany that public feeling was strongly against Great Britain and that the military classes had been markedly contemptuous of British tactics. The German outbreak has suddenly convinced English onlookers that Americans are trustworthy friends. The utterances of the German press are contrasted with the complimentary speeches at the New York Chamber of Commerce dinner. The friendly relations between Great Britain and the United States have reverted to the stage reached at the close of the war with Spain. The settlement of the canal question and reciprocity with Canada and the British West Indies will be hailed with delight by English people.

The Morning Post's Berlin correspondent declares that the agitation is in no wise artificial. He says: "The actual facts are that the demonstrations have been practically spontaneous, and reflect the genuine color of the feeling of aversion and hatred with which an overwhelming majority of the German nation regards the war and the British people." The pro-Boer Daily News, whose hatred of Secretary Chamberlain is on a par with that felt by the Germans, says the hatred the Colonial Secretary has sown so abundantly he has reaped and will reap to a still further measure.

The Times says: "We must beg to remind the Germans that we claim an equal right to guard our own honor and to resent accusations founded upon the most hateful and poisonous calumnies disseminated with a deliberate persistance inexplicable in a friendly community."

THE ROYAL TRAIN

The Train Not to Stop at Peterborough as First Intended

The Canadian Pacific will have the Royal cars Cornwall, York, and Canada on exhibition at Toronto, November 26th and 28th. It will probably pass through Peterborough to-day, on its way to Toronto, when a small fee of 25c. will be charged for admission to the cars, the proceeds from the sale of tickets to be distributed between charitable institutions in Toronto. Tickets can be obtained from the Canadian Pacific ticket agents at Toronto Union Station, where the public will receive full directions as to where the cars will be placed. This will be the only chance the public will have of inspecting these magnificent cars in which their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and York made their memorable trip across Canada. While at Toronto the cars will be open from 9.30 a.m. until 10 p.m.

Big Electric Works.

London, Nov. 21.—The steel works of Bolckow, Vaughan & Co., at Cleveland, one of the largest rail producers in Great Britain, which has been recently securing a number of important rail contracts for British municipal tramways, are about to be equipped with an extensive electric power plant, the contract for which has been awarded to the British Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company.

The installation of the Cleveland works will be one of the most extensive electrical power plants in the United Kingdom. The electric station is to be erected about a mile from the steel works. The cables are to be laid in earthenware troughs filled with bitumen. As far as possible each machine in the steel plant will be operated by a separate motor.

A GRAN' SCOTCH NICHT

The Great Clachan Splore in the Opera House on Thanksgiving Day

The large handsome blue posters are out announcing the celebration of St. Andrew's Day in Peterborough by a grand "Clachan Splore," or Scottish merry-making event in Bradburn's Opera House on the evening of Thanksgiving Day, Thursday, Nov. 28th. The Executive committee who have this anniversary event in hand, have gone to a great deal of expense in providing popular talent and attractions, and they deserve the liberal patronage of all Scotchmen who are more especially interested in "the day and a' wha' honour it," as well as the general public. The list of attractions on the programme are certainly sufficiently varied and versatile to pack the Opera House. Hon. Senator Kerr, of Cobourg, will open the Clachan Splore with a twenty minutes' address. Prof. Sheets' trained class of twenty Highland lassies and laddies will dance all the most fascinating Scotch figures, as well as Spanish dances, cake walks, skirt dances, etc. Prof. McKay, the distinguished humorist and character delineator, will be another strong attraction. Madame Palmina Bonvini, prima donna soprano, from Italy and the prominent concert halls of Europe, will appear twice during the evening. Miss Currie will give select Scottish readings, and a detachment of Highland Pipers, from Toronto, will render a number of national soul-stirring airs on the bag pipes. Come a' the gither!

Jumped from Burning Boat

Kittaburg, Pa., Nov. 22.—Twelve men and one woman—the crew of the steamer Vigilant—were compelled to jump into a burning river and swim for their lives this morning. The boat was owned by the Iron City Sand Company of Pittsburg, and was moored over a natural gas main of the Rock Run Gas Company which crosses the Monongahela River at Clairton.

A break in the main caused gas to bubble up through the water and ignite from the fires under the steamer's boilers. There was an explosion, and the boat was enveloped in fire. Members of the crew were asleep in their births and had to run out in their night clothes.

PETERBOROUGH, NOVEMBER 23, 1901

IN THE YUKON

The reported plot in the Yukon originated and engineered by Fenians, is particularly interesting in view of the demands made upon the owners of that country by these same Fenians for encouragement and help. A good deal of money has been contributed by Canadian believers in Irish Home Rule, and for Irishmen to requite this generosity by attacking Canada, is, to say the least, ungrateful. Perhaps they do not know that we have any rights, or it may be that they think we have done all we are going to do, and must now be bled by the knife and bullet? The resolution moved and carried with much show and circumstance in the House of Commons at Ottawa some years ago, reads oddly in view of Fenian attempts on Canada. Why do not Irishmen repudiate these ill-mannered and ungrateful recipients of Canadian bounty? They have never done so, however, and must be judged by the company they keep. In the meantime we would advise the Fenians to begin their attacks on England in some easier place. It will save trouble.

INVASION FROM THE SOUTH

Eighteen thousand settlers from the United States found homes in Canada this year, and an officer of the Immigration Department expects fully 100,000 immigrants of that class next year, the advantages of Manitoba and the Northwest now being well understood by homeseekers in the neighboring country. A good many of these settlers are of Canadian stock, the men or the sons of men who left Canada for the Western States years ago, but have not found the conditions as good as they had hoped. But a percentage of the immigrants will be men who have had nothing to do with Canada in the past, yet their coming is awaited without any apprehension. There is no reason for fear. The front counties of Upper Canada were very largely settled by men from the United States, including down-east Yankees, Albany and Pennsylvania Dutchmen, Tunkers, Mennonites and others. For a short time after the war of 1812-14, protests were heard against permitting "aliens" to acquire land in the country, but it was soon found that the new-comers developed into good Canadian citizens, willing to work hard and improve their property, even if they did not shout "God Save the King" quite as heartily as some of their neighbors. So it will be in the Northwest. With good government, moderate taxation, fair railway facilities, cheap land, and bountiful harvests, the settlers from the United States will be well content, and they will waste no time devising schemes of annexation. If they were foolish enough to try that game they could not make it work, but they won't try. But their industry will give profits to the railways and will help to keep the manufacturers of the older Provinces employed.

NORWOOD.

—Mrs. Dr. Alger, of Stirling, spent a few days in town last week the guest of Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Cuff.

—Mr. W. Ross Cameron spent Sunday in Peterborough.

—A meeting of all interested in hockey has been called for Wednesday evening at the McGregor House for the purpose of re-organizing the club for the coming season. The committee which was appointed sometime ago to interview the Rink Company, re having the sides of the rink boarded up did so with the result that men are now at work putting the rink in good shape. Now that the rink is being put in proper shape, Norwood people may expect to see some good matches this winter, and it is hoped that they will give our hockey boys liberal support.

—The Rev. J. A. McDonald, who about seven years ago occupied the pulpit of the Presbyterian church for three months during the illness of the late Rev James Carmichael, was in town on Saturday renewing old acquaintances.

—Mr. J. G. Sherry was in Peterborough on Tuesday.

—Mr. Jas. Robb, of Stony Lake, was in town to-day.

HASTINGS.

—Rev. J. P. [illegible] has been confined to the house through illness during the past week, but we are pleased to hear that he is [illegible].

—Messrs. J. Gallagher, J. Walsh and [illegible] visited [illegible] last Sunday.

—Our local sports have all returned from their sojourn in the back country. They report a good time and a number of "thrilling" experiences.

—What is the matter with Hastings having an open air rink this winter. Surely it ought to be a safe undertaking in a place like this where there are so many skaters and curlers. Let us hear from somebody.

—Mrs. D. [illegible], one of the oldest and most respected citizens of this town, died on Tuesday after an illness of a few days. The funeral took place on Wednesday and was a very large one.

—Shooting matches are being held quite often in this vicinity, but are not patronized as well as in other years.

—A number of the surrounding farmers were out ploughing today.

—There is a good demand for wood in town just at present, but very little is being brought in.

—The steamer Rainbow brought down a load of grain from Rice Lake on Saturday for Messrs. H. M. Fowlds & Son. Captain Copperwaith reports rough stormy weather on the Lake.

—The concert given in the town hall last Thursday evening was a decided success. Mr. [illegible] was highly appreciated by all those present, receiving a hearty applause to all the selections given.

—Mr. Frank Burnett, proprietor of the lumber mills on Rice Lake, was in town on Saturday.

—Mr. H. M. Lent, who has been relieving Mr. C. P. Fisher, as G.T.R. agent for the past two weeks, has been transferred to Orillia.

—Mr. T. F. Learmouth who is at present attending the Norwood High school, spent Sunday under the parental roof.

—A grand Thanksgiving dinner and concert will be given in the town hall on Thursday evening, 28th Nov., under the auspices of the Methodist church. The concert will consist of vocal and instrumental music, songs, choruses, and short addresses by resident Ministers, which will without doubt make the evening one of unusual interest and enjoyment.

—Mr. Thos. Blezard, M.P.P., was in town on Saturday.

—Anniversary sermons will be preached in the Methodist church on November 24th, both morning and evening by the Rev. T. C. Hall, of Havelock. The collections taken will be in aid of the Trust Fund.

—Mr. C. Kirk, formerly of Norwood, and recently of Deseronto, has been engaged by Dr. M. E. Wilson, dentist, here, as assistant.

—Messrs. W. A. Wilson, P. Elmhirst and A. B. Spellman returned last Saturday from the hunting grounds with six fine deer.

—Mr. James Whitton, of Belleville, was in town on Saturday looking after a large shipment of cheese.

YOUNG'S POINT.

—The cheese factory here closed two weeks ago

—The steamers Majestic and Sunbeam are still towing wood from the north and will continue with this work until the lake freezes.

—The hunters have returned from their outing well satisfied with their luck.

—We have had a foretaste of winter, but the roads are in excellent condition for this season of the year.

—Mr. Samuel Nugent's family is very ill at present, we hope they will soon recover.

Eyes Test d Free

Prof. J. H. De Silberg, the celebrated eye specialist from Germany, will be in Hastings from Friday, November 29th, until Saturday, November 30th, at the Coughlin House parlors; in Norwood on Monday, December 2nd, until Wednesday, December 4th, at Dr. Moffatt's Drug Store; in Keene on Thursday, December 5th, until Saturday, December 7th, at Dr. Harrison's Office; and in Lakefield on Monday, December 9th, until Wednesday, December 11th, at Dr. Burgess's Drug Store. His Wife's Weak Heart.

It is a singular thing that in the popular view of disease the interdependence of the several organs of the body is lost sight of. The heart, for example, is diseased and it is treated as if it were entirely separated from, and independent of, every other organ.

The fallacy of this opinion is shown by the cures of heart "trouble," liver "trouble," kidney "trouble" and other so-called "troubles," effected by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Primarily the "Discovery" is a medicine for the cure of diseases of the stomach and blood. But it cures diseases of organs seemingly remote from the stomach, because these diseases have their origin in a diseased condition of the stomach and its associated organs of digestion and nutrition.

"I doctored with three different doctors for weak heart, but they did me no good," writes Mrs. Julia A. Wilcox, of Cygnet, Wood Co., Ohio, Box 52. "I was so tired and discouraged if I had had my choice to live or die I would have preferred to die. My husband heard of 'Golden Medical Discovery' and he bought a bottle. I took that and the first half seemed to help me. I took six bottles before I stopped. I am perfectly well, and am cooking for six boarders. It has been a God-send to me."

"MATT."

A TALE OF A CARAVAN

time before the period of his present excursion, when he was studying law in Dublin, and rapidly discovered that he loved artistic amateurship much better, he had often been known to work terribly hard at 'cases' in which his curiosity was aroused; and I may add in passing that he had shown on these occasions an amount of shrewdness which would have made him an excellent lawyer, if his invincible objection to hard work, had not invariably interfered.

No sooner was he left to his own meditations, which the faithful Tim (who had fortunately been away on a foraging expedition during the episode described in my last chapter) was not at hand to disturb, than our young gentleman began puzzling his brains over the curious information she had given him. The facts, which he had no reason to question, ranged themselves under four heads:

(1) Matt had been cast ashore fifteen years previously, at an age when she could pronounce the word "Papa." It followed, as a rational argument, that she had been, say one year old, or thereabouts.

(2) Mr. Monk had found her and given her into the care of William Jones, and had since handed that worthy sums of money for taking care of her. Query, What reason had the said Monk for exhibiting so much care for the child, unless he was a person of wonderfully benevolent disposition, which my hero was not at all inclined to believe?

(3) Said Monk and said Jones were on very familiar terms, which was curious, seeing the difference in their social positions. Query again. Was there any private reason, any mysterious knowledge, any secret shared in common, which bound their interests together?

(4) Last and most extraordinary of all, said Monk had now expressed his wish and intention of marrying the waif he had rescued from the sea, committed to the care of said Jones, and brought up in ragged ignorance, innocent of grace or grammar, on that lonely shore. Query again, and again, and yet again, What the deuce had put the idea into Monk's head and was there at the bottom of it any deeper and more conceivable motive than the one of ordinary affection for a pretty, if uncultivated, child?

The more Charles Brinkley pondered all these questions, the more hopelessly puzzled he became. But his curiosity, once roused, could not rest. He determined, if possible, to get to the midriff of the mystery. So intent was he on this object, which fitted in beautifully with his natural indolence, that he at once knocked off painting for the day and after breakfasting on the fare with which Tim had by this time appeared, he strolled away toward the sea-shore.

He had not gone far when he saw approaching him a tall figure which he seemed to recognise. It came closer, and he saw it was Mr. Monk of Monkshurst.

This time Monk was on foot. He wore a dark dress, with knickerbockers, and heavy shooting boots, and carried a gun. A large dog, of the species lurcher, followed at his heels.

Brinkley was passing by without any salutation, when to his surprise the other paused and lifted his hat.

"I beg your pardon," he said. "We have met once before; and I think I have to apologise to you for unintentional incivility. The fact is —hum —I mistook you for a— vagrant! I did not know you were a gentleman."

So staggered was the artist with this greeting, that he could only borrow the vocabulary of Mr. Toots:

"Oh, it's of no consequence," he said, attempting to pass on.

But the other persevered.

"I assure you, Mr. —Mr. —(I have not the pleasure of knowing your name) that I had no desire of offending you; and if I do, I beg to apologise."

Brinkley looked keenly at the speaker. His words and manner were greatly at variance with his looks —even with the tone of his voice. Though he smiled and showed his teeth, a dark frown still disfigured his brow, and his mouth twitched nervously as if he were ill at ease.

Regarding him thus closely, Brinkley saw that he had been somewhat mistaken as to his age. He was considerably under fifty years of age, but his hair was mixed with gray, and his features strongly marked as with scars of old passions. A handsome man, certainly; an amiable one, certainly not! Yet he had a peculiar air and power of breeding, as of one accustomed to command.

Curiosity overcame dislike, and the young man determined to receive Mr Monk's overture as amiably as possible.

"I dare say it was a mistake," he said. "Gentlemen don't usually travel about in caravans."

"You are an artist, I am informed," returned Monk.

"Something of that sort," was the reply. "I paint a little for pleasure."

"And do you find this neighborhood suit your purpose? It is somewhat flat and unpicturesque."

"I rather like it," answered Brinkley. "It is pretty in summer; it must be splendid in winter, when the storms begin, and the uneventful career of our friend William Jones is varied by the excitement of wrecks."

How Monk's forehead darkened. But his face smiled still as he said:

"It is not often that shipwrecks occur now, I am glad to say."

"No," said Brinkley, dryly. "They used to be common enough fifteen years ago."

Their eyes met, and the eyes of Monk were full of fierce suspicion.

"Why fifteen years ago especially?"

The young man shrugged his shoulders.

"I was told only to-day of the loss of one great ship at that time. Matt told me, the little foundling. You know Matt, of course?"

"I know whom you mean. Excuse me, but you seem to be very familiar with her name?"

"I suppose I am," replied the young man. "Matt and I are excellent friends."

Monk did not smile now; all his efforts to do so were ineffectual. With an expression of savage dislike he looked in Brinkley's face, and his voice, though the words were still civil, trembled and grew harsh "as scrannel pipes of straw."

"May I ask if you purpose remaining long in the neighborhood."

"I don't know," answered the artist. "My time is my own, and I shall stay as long as the place amuses me."

"If I can assist in making it do so, I shall be happy, sir."

"Thank you."

"Do you care for rabbit-shooting? If so, there is some sport to be had among the sand-hills."

"I never shoot anything," was the reply, "except I suppose, 'folly as it flies,' though with what species of fire-arm that interesting sport is pursued," he added, as if to himself, "I haven't the slightest idea!"

"Well, good-day," said Monk, with an uneasy scowl. "If I can be of any service to you, command me!"

And, raising his hat again, he stalked away.

"Now, what in the name of all that is wonderful, does Mr. Monk, of Monkshurst, mean by becoming so civil?"

This was the question the young man asked himself, as he strolled away seaward. He could not persuade himself that he had wronged Monk who was in reality an amiable person, instead of a domineering bully, so that suggestion was contradicted by every expression of the man's baleful and suspicious face. What then, could be the explanation of his sudden attack of courtesy?

An idea! an inspiration! As it flashed into his mind, the young man gave vent to a prolonged whistle. Possibly, Monk was —jealous!

The idea was a preposterous one and almost amusing. It was not to be conceived on the first blush of it that jealousy would make a surly man civil, a savage man gentle; it would rather have the contrary effect, unless —here Brinkley grew thoughtful —unless his gloomy rival had some sinister design which he wished to cloak with politeness.

But jealous of little Matt! Brinkley laughed heartily, when he fully realized the absurdity of the notion.

He crossed the sand-hills and came again to the path which he and Matt had followed the previous day. Reaching the cliffs, he descended them, and came down on the rocks beneath. A long jagged point ran out from the spot where he stood, and the water to leeward of the same was quite calm, though rising and falling in strong troubled swells. So bright and tempting did it look in that sheltered place, that he determined to have a swim.

He stripped leisurely, and, placing his clothes in a safe place, took a header off the rocks. It was clear at once that he was a powerful swimmer. Breasting the smooth swell, he struck out from shore, and, when he had gone about a hundred yards, floated lazily on his back and surveyed the shore.

The cliffs were not very high, but their forms were finely picturesque. A little to the right of the spot from which he had dived, the cliff seemed hollowed out, forming a wide passage which the sea entered with a tramp and a rush and a roar.

Toward this passage Brinkley swam. He knew the danger of such places, for he had often explored them both in Cornwall and the west of Ireland; but he had confidence in his own natatory skill. Approaching the shore leisurely with strong slow strokes, he paused outside the passage, and observed that the sea-swell, entering the opening, rushed and quickened itself like a rapid shooting to the fall, turning at the base of the cliff into a cloud of thin prismatic spray. Suddenly, through the top of the spray, a cloud of rock pigeons emerged, winging their flight rapidly along the crags.

Brinkley knew by this last phenomenon that the spray concealed the entrance of some large subterranean cavern. If any doubt had remained on his mind, it would have been dispelled by the appearance of a solitary pigeon, which leaving its companions, wavered lightly back, flew back through the spray with a rapid downward flight and disappeared.

He was floating a little nearer with an enjoyment deepened by the sense of danger, when a figure suddenly appeared on the rocks close by him wildly waving its hands.

"Keep back! Keep back!" cried a voice.

He looked at the figure and recognised William Jones. He answered him, but the sound of his voice was drowned by the roar from the rocks. Then William Jones shouted again more indistinctly and repeated his excited gestures. It was clear that he was warning the swimmer against some hidden danger. Brinkley took the warning and struck out from the shore, and then back to the place where he had left his clothes.

Watching his opportunity he found a suitable spot and clambered in up on the rocks. He had just dried himself and thrown on some of his clothes, when he saw William Jones standing near and watching him.

"How are you?" asked the young man, with a nod. "Pray what did you mean by going on in that absurd way just now?"

"What did I mean?" repeated William, with a little of his former excitement. "Look ye, now, I was waving you back from the Devil's Caldron. There's many a man been drownded there, and been wash'd away, Lord knows where. I've heerd tell," he added solemnly, "they're carried right down into the Devil's own kitchen."

"I'm much obliged to you, Mr. Jones, but I'm used to such dangers and I think I know how to take care of myself."

William Jones shook his head a little angrily.

"Don't you come here no more, that's all!" he said, and muttering ominously to himself, retired. But he only ascended the neighboring crag, and squatting himself there like a bird of ill-omen, kept his eyes on the stranger.

Having dressed himself, Brinkley climbed in the same direction. He found William seated on the edge of the crag, looking the reverse of amiable, and amusing himself by throwing stones in the direction of the sea.

"You seem to know this place well?" said the young man, standing over him.

William Jones replied, without looking up:

"I ought to; I were born here. Father were born here. Know it? I wish I know'd as well how to make my own fortin'."

"And yet they tell me," observed the other, watching him slyly, "that William Jones of Aberglyn has money in the bank and is a rich man!"

He saw William's color change at once; but recovering himself at once the worthy gave a contemptuous grunt, and aimed a stone spitefully at a large gull which just then floated slowly by.

"Who told you that?" he asked glancing quickly up, and then looking down again. "Some tomfool, wi no more sense in 'un than that gull. Rich! I wish I was, I do!"

Brinkley was amused and a little curious. Laughing gayly he threw himself down by William's side. William shifted his seat uneasily, and threw another stone.

"My dear Mr. Jones," said the young man, assuming the flippant style which Matt found so irritating "I have often wondered how you get your living."

William started nervously.

"You are, I believe, a fisherman by profession; yet you never go fishing. You possess a boat, but you are seldom seen to use it. You are not I think of a poetical disposition; yet you spend your days in watching the water like a poet, or a person in love. I conclude, very reluctantly that your old habits stick to you and that you speculate on the disasters of your fellow- creatures."

"What d'ye mean, master?" grunted William, puzzled and a little alarmed by this style of address.

"A nice wreck, now, would admirably suit your taste? A well- laden Indiaman, smashing up on the reef yonder, would lend sunshine to your existence and deepen your faith in a paternal Providence? Eh, Mr. Jones?"

"I don't know nowt about no wrecks," was the reply "They're no consarn o' mine."

"Ah, but I have heard you lament the good old times, when wrecking was a respectable occupation, and when there were no impertinent coast- guards to interfere with respectable followers of the business. By the way, I have often wondered Mr. Jones, if popular report is true and if, among these cliffs or the surrounding sand- hills, there is buried treasure, cast up from time to time by the sea and concealed by energetic persons like yourself?"

William Jones could stand this no longer. Looking as pale as it was possible for so rubicund a person to become, and glancing round him suspiciously, he rose to his feet.

"I know nowt o' that," he said. "If there is summat, I wish I could find it; but seeh things never come the way of honest chaps like me. Good mornin', master! Take a poor man's advice and don't you go swimming no more near the Devil's Caldron!"

So saying, he walked off in the direction of the deserted village. Presently Brinkley rose and followed him, keeping him steadily in view. From time to time William Jones looked round, as if to see whether the other was coming; lingering when Brinkley lingered, hastening his pace when Brinkley hastened his. As an experiment Brinkley turned and began walking back toward the cliffs. Glancing round over his shoulder he saw that William Jones had also turned and was walking back.

"Curious!" he reflected. "The innocent one is keeping me in view I have a good mind to breathe him!"

He struck off from the path and hastened, running rather than walking, toward the sand- hills. So soon as he was certain that he was followed he began to run in good earnest. To his delight William began running too. He plunged among the sand-hills, and was soon engaged busily running up and down them, hither and thither. From time to time he caught a glimpse of his pursuer. It was an exciting chase. When he had been engaged in it for half an hour, and was almost breathless himself, he suddenly paused in one of the deep hollows, threw himself down on his back and lit a cigar. A few minutes afterward he heard a sound as of violent puffing and breathing, and the next instant William Jones, panting, gasping, perspiring at every pore, appeared above him.

"How d'ye do. Mr. Jones?" he cried, gayly. "Come and have a cigar!"

Instead of replying, William Jones looked completely thunder- struck, and after glaring feebly down and muttering incoherently, disappeared as suddenly as he had come.

Brinkley finished his cigar leisurely, and then strolled back to the Caravan.

CHAPTER IX.

A Discovery.

The young man of the Caravan was now thoroughly convinced that one of two things must be true; either that William Jones had been instructed to keep a watch upon him, or that he, William Jones, had a secret of some sort which he was anxious not to have revealed. After both suppositions had been duly weighed, the second was accepted as the most likely; and it forthwith received the young man's consideration.

If there was a secret, he argued, it was in some way connected — firstly, with William Jones' worldly prosperity, secondly, with the reports current of treasure hidden in times past among the sand- hills or the dangerous caverns of the sea. Was it possible, after all, that those reports were true, and that in some mysterious manner Jones had become acquainted with the hiding place? It seemed very improbable for many reasons, one of the chief being the man's extreme poverty, which appeared to touch the very edge of sheer starvation.

A little inquiry in the neighborhood, however, elicited the information that Jones, despite his abject penury, was certainly well-to-do, and had money in the bank of the neighboring market town; that the ruined village of Aberglyn belonged almost entirely to him; and that, in short, he was by nature and habit a miserly person, who would prefer hoarding up whatever he possessed to purchasing with it the commonest necessaries of life.

"Don't you believe him, sir," said this old salt, "if he tells you he's poor. He's a shark, William Jones is, and couldn't own up even to his own father. It's my belief he's got gold hidden somewheres among them sand hills, let alone what he's got in the savings bank. Ah, he's a artful one, is William Jones."

Brinkley had said nothing of his own private suspicions, but had merely introduced in a general way the subject of Jones's worldly position. Further conversation with Tim, who had made a few straggling acquaintances in the district, corroborated the other testimony. The young man be-

A LADY TELLS OF HER CURE BY

PAINES CELERY COMPOUND

Her Condition Before Using the Great Medicine Was So Bad She Could Not Raise Her Hands to Her Head and Could Not Walk.

In the majority of cases, the prime cause of rheumatism is a lack of nerve force. When the nervous system is weakened, the joints swell—usually the knees, elbows and wrists, and there is severe inflammation and suffering. Paine's Celery Compound is the only medicine that can banish the gathering symptoms and permanently cure the most terrible cases of the disease. Thousands of strong testimonials from the people of Canada—many from your near friends and neighbors—prove conclusively that no other medicine possesses such marvellous powers for the cure of rheumatism, sciatica and lumbago. An Orillia, Ont., lady, Mrs. S. W. Sullivan, writes thus:

"Early last autumn I was so badly afflicted with rheumatism that I could not raise my hands to my head, and often could not walk owing to pains and stiffness of joints. At night I rarely slept owing to nervousness and feelings of exhaustion. I commenced to use Paine's Celery Compound, and soon found myself greatly relieved, and after use of first bottle, my pains and nervous feelings were banished. In order to make the cure complete, I used the second bottle of Paine's Celery Compound, and now I am as strong as ever before. I sleep well, appetite is always good, and my digestive vigor all that I could wish for."

Tenders Once Again Asked For

The Board of Works has again issued bills calling for tenders for sewer work on Rubidge and Perry streets. Twice previously tenders were asked for, and both times the bids were too high. It has been decided this time to reduce the size of the sewer, making it a nine-inch pipe. Tenders must be in by 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon, and the work must be completed this season.

Cost 10 Cents—But worth a dollar a vial. This is the testimony of hundreds who use Dr. Agnew's Liver Pills. They are so sure, so pure, so pleasant and easy acting. The demand for this popular Liver Regulator is so great it is taxing the makers to keep up with it.—93

BETWEEN TORONTO AND OTTAWA.

Tenders for Supplies, 1902

The undersigned will receive tenders up to noon on MONDAY, 25th inst., for supplies of butchers' meat, creamery butter, flour, oatmeal, potatoes, cordwood, etc., etc., for the following institutions during the year 1902, viz.:—

At the Asylums for the insane in Toronto, London, Kingston, Hamilton, Mimico, Brockville, Cobourg and Orillia; the Central Prison and Mercer Reformatory, Toronto; the Reformatory for Boys, Penetanguishene; the Institutions for Deaf and Dumb, Belleville, and the Blind at Brantford.

Exception—Tenders are not required for the supply of meat to the asylums in Toronto, London, Kingston, Hamilton and Brockville, nor for the Central Prison and Mercer Reformatory, Toronto.

A marked cheque for five per cent. of the estimated amount of the contract, payable to the order of the Honorable the Provincial Secretary, must be furnished by each tenderer as a guarantee of his bona fides. Two sufficient sureties will be required for the due fulfillment of each contract, and should any tender be withdrawn before the contract is awarded, or should the tenderer fail to furnish such security, the amount of the deposit will be forfeited.

Specifications and forms of tender may be had on application to the Department of the Provincial Secretary, Toronto, or to the Bursars of the respective institutions.

The lowest or any tender not necessarily accepted.

Newspapers inserting this advertisement without authority from the Department will not be paid for it.

J. R. STRATTON,
Provincial Secretary

Parliament Buildings, Toronto, November 11th, 1901.

Sealed tenders, addressed to the undersigned and endorsed "Tender for Alberni-Clayoquot Telegraph," will be received at this office until Tuesday, Dec. 3rd, inclusively, for the supply of telegraph poles for a line from the telegraph office at Alberni, in the County of Vancouver, Province of British Columbia, along the route described, to Clayoquot, a total distance of seventy-five miles, more or less; also for the construction of the above line of telegraph in accordance with the specification.

Specifications can be seen and forms of tender and all necessary information obtained at the office of Mr. Wm. Henderson, Clerk of Works, Victoria, B.C., and at the Department of Public Works, Ottawa.

Contractors are notified that tenders will not be considered unless made on the printed form supplied, and signed with their actual signatures.

An accepted cheque on a chartered bank payable to the order of the Minister of Public Works, equal to ten per cent. of the amount of the tender, must accompany each tender. The cheque will be forfeited if the party decline the contract or fail to complete the work contracted for, and will be returned in case of non-acceptance of tender.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

By order,
FRED. GELINAS,
Secretary.

Department of Public Works, Ottawa, 6th November 1901.

Newspapers inserting this advertisement without authority from the Department will not be paid for it.

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed, "Tender for Observatory, Ottawa, Ont.," will be received at this office until Wednesday, November 27th, inclusively, for the erection of an Observatory building at the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, Ont., according to plans and specification to be seen at the Department of Public Works, Ottawa.

Tenders will not be considered unless made on the form supplied, and signed with the actual signatures of tenderers.

An accepted cheque on a chartered bank, payable to the order of the Minister of Public Works, equal to [illegible] per cent (10 p.c.) of the amount of tender, must accompany each tender. This cheque will be forfeited if the party decline the contract or fail to complete the work contracted for, and will be returned in case of non-acceptance of tender.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

By Order,
FRED GELINAS,
Secretary.

Department of Public Works,
Ottawa, 6th Nov., 1901.

RELIEF.

There is nothing like Asthmalene. It brings instant relief, even in the worst cases. It cures when all else fails.

The Rev. C. F. WELLS, of Villa Ridge, Ill., says: "Your trial bottle of Asthmalene received in good condition I cannot tell you how thankful I feel for the good derived from it. I was a slave, chained with putrid sore throat and Asthma for ten years. I despaired of ever being cured. I saw your advertisement for the cure of this dreadful and tormenting disease, Asthma, and thought you had overspoken yourselves, but resolved to give it a trial. To my astonishment, the trial acted like a charm. Send me a full-size bottle."

NEW YORK, Jan. 3, 1901.

DRS. TAFT BROS.' MEDICINE CO.

Gentlemen: Your Asthmalene is an excellent remedy for Asthma and Hay Fever, and its composition alleviates all troubles which combine with asthma. Its success is astonishing and wonderful.

After having it carefully analyzed, we can state that Asthmalene contains no opium, morphine, chloroform or ether. Very truly yours,

REV. DR. MORRIS WECHSLER.

AVON SPRINGS, N. Y., Feb. 1, 1901.

DR. TAFT BROS. MEDICINE CO.

Gentlemen: I write this testimonial from a sense of duty, having tested the wonderful effect of your Asthmalene, for the cure of Asthma. My wife has been afflicted with spasmodic asthma for the past 12 years. Having exhausted my own skill as well as many others, I chanced to see your sign upon your windows at 130th street, New York. I at once obtained a bottle of Asthmalene. My wife commenced taking it about the 1st of November. I very soon noticed a radical improvement. After using one bottle her asthma has disappeared and she is entirely free from all symptoms. I feel that I can consistently recommend the medicine to all who are afflicted with this distressing disease. Yours respectfully,

O. D. PHELPS, M. D.

DR. TAFT BROS. MEDICINE CO.

Gentlemen: I was troubled with Asthma for 22 years. I have tried numerous remedies but they have all failed. I ran across your advertisement and started with a trial bottle. I found relief at once. I have since purchased your full-size bottle and I am ever grateful. I have a family of four children and for six years was unable to work. I am now in the best of health and am doing business every day. This testimony you can make such use of as you see fit.
